FREDERICK B. KEABLE,
Treasurer.

Rector's Letter.

My dear Parishioners:

The reports of the various committees and societies tell their own tale, and there is little to be said in this editorial. We have closed a year of successful work. Old St. Stephen's Club is more than a parochial enterprise; it is a civic club, but our Church has had such a large share in it, that its success must be a great source of joy to us. At the end of this month, its activities in their present development will cease. It will be necessary to put the Sunday School Building in proper order, and our further work for the enlisted men will be on a smaller scale.

I hope that the Church may be kept open all this summer. I am especially concerned about the evening congregations. Our great musical services several years ago showed that the night services would make a wider appeal and fill a greater need than our afternoon services, and the second service was accordingly changed to 8 o'clock. The transfer has proven a great success, and the attendance at our second service on Sunday is often nearly as large as the morning congregation. I do not want to give this up and shall continue the second service this summer as long as the attendance justifies it. Mr. Keable will take his holiday in June and the first week in July, and will also have the latter part of September. I will officiate four Sundays in June, and the first Sunday in July, and will then leave for my vacation.

For two summers our glorious improvements necessitated the closing of the Church, but this year no repairs will be required for the interior. Our exterior needs much refurbishing. But whatever may be done will not necessitate closing the Church.

The Farm will be opened at the usual date. Mrs. Mink will be the matron in charge. She has had large experience as an administrator and is a loyal and helpful member of our congregation. Of course it will take a little time for her to master all the details. But we are confident that she will succeed and we bespeak for her the hearty support of all concerned.

The Parish Meeting proved in every way a great success. The voters under the Charter asked the contributors to the expenses of the Church to select the vestrymen and agreed to elect their choice. No tickets were prepared. The popularity of the present Vestry was unmistakably manifested by the election of the whole twelve on the first ballot.

The fly in this fragrant ointment was the failure of many men to attend. Instead of 64 votes we should have had 125 votes and the room should have been packed, so that part of the congregation would have to stand on the stairs. So may it be next year.

The report of the Special Committee on Finance showed that the Envelope System has entered on a new phase, and gives large promise. If it is used faithfully, we ought to have no deficit next year, in spite of the high prices. At the end of 3 months, I am going to let the envelope-users know confidentially how their record stands. What with the generous Thanksgiving offering for Victory, our debt has been paid off, and the parish's finances are in good shape. My one regret is that we gave two hundred dollars less than usual to Diocesan Missions—$1100 is desired of us. I deal in round numbers. Last year we gave $900, and this year the amount fell to $700. It is well to help outsiders but we ought to keep up our contributions to these home missionaries in the city. I am open for contributions still, to this cause.

The sympathy of the congregation goes on to Mrs. Reath and her children, and to Mrs. Pancoast, in their great bereavement. The stars shine through their cypress trees. They know that life is ever lord of death, and love can never lose its own. They have been enabled to set a good example to all of us in the way in which they have sought the courts of the Lord's house and not immured themselves in their hours of grief.

Another gold star has been added to our flag. Seth Caldwell Hetherington, Senior First Lieutenant of the 315th Regiment, Co. D., 79th Division, was killed while leading his men in the Argonne Forest, September 28, 1918. He was the grandson of Mrs. Seth Caldwell, one of our oldest parishioners, whose husband was in his time one of our vestrymen. His mother is also one of our members. Lieutenant Caldwell had not been associated with us for years, but we feel that a star for him should be placed on our flag. He made a fine record as a soldier and laid down his life for a great and worthy cuase. Our sympathy goes out to Mrs. Caldwell and Mrs. Hetherington.

Heaven lies about us in our infancy says the poet; but this great war has brought the next world near to young and old alike. In the latter part of the 19th century, the hope of immortality had been weakened among many people through the generalizations of science; but today all the world has been brought to a profound realization of the depth of our intuitive conviction that death is only a transition, and of the necessity for the belief in a hereafter if the universe is to be considered under a moral government. The life everlasting has been made a more important article in our Creed. We assert our belief in it more triumphantly.

May God keep us under His care this summer and reunite us in the autumn with a new spirit of energy, concord and love.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

St. Stephen's Benevolent Society.

Miss Ewing, our beloved Vice-President, is ill and has asked me to make this report for her.

Owing to the prevalence of the influenza, we did not begin work until the 4th of December. In spite of this and of the fact that many of the hospitals for whom we have served were crippled financially and unable to buy materials for supplies, Mrs. Clemens reports 3,259 articles made this fiscal year. This includes not only hospital supplies, but aprons, dusters, towels, etc, made for sale, and to order. This year we have averaged only 9 women each Wednesday, whereas last year we had an average of 17 women, who sewed for us. We have made articles for the Jefferson, Pennsylvania, Presbyterian, Episcopal, Children's Homoepathic, Howard, The Woman's, Abington and Woman's College Hospitals also for the Visiting Nurses Society, the British Relief, the Society of St. Pantalion and the Presbyterian Orphanage, to say nothing of the hundreds of aprons, dusters and towels made for sale. We began the year with a balance of $224.75. During the summer Mrs. Robert T. Boyd, to whom the treasurer of the Society owes much, sold, by her indefatigable efforts, sixty-five dollars worth of articles. Our report for the year is as follows:

Balance from previous year	$224 75
Gifts, income and interest on deposit	491 08
Sales	324 87
	$1,040 70

DISBURSEMENTS.

Paid women for sewing	$438 08
Paid for materials	461 78

Balance on hand May 14, 1919	$140 84

St. Stephen's Church.

I am pleased to report at this meeting that the financial condition of the Church is in very good shape.

We have received from Pew Rents	$6,126.47	$6,254.87
We have received for Maintenance Fund	$2,347.78
A Friend	1,300.00

We have been able to pay to many objects outside of our Parish sums amounting to $5,934.37

A Special Committee was appointed to canvass the Parish to see if they could not collect funds to pay off a debt which had accumulated amounting to $3,000.00, and they were successful. The Committee has received and turned over to the Warden, $2,771.65, and they have subscriptions not yet paid to the amount of $516.00, making a total of $3,287.65, which is a little more than was necessary to pay off our entire debt.

On March 24th our debt was a loan from the Pennsylvania Company of $3,000.00, and I know it will be very satisfactory to you that I am able to report that we have no debt at present. We now have on deposit with the Penna. Co. a balance of $2,983.50, more than will be required to meet our June 1st payments.

I would also call your attention to the Maintenance figures; not counting the amount received from "A Friend," the envelope system has increased this fund in the past year just about $1,000.00, and we should feel very thankful and hope to go on expecting to meet our expenses without touching the principal of our endowments.

I was elected to the Wardenship January 1910, and since that time the principal of our Endowments has never been encroached upon, and will not be with my approval.

J. HUNTER EWING, Warden.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

The Woman's Auxiliary of St. Stephen's Parish has held six stated meetings during the season of 1918-19, beginning on Thursday, November 21, with a celebration of the Holy Communion preceding the meeting. The Advent Call was explained and Messengers were appointed to carry out the plan to arouse the personal interest of all the women in the parish. Owing to the necessary delay in beginning the season a month later than usual, it was impossible to accomplish as much as was desired, but a spiritual impetus was given to all who co-operated and this feeling was expressed by Miss Dale, who faithfully served as a Messenger, and several months later answered the call to a higher sphere.

The December meeting was held in the afternoon, followed by a tea given by the President in honor of Miss Anna J. Magee, in recognition of her many generous gifts to the Parish and untiring interest in its welfare.

Rev. Charles W. Shreiner made an address at the January meeting, in which he described the Church Farm School at Glen Loch, Pennsylvania, which provides for the education and training of boys in various trades; a new venture which deserves encouragement and support.

There was no speaker at the February meeting, at which Mrs. McKeehan presided, but the delegates submitted their reports as usual.

The March meeting being held during Diocesan week, Mrs. Lucas was asked to prepare an outline of the work of the Diocese, so that St. Stephen's might co-operate in the general plan of becoming more familiar with Diocesan affairs, and she gave an admirable talk on the subject, supplying much valuable information.

The account given at the April meeting by Rev. E. R. Rogers of the Industrial School for boys at Covington, Virginia, resulted in the Auxiliary subscribing through St. Stephen's Victory Loan Committee for a fifty dollar bond to be sent him as a donation to the school.

The membership of the Auxiliary at present numbers one hundred and fourteen, with an average attendance of twenty-five. The loss of one member by death and one by resignation is recorded and three new members have been added. Of the number on the Secretary's list one hundred and fourteen, only seventy-two have contributed as shown on the Treasurer's list.

The delegates have attended monthly meetings at the Church House, the annual conference, devotional and Epiphany meetings, United Offering service and the Church Woman's Housing Committee meetings, thus proving their interest in extending Christ's kingdom. Missionary calendars were subscribed to and the annual pledges have been filled for the support of missionaries at home and abroad.

As the study of missions is the foundation of interest in missions it is well to incorporate in this report the enrolment of twelve women in a Mission Study Class conducted at St. Stephen's during Lent by Mrs. W. Horner Smith, the text book used being Our Church and Our Country by Bishop Burleson. The amount of twenty dollars was the voluntary offering of the class for work among the mountaineers, and was presented at the annual educational meeting at the Church House when the reports from each parish were made, and no one could fail to have been thrilled by the enthusiasm of the members as shown by the splendid work recorded, the result of a small beginning, with only a few classes studying missions and now numbering over two thousand members spread among many parishes, producing a feeling of fellowship and a new outlook upon life, which quickens and deepens the spiritual life of everyone who has conscientiously attended a Mission Study Class.

It has been the endeavor of the Woman's Auxiliary to further so far as possible the efforts and suggestions made in regard to the Advent Call and the Diocesan week as preliminary to the nation-wide campaign to be entered upon in the Fall, and this report is concluded with the earnest hope that the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Stephen's may continue to do its part more adequately and with more individual zeal and be inspired to renewed action when refreshed by the summer's invigoration.

United Offering.

The Fifteenth Annual Service of the Presentation of the United Offering took place in St. Stephen's Church on April 24th at 10 A.M.

Mrs. North says it was the largest meeting she has had since her treasurership in five years.

The United Offering of 1916 was $353,000 from the women of more than 100 dioceses and districts. Of this amount nearly one-third came from the 12 dioceses of the Province of Washington. The offering from our province was almost $100,000—an increase of $19,000 over that of 1913. There are in the Province of Washington about 125,000 women communicants. Without taking into consideration any large gifts or the special thank offerings, our province could provide $1,250,000 (more than three times the entire offering of 1916) triennially for the Missionary work of the church, if every woman made a small weekly offering. Of course it is simply a question of reaching the women and with thorough work in every parish and mission, it would be quite possible to accomplish this.

Services at Diocesan Church, Broad and South Sts., Oct. 9th—the day of the Triennial service in Detroit.

Mention should be made of St. Mary's Chapel of St. Mark's colored work—75 new members.

The Church of the Holy Apostles—95 new members gave small amounts; one lady gave in the name of girls to be called as one contributor, and should have been as many as are represented.

Committee on Parish Finances.

Philadelphia, May 13, 1919.

To the Rector, Church Wardens, Vestrymen and Fellow Parishioners of St. Stephen's P. E. Church, Philadelphia:

The Special Committee on Parish Finances, appointed by the Rector in January to establish a new Envelope System, and devise means to eliminate the existing deficit of the Church, begs to report as follows:

Total number of Appeals sent out		328
Total number of Pledges to Envelopes	182
Total number of those who will use Envelopes but will not Pledge	29
Total number of those who will use Plate	1
Total number of those who will give as previously	8
Total number of those who will not Pledge for various reasons	80
Total number of those who have not replied	19
Total number of those removed, addresses unknown, etc.	9

Total amount of money pledged to Envelope System:

Inside Parish ..$66.75 per week; $3,754.00 per year.
Outside Parish..$31.15 per week; $1,624.80 per year.
Total amount promised for Parochial Maintenance, from Envelopes, 4-27-19 to 12-28-19	$1,587.74
As compared with last year:
For Parochial Maintenance from Envelopes (19 sets) 4-28-18 to 12-29-18	$1,081.01
Collected from Alms' Basins for Parochial Maintenance (12 Services)	208.06
	$1,289.07

No services were held in August, on September 1st and 8th, and likewise in the month of October owing to the influenza epidemic. Envelopes, however, were turned in; the loss, therefore, appears in the Alms' Basins offerings which Mr. Keable estimates would not be over $35.00 for the periods during which the Church was closed.

Total number of Gifts to Deficit Fund	192
Total amount of money pledged to Deficit Fund	$3,287.65
Total amount of money received for Deficit Fund	2,771.65
Total amount of promises still to be paid	516.00
	$3,287.65

The Committee feels that a movement in the right direction has started and that we have made a gain, but there is opportunity for very much greater improvement. In a new undertaking of this sort, we believe that some of our people do not understand its necessity, and others do not like to change from old methods—various other reasons may keep some from subscribing to this new plan. We feel, however, that any prejudices or uncertainities that may exist will be gradually overcome and eliminated as the practical demonstration of the system proves its worth. We believe that in another year we will make a much better showing.

There has been in existence in our Church for several years a Guarantee Deficit Fund to which Fund there have been about twenty-two subscribers. We believe that a Fund of this sort is a weakness to our Church, as it may tend to keep some of us from giving as much as we might otherwise. We hope, with real and hearty co-operation among our people, that we can increase our income, and what is more important, increase the number of those who give. Eventually, we hope to eliminate the old Guarantee Deficit Fund.

Our Committee had in mind not to press unduly or urge anyone to subscribe or contribute, and if anyone approached has felt that we have been too insistent, we hope that he will appreciate that no offense was intended.

We have provided no Envelope for Thanksgiving Day nor Christmas Day; it was the thought of the Committee to have special Envelopes sent to our people for offerings on these days. We are anxious to see how an appeal of this sort will influence the giving, and by the results, intelligent action can be guided for another year.

We feel somehow that each one of us should get into his heart that our Church is for the benefit of many, and not for any one individual, and that we are striving to give Love and Service to God and those around us.

The Committee thanks all of our members and all of the people approached for their courtesy, consideration and co-operation.

Yours sincerely,

CRAIG ATMORE,
CHAS. P. LINEAWEAVER,
HOWARD REIFSNYDER,
Special Committee on Parish Finances.

St. Stephen's Farm.

St. Stephen's Farm last year had as usual a very successful season. There were not as many visitors, but that, I presume, was due to the increased incomes of many who had been using the advantages of our summer house. As a result we closed the house with a balance in bank.

I cannot make this report without calling to your mind the faithful and willing services of Miss Elizabeth Dale. I will always look back to her as being a very able and loving Superintendent at the Farm. She was always so cheerful and courageous and had many difficulties to contend with that most of you are not aware of, but through it all she conscientiously did her best.

We hope as usual to open the house this season about the 15th of June, to be open three months, and hope that any members of our Parish who have it in their power will go out and see how much they are doing for those who need a summer holiday and cannot get it without our Farm.

J. HUNTER EWING,
Treasurer St. Stephen's Farm.

The Parish Visitor's Report.

The past winter was such an unusual one, with its spring-like days, balmy air and bright sunshine, that the number of cases to be assisted in our Parish has been very much reduced.

We still have one tubercular case, three stricken with paralysis, one deaf mute, one cripple and one case of arrested development. We have also seven pensioners who are either too ill or too old to work, or with too many in the family for one woman to support; for instance, a widow with three young children and a grandmother, all dependent upon her, and her wages in a laundry are insufficient to fill their mouths and keep a roof over their heads and shoes on their feet. But we have been enabled to increase her allowance, since her pitiful case has touched the heart of the father of one of our teachers.

During the past winter Miss Anna Burley has been called to her eternal rest. We have the satisfaction of knowing that her last years were made care-free and comfortable through the ministration of St. Stephen's Church. Born of wealthy parents, with an assured social position, she had many advantages; a good education, supplemented by foreign travel. But it is the old story—when a woman is unable to look after her own money there always appear people who gladly do it for her, the result being poverty in old age, and in this case, sickness as well. Through the kindness of Mrs. Fell, she was placed in the Home for Incurables, where her board was paid, and where she had nothing but kindness, until she fell asleep.

Miss Gebhart's yearly memorial we are using toward placing a cripple in the Home of Rest for Aged People, and also helping a poor couple.

Mrs. Addinell Hewson and her daughter Mrs. Walter E. Douglas each gave us a ton of coal, and here is a letter of warmly expressed gratitude called forth by the gift:

"Maybe that ton of coal doesn't look big in our cellar, and if you and the kind friends who have made it possible for us to receive this grand gift could only realize the many comfortable days we shall enjoy through it; for the price of coal now makes one feel as though one were burning gold dollars. If you only knew how saving I am with a basket of coal, and how long it takes me to get the money together for a ton of coal, you would know how much I appreciate the gift. Wait until our boys grow up and we will hope to return it to some needy one."

St. Stephen's Aid Society made a number of layettes; we have given them to fifteen little babies just arrived. On Thanksgiving Day seven baskets made thankful seven families, but on Christmas Day the number was increased to eighty-six.

A gentleman of the congregation sent us five beautiful new blankets. Another letter received says:

"I never expected to see a new blanket; I never had one so heavy and nice as that before, and it meant an extra thanksgiving for your kindness. We had it opened, then put it away, and then opened it again, and kept it open, like children over toys, we were so happy. I had expressed a wish when we were married that I might get a pair of blankets as a gift, but did not, but now after eleven years I had this wish fulfilled."

Visiting the Sunday-school scholars, the sick, the hospitals, the discouraged, as well as the regular routine duties, has made up the year's work.

The Parish Visitor wishes to thank the donors for the gifts of half-worn clothing and all who have helped her work in any way.

Respectfully submitted,

K. H. LEWIS.

The Mothers' Meeting.

On account of the epidemic of influenza in the Fall of 1918, the Mothers' Meeting did not open until Dec. 3rd. We have had 19 meetings with an average attendance of 50; 55 attended the Communion Service on Holy Thursday.

The Annual Sale conducted by the Mothers took place on February 13. One hundred dollars from the proceeds was donated to the Deficit Fund of the Church.

We have lost 5 members by death and 4 new names have been added to our roll.

The Mothers have been made happy by the presence of our dear President whenever it was possible.

Dr. Grammer's many visits have also been greatly appreciated during this busy winter.

Mrs. Keable, who has been so active in the work of the Club, has been kindly assisted at the piano by Mrs. Higham.

Sixty Mothers visited the Farm last July for a day's outing.

The Mothers record their deep sorrow at the death of Miss Dale.

We feel that a successful season ended in April 29 with a delightful party, "Mrs. Taylor's Inn," music and flowers, sleight of hand tricks, recitations, cake and ice cream, with Dr. Grammer presiding.

BLANCHE M. HARPER,
Secretary.

Girls' Friendly Society.

The first meeting of St. Stephen's Branch of the Girls' Friendly Society for the season of 1918-1919 was held on the memorable evening of November 11th. In spite of the excitement and celebrations going on in the streets, over 40 members met and went into the church for a short service of prayer and thanksgiving.

At Christmas the Branch sent 50 large and well filled stockings and 29 boxes (made of picture post cards and filled with peanuts and small toys) to the children in the Philadelphia Hospital and 18 very pretty knitted caps to the Home for Infants.

The Christmas Entertainment this year took the form of a Victory Dinner when 142 members and husbands of married Branch Helpers and 6 guests had the pleasure of dining together at the New Century Drawing Room.

In response to an urgent appeal from the P. E. City Mission, 40 new and 210 second-hand garments were collected for children left destitute as a result of the Influenza epidemic.

Sixty second-hand pieces of clothing were also sent to Deaconess Camp for her work at St. Ambrose Mission. 53 sweaters, 35 hand-knitted and 39 machine-made pairs of socks, 6 pairs of wristlets and 1 scarf were made for men in the Service and 22 caps and 2 coats knitted for the French orphans.

A Liberty Bond was bought, $10.00 in cash added, and given to the War Chest.

Children's books are now being collected for St. Agnes Settlement House.

On March 3rd St. Stephen's Branch had an especially interesting meeting. For some months the members had been diligently working to convert the dimes given them as talents into dollars. Two teams were organized and a lively, but friendly, contest began. This night the returns were to be made and everyone was interested and animated. The stereopticon was used by one member to flash the returns upon the screen and many humorous incidents occurred. As in National Elections, so in this contest; the returns favored first one team and then the other. Imaginary reports from prominent citizens afforded much amusement. The correct returns finally proved that the "Special Effort Fund" this year far exceeded that of any other. Last year the fund took a big leap forward and reached $176.00 but 1919 went still further and resulted in a total of $250.00. All of this money has been used for Missionary and Charitable work.

During Lent the members made dresses and underclothing for the City Mission and the Married Branch Helpers met on Wednesday afternoons and made 1140 surgical dressings and 12 bureau scarfs for the Indian Hospital at Winner, South Dakota.

The Band that last year adopted a Shut-in has continued to visit this old lady each week and from time to time has sent her fruit and flowers. It has also adopted a French orphan.

On Easter Sunday the members collected and sent to the Little House of St. Pantalion $165.20 and also secured the promise of the adoption of 2 more French orphans.

The Millinery Class and the Weekly Suppers have again proved most successful.

The Saving Fund has 41 depositors and $33.20 on deposit.

Some of the Senior members continue to take charge of one Sunday afternoon each month at the Old St. Stephen's Club and a number help each Sunday evening.

The Branch has had the privilege of having as speakers this season:

Miss Julia MacAlister, who told of her experiences while with the Woman's American Hospital Unit in France.

Dr. Elise Whitlock Rose of the Little House of St. Pantaleon.

Miss Margaret Maule, who told of the Missionary and Social Service Work of the G. F. S., and Miss Christine Doyle, who spoke on the Eight Hour Bill for Women Wage Earners.

As a result of this talk 25 members wrote to Senator McConnell urging the passage of this Bill.

The members took great pleasure in making a number of balls of rags for a new carpet at St. Stephen's Farm. This carpet was to have been a surprise for Miss Dale, but before it was finished she was called to her eternal rest.

The Branch desires to place upon record the deep sense of loss felt by its members for this faithful friend and also for the two members who have passed to the higher and fuller life.

The members have tried to do their share both in buying and selling Liberty and Victory Bonds.

A new day is upon us, a new vision has opened to our minds, a new spirit is stirring our conscience and we pray that the Girls' Friendly Society may draw inspiration from good in the old to achieve the new.

GRACE V. D. LUCAS,
Branch Secretary.

The Girls' Friendly Society.

The Girls' Friendly Society in Philadelphia has undertaken to raise $5,000 for the purpose of endowing a bed in the Episcopal Hospital. This bed will be known as the Girls' Friendly Society Bed, and will be used especially for members of the Society. As I am an Honorary Associate Member, I have been asked to take part in aiding this most worthy object and I am anxious to secure at least $500.00. In aiding this cause, we not only help the Girls' Friendly Society, but our own Hospital. Contributions can be sent to me at any time, and I would be glad if some of you here tonight will give me the promise of a contribution.

ANNA J. MAGEE,
Honorary Associate.

The Sunday School.

War times have taken our young men of the Sunday Schools—which of course is general, and all schools have suffered thereby. We of St. Stephen's are proud of the excellent use that has been made of our buildings in our service club for enlisted men and congratulate the club committees, both men and women, for their faithfulness and success. We regret that even more use of us as an organization was not made; nevertheless, on Sunday mornings at least we had the privilege of greeting many and have the visiting army or sailor man take part in our work, worship and study. Many were the trouble cases that wandered in on Sunday mornings, to be most willingly assisted by members of the Sunday School, some of whom always remained on duty until relieved at noon by the club committee, each Sunday. So we have happily hung on, and have held our own during the past year; and at least the regular Sunday morning prayers of the children was an essential offering. Our Secretary and some fifteen of our boys have been in the service of Uncle Sam's Army abroad and the body of one lies buried in France. Our great festival occasions have not been surpassed in peace times, particularly the recent Christmas and more recent Easter Memorial tribute and Carol Service, which was made so wonderfully beautiful in the Church, with flags, flowers and processional praise, on the Sunday morning following Easter. All agree that the loving memorial tribute of the Children of St. Stephen's to those who have made the Great Sacrifice, was more than beautiful.

One great joy of the writer when speaking in army camps and naval and hospital bases is to be recognized and remembered for what has been done so generously in the war work of the loyal, faithful people of "Old St. Stephen's," their clergy and co-workers.

The teachers, officers and scholars of the main and primary departments, by means of slides, motion pictures and pamphlets, have kept regularly to their illustrated studies in the life of the Christ. We have co-operated in the Diocesan and inter-denominational Sunday School work of our city. We have enjoyed the Farm and its privileges and pay an affectionate tribute to the House Mother whom God has called home, and you will note by our treasurer's report herewith that never have the scholars and teachers given more heartily and happily to missions than during the past year.

So with feelings of gratefulness to all who have so kindly assisted us, we continue our work summer and winter, for we do not close, and will heartily welcome man, woman or child who will come in and join the happy forces of Old St. Stephen's Sunday School.

Faithfully, for the School,

G. H. STREAKER,
Superintendent.

The Junior Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

Some fifteen boys of the Sunday School make up this faithful little chapter of the Brotherhood and meet regularly the second and fourth Sunday of each month, one-half hour before the opening of Sunday School. They report on their obligations. They send delegates to diocesan meetings. They were represented at the last Annual Convention of the National Brotherhood at Northfield, Mass., and by the kindness of Mr. Mearns, with his automobiles, were able to make the Junior pilgrimage to Valley Forge last autumn. We regret to report that during the past year we have lost by death our former faithful, efficient secretary, Francis Scherzer.

Our dues to the National Brotherhood are paid for the year and we are trying to take our part in the work, worship and study of the Church.

Respectfully submitted,

E. SHEPHERD, Secretary.

Burd School.

In presenting their Report for the past year the Committee of Women Visitors have again the pleasure of expressing their gratification with the satisfactory manner in which the work that comes under their supervision has been conducted. The discipline of the school by means of the sympathetic control exercised by Miss Tappen has been well maintained. The school did not escape the "flu" epidemic; at one time 23 of the inmates of the school were ill; fortunately there were no fatalities and the general health of the children has been good.

The Girl Scout movement, organized last year, has been quite successful and Miss Tappen is now arranging additional ways for the beneficial amusement and recreation of the girls. One pleasant event was a surprise party given by the children to Dr. and Mrs. Grammer on Christmas Eve at the Rectory. The carols were to have been sung out of doors but the rain interfered and they had to be sung inside.

Eight new pupils have been admitted during the past year, one pupil has been dropped, making a total at present of 39 pupils. Four of the older girls were confirmed at Easter.

The Chairman of the Committee begs to express the regret felt by all the members at Miss Ewing's resignation. Miss Ewing had been a very valued member of this Committee with always a helpful suggestion in time of difficulty and with words of encouragement and praise for happier hours.

Respectfully submitted,

EMILY K. CAMPBELL,
Chairman.

Church Periodical Club.

St. Stephen's Branch of the Church Periodical Club regrets to report the least encouraging year in the experience of the present Librarian. There are various reasons for this. One is, the Central Office has decided, as did many other organizations in the Church recently, to commence the fiscal year in January instead of April. So we present herewith the nine months' report, just as turned in to the Diocesan Correspondent; and this excludes the three months that ought to be the best of the year. But this explanation does not wholly explain, as we find on glancing at the records since January 1919, that interest is ebbing and magazines fading from sight altogether at an alarming rate. I give below the report for the time included between April 1, 1918 and January 1, 1919.

Current periodicals, sent regularly	51
Contributors to same	29
Bibles, Testaments, etc.	2
Prayerbooks and hymnals	4
Tracts and catechisms	10
Books, theological and secular	44
Christmas and Easter cards	775
Odd magazines and papers	824
Pictures	30
Music	50
Boxes, contents uncounted	3

CASH ACCOUNT.

Received from all sources	$7 66
Sent to Diocesan and Central Office Treasurers	3 00
Paid for Leaflets for Rev. S. E. Carreras, Cuba	3 54

This is less for almost every item than in the previous year, and the first three months of 1919 show that the 51 magazines, which all seemed to be in a going state in December, have shrunk to 42, and the donors have fallen to 27; and yet our hard-working missionaries have not died, moved nor stopped reading to any appreciable extent.

Of course many magazines, during the last few years, have been diverted to France, and our missionaries have cheerfully accepted this situation, and though they may not have been able to contribute to the soldiers' reading, directly, they did it just as completely by "going without" the books that would in other times have been sent to them. But now the boys are coming home, and except in the case of those sending to personal friends with a specific address, or to the camp in Brest, we would like to turn the mail bags once more to the mission field.

That this report may not be merely a complaint, I must mention right here that we can never be grateful enough to the donors who are still on our honor list, and who continue to send regularly. There are several I should really like to mention by name; one in particular who has never failed in three years to send to the parish house promptly, while the bloom is yet on the current news, about 30 magazines, and these go out regularly to about six readers or distributors in different parts of Maine, Nebraska, and Alaska, always going to the same recipients, who look for them eagerly and are never disappointed; another who for five years has sent three of the finest periodicals without missing; and several more who subscribe through the publishers for faraway readers and who do not even read these themselves first. I hope this expression of our gratitude will reach them all, through the Parish News, since we do not have time to write all the letters of appreciation we would like to send.

The moral of this report, if it has a moral, is that the St. Stephen's Branch of the Church Periodical Club needs a revival, or an Every Member campaign. It respectfully asks for a few more donors, a great many more magazines sent regularly and to manage them, a brand-new Librarian; who, to carry on successfully, should resemble the prince in the fairy tales, and be young, rich and handsome, with a good deal of leisure.

Respectfully submitted,

ELIZABETH HAUPT SMITH,
Librarian.

The Woman's Aid.

The Woman's Aid of the Convocation of North Philadelphia has a long name, but has been in existence only a short time. Delegates from twenty-four parishes and six missions assemble quarterly to arrange for an entertainment to raise funds for one of the missions needing especial assistance.

St. Stephen's cooperated once at a bazaar and supper for the benefit of St. Ambrose Parish House, and one thousand dollars were raised; now, cooperation is again asked for by attendance at a garden party and fair to be held at Wyck, the colonial home and garden belonging to Mr. Caspar Wister Haines, 6026 Germantown Avenue, corner Walnut Lane, on Wednesday, June 4, from two until nine o'clock. Afternoon tea and supper will be served at reasonable prices and there will be music and community singing. The cost of the tickets admitting to the garden is twenty-five cents, and tickets may be obtained now from the verger, or the committee of ladies or at the entrance of the garden on the day.

This entertainment is for the benefit of the parish house of the Church of St. Augustine, a colored mission, and already the members of that church have raised nearly one hundred dollars from a concert gotten up entirely by themselves. This garden party will be taken part in by all the parishes aforesaid, and St. Stephen's will have the domestic table in partnership with the Free Church of St. John and St. Bartholomew's.

Mrs. Samuel H. Austin, 3913 Chestnut Street, will be in charge of the table and will be glad to receive articles for sale or donations in money at the above address. Should the weather be stormy the fair will be postponed until the day following.

What more delightful way to spend an afternoon in June than in a beautiful old-fashioned garden, listening to music and being served with light refreshments by young girls in colonial costume! Try it, please.

LAURA BELL,
President of Woman's Aid of the Convocation of North Philadelphia.

The summer of 1918 was the sixth season of the Vacation Bible School held at St. Stephen's Church. It was the most successful year ever experienced.

The school opened July 1st, and closed August 9th. It was in session six weeks. Total enrollment, 110; daily average attendance, 48. Of the children enrolled, 58 were Protestants, 18 Catholics and 34 Jewish.

The children were between 1 and 14 years of age. One of the noticeable things about the school was the fact that when the children were asked their nationality, they all replied, "American." Other years there has been as high as 12 different nationalities represented. This year practically every child, no matter how small, wanted to be classed as an American. However, besides the Americans, there were a few Italians, Jewish and Polish nationalities represented. The principal in charge of the school was Miss Charlotte W. Nodine, assisted by a manual training teacher and a kindergarten teacher.

The children were more regular in attendance this year than in former years, in spite of the intense heat. On one occasion the thermometer actually did travel to 106.2° Fahrenheit. As usual, the "kiddies" never wanted to go home and they could never understand why there was no school on Saturdays.

School was open from 9.30 to 11.30 A.M., five days a week. The day began with devotional exercises, after which a few minutes were given to "Habit Talks." These talks emphasized the importance of forming habits of cleanliness and kindness in everyday life.

The Bible period followed. The most important feature of the whole day was the Bible story. At the end of six weeks the children not only knew over thirty Bible stories, but also had memorized over thirty Bible verses and five Psalms. It is to be remembered that the children did not have any Bibles in their possession during the Bible period.

A half hour was devoted to music. In addition to hymns memorized by the children, childhood songs were memorized; at the same time vocal and breathing exercises were given.

During the manual period, not only did the children learn to make useful articles out of reed, raffia and wood, but the girls made dresses and aprons. Never before had there been such a large number of useful articles made and never before had the work been so well done. Knitting squares for a blanket was the favorite occupation among the children. Boys and girls would spend their whole manual period, knitting. In fact, they would rather knit than make things for themselves. The blanket, which was 5 ft. x 7 ft., was indeed beautifully knitted. After its completion, it was given to a very needy and worthy sailor who, at the time, attended the Old St. Stephen's Club. Of course, it is not necessary to state here just how much that blanket was appreciated.

The closing exercises that were held every day in the school included the salute to the flag and the singing of "America." This was followed by the children's benediction.

The total cost of the school, including salaries and materials, was $148.50. This sum was $2.50 less than the cost of the school the previous year and it is to be remembered that materials were more expensive. It probably would be encouraging to know that it cost less to run our Vacation Bible School independent of the Philadelphia Daily Vacation Bible School Association. While in the Association, the expenses ran from $175 to $200.

Only recently, two children of the school were seen on the street and they ran in front of the traffic in their eagerness to inquire when the school would be open this summer. They said they could hardly wait and had already asked a number of new children to come with them.

The school will be open this year on Monday, June 30th and will close on Friday, August 8th.

CHARLOTTE W. NODINE.

Old St. Stephen's Club

Philadelphia, May 14, 1919.

To the Rector, Associate Rector, Wardens, Vestrymen and Members of St. Stephen's Church:

I beg to offer the following as a brief report of Old St. Stephen's Club for year ending May 10th, 1919.

From June 25th, 1917 to May 10th, 1919 we have entertained 192,075 boys; during the year 1918 we entertained 141,000 boys, the Club being closed from September 28th to October 30th by the Health Authorities.

We have collected for the maintenance of the Club to date $38,397.90 and the Treasurer reports expenditures of the Club from May 1st, 1918, to May 1st, 1919, $22,850.26.

The Entertainment Committee reports that entertainment has been provided every evening since the Club opened and that Mr. H. T. Jordan, Manager of Keith's Theatre, Philadelphia, up to May 7th of this year has provided 81 shows for 81 evenings, 376 acts and 714 artists from his theatre.

The Secretary, Miss Alice Ewing, submits a report which, while not statistical in any way, shows the immense volume of good work that the Club has been responsible for.

We have been privileged to be represented at various court-martials and I am positive have rendered great assistance to the enlisted men, and the authorities without exception have universally branded our Club as the best Club so far as assisting the Departments is concerned and I think it only right that the enclosed reports of Finance Committee, Mr. Howard Reifsnyder, Chairman, Entertainment Committee, Mr. Edward W. Moore, Chairman, the report of Mr. Robert T. Boyd, Treasurer, Miss Alice Ewing, Corresponding Secretary and our Statistician, Mr. Charles N. Van Dusen, should be read as they contain an immense amount of data that I am satisfied is not generally known in our Parish.

Very sincerely yours,

ANDREW LUFFBARRY,
Chairman.

May 14, 1919.

Mr. Andrew Luffbarry,

HOWARD REIFSNYDER,

Philadelphia, May 10, 1919.

To the Rector, Associate Rector and Members of the Parish of Old St. Stephen's Church, Philadelphia:

I herewith submit a report of the Entertainment Committee of Old St. Stephen's Club for the year 1918 and 1919.

The Club has been opened and entertainment has been provided every evening since the Club opened.

I think it is only fair to mention specifically the great help that we have received from Mr. H. T. Jordan, Manager of Keith's Theatre, Philadelphia. Since October 3rd, 1917 to and including May 7th, 1919 he has sent over 81 shows, 376 acts and 714 artists to entertain the boys, all free of charge. Mr. Joseph C. Dougherty, Asst. Mgr. of Keith's Theatre has personally taken entire charge of these entertainments. I also wish to mention the fact that Mr. W. Dayton Wegefarth, Manager of the Grand Opera House and Mr. Joseph Phillips, Manager of the Bijou Theatre, have sent over many acts.

No organization or person has refused to entertain the boys and it would make too long a report even to try to mention their names.

Respectfully submitted,

EDWARD W. MOORE,
Chairman, Entertainment Committee, Old St. Stephen's Club.

Brief Report of Work of Club in Office for Registration and Correspondence.

The registration on the yellow card for the new men has proved a complete success, for by this means it has been possible to locate the men at once, whose families write or telegraph enquiries for them. During this past year this office has filed about 300 letters; it has relieved many families who have been ill, or in need of financial help, in their own home towns, through the Red Cross, which organization has also given financial help and employment for men discharged from the service; and it has also forwarded money on a business basis to men whose pay-accounts have been mixed up.

Besides the Red Cross, we have been helped by twenty-five other organizations, hospitals etc., in locating and helping the men. There have been six volunteer assistants working in the office, and the visiting and investigations have been done by Miss Ewing assisted by Mrs. Reifsnyder.

I would like to add that, on several occasions, the Red Cross has thanked us for our assistance and co-operation in their work.

ALICE EWING.

The Rector's Letter.

MY DEAR PARISHIONERS:

I know how attractive the country is at this season, and how gloomy appear the streets of the city, with their narrow lines and thin strip of sky after the broad fields and spacious outlook of the country. Nevertheless, now that I am back in the city myself, I am hard-hearted enough to hope I shall soon see you all in your accustomed places. There is a time for rest, and there is a time for work. Now that the night is longer than the day, and the children are going to school again, it is time for us adults to address ourselves to our tasks. The Church's work is calling for helpers.

I am afraid that many of you will be disappointed that nothing has been done on the exterior of the church. The trouble has been the high cost of repairs. The committee in charge of the work was daunted when it found that the contractors wanted $20,000 to put our exterior in such a condition as we desire. It, therefore, suspended operations until we could get together and talk over the situation and decide upon the essential repairs. The rest, it was thought, could wait until another time. I am sure that none of us ever intended to try to make the church look like a modern church. We value the antique appearance of the old structure. All that we aimed to do was to put the outside walls in first class condition, and to improve the front. Our entrance is not inviting; neither is it well lighted. The window above the door also might be considerably improved. These matters will be speedily taken up by the vestry.

As I announced on the first Sunday after my return, Miss Magee has generously given a considerable sum to improve the equipment and the action of the organ. The contract has been made with Haskell, to put chimes in the echo organ and a harp stop, which will give a novel effect like that of a stringed instrument. Some of the other stops, which have proven to be too slightly differentiated, have been changed and the action will be greatly improved. The general scheme of voicing will not be altered, and Mr. Thunder has been particularly anxious not to lose the qualities of sweetness and the admirable voicing which has made the organ so successful.

The organ builder has promised to have all the repairs and additions completed before Thanksgiving Day. Its fine music has always been one of the distinguished features of St. Stephen's and we are delighted to have our fine organ brought in this way to the highest pitch of efficiency. Our only regret is that the improvements on the outside could not synchronize with this improvement in our interior equipment.

We have had a remarkably healthful summer, and comparatively few losses by death. It is with gratitude to God for her good example that we mention Miss Anna Belle Townsend. For over two years she was a great sufferer. She never had the pleasure of seeing the improvements in the church, though she often asked me about them, and cherished the hope that she might some day see them. She was greatly missed in our Societies, especially in the Altar Society, of which she was a most faithful member; prompt, efficient and kindly, working well with others and doing whatever she had to do with thoroughness. She was one of our most dependable members. She will also be greatly missed in the Woman's Auxiliary, of which she was a regular attendant and faithful contributor. She was a delegate to the Indian Hope Department of the Diocesan Auxiliary, and there was always something fresh and original in the way in which she made her reports. I first knew her well in the long sickness of her father, to whom she was a most devoted daughter and faithful nurse. She was one of those parishioners who can always be counted on to be in their places on Sunday. I always felt as if one of the lights had gone out on that side of the church when she ceased to attend. She kept up her envelope subscription faithfully even when she was no longer able to come to church, and now that she is no longer with us, her good works follow her; for her sister has sent in all the envelopes with her contributions made up to the end of the year. In her long illness her body wasted away most pitiably, but her spirit was cheerful, fed by some inner fountain of strength and courage. She kept up wonderfully to the end. All who ever were associated with her will remember her as one of the lights of the world in her day and generation.

Through the work of Old St. Stephen's Club a large group of workers was gathered together who became closely associated in ties of friendship and common interest. Among these workers Mrs. Frank G. Cooper was conspicuous for her fidelity and warm interest in the boys. Although she was suffering for over a year from the malady which finally ended her life, she continued her activities in the club long after most people would have pleaded illness as an excuse for discontinuing such exertions. Her power to attract and interest the boys has been shown by numerous letters which Dr. Cooper has received since her death from the enlisted men who knew her in the Club. I would that it were proper to quote some of them. They remind one of Longfellow's lines about the inscriptions in a country churchyard:

> "Rudely written, but each letter
> Full of hope and full of heartbreak,
> Full of all the tender pathos
> Of the here and the hereafter."

She bore the long suffering of her painful disease with extraordinary fortitude. I do not think that anyone could have been with her to the end without feeling perfectly convinced that although the mind uses the brain as an organ for expression, it is not the product of the brain but its master. Within a half hour before her lips became silent forever she was speaking clearly and intelligently about the interests of those she loved, and giving directions for their welfare. There was not the slightest flicker in the bright blaze of her intelligence. She was with us, and then she had passed to "where beyond these voices there is peace." She had become very much endeared to a large circle in our church, and the sympathy of the congregation goes out to her bereaved husband and her near relations.

In the death of Mrs. Catherine M. Brown, one of the faithful families of our church lost a good and loving mother. Her daughter Lillie (now Mrs. Greenbaum), grew up in our Sunday School and is one of our faithful attendants. Her son Robert Brown, was one of the young men of our church who went abroad with the American Expeditionary Force.

There is something peculiarly sad in the death of the father of a large family, or the leader of a large band, who stand disconsolate around his grave and feel life has grown more onerous, now he has gone. But there is also something peculiarly touching in the obsequies of the last survivor of a generation, or a family, or a set, the last leaf of a past summer, that after defying the blast alone, while all its companions are gone, is at last whirled away. Such was the pathos of the funeral of our genial worker in Old St. Stephen's Club, William L. Boggs. While his attendance in our church preceded the formation of the club, he never came into any close fellowship until its inauguration. He took eagerly to the work, and at once became a regular helper, and a most efficient enroller of new attendants. He was very popular with the boys. They liked the way he had of hiding his tenderness of heart under a camouflage of gruffness that deceived no one and gave him a unique flavor. He became one of our recognized characters. Rigging and pretended scolding was always going on about him. We appreciated that he had known more prosperous days, and was bearing the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune with manly fortitude; but we had no idea of the loneliness of his life, until his sudden death, by an acute attack of illness at night, disclosed that the members of our club were the most dependable friends that he possessed. It is pleasant to record that they rose at once to the responsibilities of the relation, and made his funeral a testimonial of friendship.

The last time that I saw him was at the funeral of Mrs. Cooper, who like a number of other ladies delighted and cheered him by a friendly raillery, which he pretended to depreciate, though it was evident that it warmed the very cockles of his heart. Sincere and unobtrusive was his sorrow. It is a consolation to know that Old St. Stephen's Club did so much to cheer his last days.

These, I believe, are the only deaths among our regular attendants, although, of course, there were a number of funerals, since the clergy of a parish like ours are called upon to render this ministerial service outside of our own fold.

The most interesting development of the summer is the Boys' Club. Elsewhere in this paper we publish Mr. Keable's statement of its origin. As soon as he told me of the opening I was convinced that it was Providential. It is just the kind of work that a down town church like ours ought to assume. We have the location and we have the large group of workers who were accustomed to coöperate with one another harmoniously, we have the proper equipment, and the success with which we administered Old St. Stephen's Club for Enlisted Men has given us a prestige which will enable us to raise the necessary money. The newspapers stand ready to assist us by giving all the publicity that we desire. There is no organization to meet the needs of these boys in the city. At a meeting in the vestry room on Wednesday, September 24th, a board of directors was created of those members of the general committee of Old St. Stephen's Club who consented to join, together with the representatives of the ladies' committee who used to sit with the general committee. This board elected the Rector of St. Stephen's Church as President, and Mr. Keable as Vice-President and Chairman of the Executive Committee. Miss McDonald was elected Secretary, and Mr. Robert T. Boyd Treasurer. The President was requested to appoint the Executive Committee. He has appointed, in addition to the Chairman, the Treasurer and the Chairman of the Finance Committee ex officio, Miss Cornelia L. Ewing, Mrs. Howard Reifsnyder and Mrs. Robert T. Boyd and Dr. Frank G. Cooper, Andrew Luffbarry and J. B. Mearns.

A meeting of the Directors to hear the report of this Executive Committee has been called for Tuesday, September 30th. Our general scheme will be to aid these boys by providing for them a place of recreation and entertainment. They will be furnished coffee and sandwiches at the cost of the materials. The canteen or cafe will be conducted on entirely different principles from the canteen of Old St. Stephen's Club. Nothing will be given away. The entire administration will be in the charge of a stewardess and her helper. A man will be always on hand to keep order, so that the ladies will at no time find themselves without an efficient guardian of the peace. Voluntary helpers will be needed, however, to create an atmosphere and to give the boys friendship and counsel. The general plan is that no charity shall be distributed to the boys. If there are to be any remedial measures taken, there shall be a special committee for the purpose, so that we shall be protected from any unauthorized acts of philanthropy. It is exceedingly important that nothing should be done to injure the self-respect of the boys, or that will have a tendency to remove them from the class of workers. These are industrious boys, and they must be encouraged to be industrious by seeing that the rewards of faithful diligence cannot be secured by plausible tales.

I am tempted to prolong this editorial and talk about other plans for the church. While I must avoid prolixity, I cannot help saying a word about the Wednesday noonday service. The attendance during the summer was truly remarkable, averaging about seventy-five persons. During September it has reached nearly a hundred. I am particularly anxious that the members of the Wednesday Band should feel that this service belongs to them, and that those who attend should bring in others. There is such a thing as overvaluing numbers, but there is also such a thing as being supine, and content with small results when we ought to get large results. Undoubtedly the effectiveness of such a service is very much heightened by an increase in the attendance. The great volume of singers, lifting up their voices in praise, the great volume of responses to prayer, all mightily coöperate to elevate the spirit both of the hearers and of the speaker. I snall be very much disappointed if the weekly attendance during the winter does not amount to at least 200.

Then there is the work among the men of the church. I regret that Mr. McKeehan was summoned by important business engagements to Europe this October. Together we have talked over the matter and found ourselves of one mind, that it would be wise to reorganize the group that formerly constituted the St. Andrew's Brotherhood and make it into a society distinctly adapted to the needs of our congregation. A very learned and able Church of England clergyman, with whom I opened a correspondence on account of my admiration for his book on the Psalms, organized a successful society in his church in London on somewhat different lines from the St. Andrew's Brotherhood. The promise exacted by St. Andrew's Brotherhood of every member that they will say a specific prayer every day is a great stumbling-block. It is either not lived up to at all, or it becomes a burden to the spirit; a form that cramps rather than helps. One of the most distinguished Christians that America every produced, the Rev. Dwight L. Moody, promised a friend to mention his name every time he uttered a prayer. Later he asked to be relieved from that promise, which was an obstruction in the freedom of his communication with God. Just suppose that a child were to promise another child that every time it spoke to its father it would mention its brother's or sister's name! How unreal it would be! What an obstruction in the road of free communication of spirit with spirit. Much of our best prayer really does not express itself in words, but is a simple effort on our part to realize that behind all these phenomena there is a great Spirit from which we derive our mortal powers, and with which we would like to be in harmony. People who have these mystic yearnings are driven away from the Brotherhood of St. Andrew's by the definite pledge. I think we can reach our constituency better if we remove the barrier from the door of our Men's Club, and open the club to every seeker for friendship, for uplift and for truth.

The proper organization of the men of our church is one of the tasks that will call for solution this winter. I should like to see our occasional Sunday evening suppers resumed. Moreover, I would like St. Stephen's Church formally to enter the Inter-Church Federation. A new charter has been adopted by the Federation; we are no longer content simply to have the different rectors of the city join in a federation. What we are aiming at is a federation of churches. Unfortunately, the time has not yet arrived when we can get our Convention to join in with the other Protestant churches. That would, of course, be the ideal way for the Episcopal Church to associate itself through its Diocesan Convention with the Presbyterians, the Methodists, the Baptists and others, and appropriate a certain amount of money as our contribution as a church towards the running expenses of the Federation. The special task of the Federation really would be problems of civic righteousness. Inasmuch as we have not reached the right stage, the next best thing would be to get the different congregations to join. I am going to put the matter before the congregation soon, and ask them to take action.

I wish that I could dwell on this point at greater length, but I must reserve this for a later communication. I cannot but express my sense of privilege in being connected with a church which is called upon to help in so many ways in the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God on earth. I believe that the Interchurch Federation was a potent factor in securing the new charter, and was of service in overthrowing the rule of the contractor-boss. Still larger tasks invite us. I am confident that the same spirit that has animated the congregation in the past will be with us in the discharge of these later responsibilities.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

The Girls' Friendly Society will reassemble in the Parish House on Monday, October 6th, at the usual hour. Dr. Grammer will be present and conduct the devotions.

The King's Daughters will have their second meeting October 15th in the Guild Room of the Parish House, at 8 o'clock.

July 6th, our beloved friend and a faithful member of the Circle, Miss Bella Townsend, was called to her Heavenly Home. It is our loss and her gain, but she will be missed. She was always faithful and ready to do her part for the good of others. A great sufferer but always cheerful.

The Club For Boys

Dr. Grammer has requested me to give an account of the starting of Old St. Stephen's Club for newsboys, and at the outset I want to say that this movement is not the result of a sudden impulse, but the result of long and careful thought. Ambassador Bryce said, "Social reformers are more and more coming to feel that the prevention of bad habits and the promotion of good ones among those classes which most need philanthropic help must begin with the children." For many months it has been a question with me as to how we could reach the boys of the streets, especially those who congregate in the rear of the church, shooting craps, and sleeping on the doorsteps, or on the shipping tables of a nearby newspaper establishment. During my vacation it occurred to me that possibly we could somehow or other gather these boys into the Sunday School Building, and still make arrangements to continue the care of our boys and girls of the Sunday School.

As soon as I came home, I spent several evenings sitting on the doorstep of the Ludlow Street entrance to the Sunday School Building, talking to the boys and trying to find out something about their lives and manner of living. I found several boys who are without homes; others who had run away from home for various reasons. About fourteen boys came from Scranton, two from New York, some from Trenton. These boys had been attracted to the city by the report of big wages at Hog Island. They were soon disillusioned, and as they did not wish to return home without having made good, they joined the group of papersellers as a means of livelihood.

I might mention that I succeeded in getting four of these boys to return to Scranton, though some are still here and are making good. I persuaded one boy to write home "just to let the folks know where you are." He finally consented, and this is what he wrote:

"Dear Mamma: This is just to let you know that I am in Philadelphia. I suppose you know that I sold my bike for $10. Can you get it back, and do you think I can get my old job at the Post Office again? Send me my sister's photograph."

The response to this letter was a telegram for money enabling the boy to return home.

Besides the out-of-town boys, there are many boys whose homes are in Philadelphia, but they are either beyond parental control or else it must be that there is no one to care. They sleep wherever they can. Sometimes when sales have been good, or they have been successful at "craps" they patronize a rooming house, paying 35 or 40 cents for a bed. These boys serve the "bulldog" editions of the Record and North American. This edition is issued at 10 P. M., and after the papers are sold the boys return to the office and settle their accounts. This is usually at 1 or 2 A. M.

I finally decided to write to the Rector asking permission to start work with these boys, but before I did so, I received a request from the superintendent of the Record asking me to come and talk over with him this boy problem. I did so, and found that while he had no plan to suggest, we were entirely in accord that nothing was gained, but a great opportunity lost, if we merely called the police to drive the boys away. The superintendent expressed great willingness to co-operate with us, if we should decide to attempt a club for the boys. He verified many of the statements which the boys had made to me.

The call from the superintendent just at this time convinced me that this was more than a coincidence. I regarded it as a Providential opening for a great work, and so wrote to Dr. Grammer. He replied very cordially, authorizing me to go ahead and possess the field. But even before his reply could be received I invited a number of these boys into the club and treated them to refreshments, rolls, coffee and frankfurters.

This was on Monday, July 21st. The boys were delighted and expressed great desire for some place where they might wait until the "bulldog" was off the press. For the next ten nights refreshments were sold to the boys for a nominal sum, and they were permitted to play such games as checkers until 9.45.

During August I went to New York and visited one of the largest boys' clubs in the country. It has a membership of 6,000. The result of my visit may be best summed up in the words of one who has worked among boys for over twenty years. "It is evident from your own words that you have the right ideas; now the thing is to have a building where you can carry at least some of them into effect."

On September 15th the club was opened. An exhibition of motion pictures was given, followed by a heart-to-heart talk, in which I urged the boys to co-operate with us. I pointed out that we had taken pains to have the building put in splendid condition, but that the toilets, etc., would be useless unless the boys did their part by scrubbing their own hands and faces and keeping themselves neat and clean. I also called attention to the fact that while food would be sold to them at cost, we would expect that part of the money that they had thus saved in the price of their supper would be put into a savings fund, Mr. Calwell, of the Corn Exchange, having kindly offered to see that someone would be at the club once a week to receive funds.

After the refreshments were served, a boy of about seventeen gathered up some of the plates that were left on the table, and calling to the other boys said: "Come on, fellows, gather up the dishes; this is the sort of 'copration' (co-operation) that Mr. Keable wants."

The price of the food has been established practically by the boys themselves. It came about in this way: In July some of the volunteers thought that the sandwiches should be sold for about three cents. This did not meet with my approbation; I thought that five cents would be the right price, so during the evening we circulated amongst the boys and learned their opinion of the food, both as to quality and quantity, and when asked what

Rector's Letter.

My dear Parishioners:

As a rule I prefer to write about the program for the coming month, and things to be done, but I cannot help speaking in this letter of the delightful supper we had on Sunday, October 19th. Forty-two men sat down at a table most charmingly decorated by a committee of young ladies of the Girls' Friendly, with Miss May Claremont and Miss Florence Sherrard at their head. They were assisted by Miss Hines, Miss Shade, Miss May Claremont and Miss Irene Wilder.

At the close of the supper I made a few remarks of welcome and reminiscence, and introduced Col. Frank Wilbur Smith. Col. Smith gave us some most interesting facts about our army in France. Everything was told with great clearness and precision. The most horrifying occurrence of which he told was an incident in a Belgian village early in the German occupation of that country. The German officers told the people that two German soldiers were to be shot for disobeying orders, and ordered the whole population to line themselves up against the wall of the church, in order that they might be edified and instructed by the strictness and severity of German discipline. In the morning accordingly over two hundred people assembled in due order. When the appointed time came the guns of the Germans were turned upon the spectators, and many of them were killed. Col. Smith investigated this story for the United States Government and had all the documents and proofs.

The most amusing story Col. Smith related was that of his embarkation at New York. The military authorities were keeping the matter such a secret that they did not even tell him the wharf until the day before, and then refused to reveal the name of the vessel. Yet when he called a taxicab the driver said, "I take it for granted you are going to sail on the Olympic, at Pier No. so-and-so." The carefully guarded secret was known on the streets of New York! A number of new attendants at the church were present, and everybody expressed himself in favor of a revival of this custom of occasional suppers on Sunday evening. If the young ladies will consent to help us out, we will never call in the assistance of a caterer.

The attendance at the Wednesday noonday service continues to increase. In three weeks it has grown from a hundred to over a hundred and fifty, the number present on the 22nd. Mrs. Keable's recital before the service is evidently a popular feature. I would be very much obliged if our friends would help us to place the placards advertising this service in elevators and in the dressing rooms of the department stores.

I publish elsewhere in this number a circular letter asking for money for the official purse. This purse is one of the agreeable customs of St. Stephen's which makes me the envy of my brother ministers. I have often noticed at various clerical gatherings how little freedom my brother rectors enjoy in pledging their congregations. They seem to have no fund on which they can draw. By the establishment of this fund we save ourselves also from numerous appeals for the various societies of the church—the Altar Society, the Mothers' Meeting, the Shoe Fund, as well as the publishing of the parish paper and office expenses, which are all provided for out of this purse. I hope that the usual amount will be contributed.

The Newsboys' Club continues its work, and the organization of its committees has been completed. The following are the chairmen of the various committees:

Mrs. Barton, Miss Bispham, Mrs. H. Reifsnyder, Jr., Mrs. Hewson, Mrs. H. Reifsnyder, Miss Mary Swift, Miss Mary Kirkpatrick, Mrs. Boyd, Mrs. Lucas, Miss Van Dusen, Mrs. Harper, Miss MacDowell, Miss Shervell, Miss Camphell and Miss Marley.

Mr. Barton, Mr. H. Reifsnyder, Jr., Mr. Hahn, Mr. Bilyen, Mr. Caldwell, Mr. Keable, Mr. Wallace, Mr. Boyd, Dr. Cooper and Mr. Means.

They will invite helpers as the work develops and their services are needed. The Executive Committee is Rev. Mr. Keable, Dr. Cooper, Mr. Luffbarry, Mr. Mearns, Mrs. Reifsnyder, Mrs. Boyd and Mrs. Harper, and also, ex officio, the Treasurer of the Club and the Chairman of the Finance Committee.

The Girls' Friendly has already resumed its sessions, with three new associates. This month the Mothers' Meeting and the Benevolent Society will begin their activities. It is pleasant to record that we will also have the pleasure of receiving new workers in both these organizations.

It is with with great regret that I learn that Miss Elizabeth Washington and Mrs. Clemens have for personal reasons resigned from the Benevolent Society. Miss Washington was one of the workers of longest standing. The Benevolent Society is under a great debt of gratitude to her not only for her faithful discharge of the work of her important post, but also for her contribution towards the reorganization of the Society which took place some ten years ago. She first called Mrs. Grammer's attention to the necessity of a reorganization, and indicated the lines which it ought to follow. At that critical era her loyalty and coöperation were a decisive element in the readjustment which made possible the splendid work which the Benevolent has done in the last few years.

Mrs. Clemens will also be greatly missed from her position at the table with Mrs. Boyd and Mrs. Hansell. Life is so inexorable that these severings must come. New occasions create new duties. But their coworkers will always cherish the memories of the years of happy fellowship in the Benevolent.

On the second Sunday in October, the 12th instant, I preached in the morning on civic duties and responsibilities. In the course of the sermon I commended to the generosity of the congregation the four great organizations that were making a drive to secure the funds for a year, the Bureau of Municipal Research, the Society of Civil Service Reform, for better housing, and for child protection and education. At the end I dwelt at some length on the services that the Inter-Church Federation had rendered the community during the war, and explained the new plan for making it a Federation of Churches. Congregations are requested to join by vote of the proper body, and to elect their ministers and two lay members to represent them. They are also asked to make contributions to support the Federation's office and to finance its work. Over $4,000 is required, and I expressed the hope that St. Stephen's might contribute $200, and enable me to speak with weight in exhorting other congregations to give.

At the close of the sermon I recognized Mr. Joseph B. Van Dusen, Jr., the rector's warden, who offered the following resolution, which was put to the vote, and adopted by the congregation:

"Resolved, That St. Stephen's Church hereby agrees to unite with the Inter-Church Federation of Philadelphia, and authorizes the rector to appoint the lay members who shall unite with him in representing his congregation."

On the following Sunday special envelopes were placed in the pews for contributions to St. Stephen's subscription to the Federation. The members of one family deeply interested in municipal reform have sent me generous checks; but I have not yet learned that the congregation as a whole care as much about the matter as I hoped they did. It is a great mistake to imagine that small gifts are not desired. A sum raised by many small contributions means much more than the same sum from one or two generous people. Raised in the first way, it means so much more in interest and public support. I hope that more contributions may yet come in.

I am sure that the people of St. Stephen's are much gratified that Bishop Garland has declined the election to the diocese of Utah.

I joined with some thirty other clergymen of the diocese in a telegram intimating unmistakably our wish that he should decline. I followed it up by a long letter. I have no doubt that he received many of the same character from the clergy and laity. Bishop Garland hath borne his faculties so meek, and hath been so clear in his great office, that the diocese does not know how it can do without him. We are glad to find that he can not do without us.

Now that suffragan bishops are given a vote in the House of Bishops, and Bishop Burch is elevated from his suffragan bishopric to the great metropolitan diocese of New York, a suffragan bishop is almost on a par with a coadjutor bishop. In some respects he has the advantage of the coadjutor, since he need not wait for a living man's shoes; but can move on to some other diocese, if a way opens.

The papers are, of course, mistaken in publishing the statement that Bishop Garland would remain in Pennsylvania if he were assured of election as coadjutor. Bishop Garland never made that assertion. He knows perfectly well that no one can give such an assurance. The coadjutor must be elected by the Diocesan Convention, and no one has authority to speak for it.

We shall give Bishop Garland a hearty welcome when he comes to St. Stephen's, the first Sunday in February, to administer the rite of confirmation. When you receive this, the General Convention will have adjourned.

The reports in the newspapers do not indicate that anything of a radical or far-reaching character was accomplished. The changes in the Prayer Book are moderate and unobjectionable. A strange and timid procedure, called the Concordat, aiming to give Episcopal ordination to clergymen, who do not believe in it, but will accept it, in order that they may be able to give the communion to people who will not accept that sacrament except from Episcopally ordained ministers, can not be finally agreed to until A. D. 1922. By that time the dust will have fallen, and people will see the facts in their true relation. We shall discover that the Congregationalist ministers, as a body, take no interest in the scheme, and the ministers who crave Episcopal ordination as an equipment will never come into our Church. Perhaps I should not give an opinion without hearing the debate, or at least the report of the arguments which our deputies will bring back. The newspaper reports are meagre. But I have talked with Congregationalist ministers and find that such reordination does not appeal to them. Dr. Manning was zealous for this Concordat. But he has shown himself so manifestly ignorant of the opinions and movements in the Protestant world, that he is as unsafe a guide in such matters as was Clarendon for the Royalists, when he returned to England after his long exile and directed the policy of his party, in an era with which he was unacquainted, by the conception of a former age.

The machinery of the Church was strengthened by the creation of a central administrative body, with Bishop Gailer, of Tennessee, at its head.

Under present conditions our printers tell us that the copy for the press must come in much earlier. Any article for THE PARISH NEWS must be in Mr. Keable's hands on the Saturday week for the first Sunday in the month. Please note this.

With this month all societies and activities are in full blast. I invite those who have not found a field of work in the parish to visit our various societies and to enlist in some of them.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

The Church Work Fund.

October 21, 1919.

My dear Parishioners:

This is my annual letter about the Church Work Fund. There are so many drives at this time that I hate to write a letter asking for money, but unfortunately the income of the Church is not one of those sums which have been enhanced by high prices. In a sense it has been diminished, since the purchasing power of the dollar has greatly decreased.

I am sorry to say that I am considerably in debt for the publishing of THE PARISH NEWS. The cost of the publication of THE PARISH NEWS was almost equal to the entire amount that was given me. Of course, the advertisements cut this down somewhat, but we issued a number of specially large editions for the sake of Old St. Stephen's Club, and because our enlarged work required a larger paper, and additional copies were often asked for. At the same time we had the usual demands; for example, the appropriations for the Mothers' Meeting, the Altar Society, etc. The cost of running the office in stationery alone is greatly increased. Whatever arrangements or readjustments may be made in the work, I do not see how I can get along without this discretionary fund. May I ask you to send me your contribution as early as possible?

I think people give with more cheerfulness when it is brought home to them that the cause for which they are contributing is prospering. There are many signs of growth and new vigor in the church. You have doubtless read in THE PARISH NEWS of our interesting Newsboys' Club. It will not be a source of any expense to the congregation, but will maintain itself through a finance committee, in the same way as Old St. Stephen's Club. It is a municipal enterprise which we are privileged to conduct.

Nothing gives me more pleasure than the Wednesday Noonday Service. It is now conducted on the same lines as the noonday services in Lent, except that we keep it up on Wednesdays throughout the year. The average attendance through the summer was 75, and on last Wednesday, although the weather was threatening, the attendance was over 125. Perhaps some of you saw the commendatory notice of this service in St. Andrew's Cross.

Much has been done for our church in the past year, and I know that we all feel the responsibility of showing our gratitude for this wonderful assistance by making the church largely useful.

Yours very cordially,

CARL E. GRAMMER.

Rector's Letter.

MY DEAR PARISHIONERS:

It seems to me that the great task of the winter should be the gathering of the men of the congregation into some effective Brotherhood. Before Col. McKeehan sailed for Europe, he and I had a conference, and we agreed that it would be well to break up St. Andrew's Brotherhood and to found a society of our own more flexible lines.

Some years ago, in looking over some new theological books, my eye fell upon a commentary on the Psalms that showed such profound scholarship and such clear thinking that I was perfectly charmed with it. The author was Rev. Dr. W. F. Cobb, of London. As I read the book I became more and more delighted with his treatment, and admired increasingly his combination of critical acumen and religious earnestness. So I wrote him a letter which led to a very pleasant reply, and some correspondence between us. He is a Church of England clergyman, the rector of St. Ethelberta's Church in London, and a preacher of ability. He sent me some of his other books, and told me of a league which he had formed in his parish, called the League of the Kingdom. The underlying ideas were, first: that there is a want of spiritual leadership, a frequent absence of an ideal on the part of many who desire the material and social improvement of their fellows, and a consequent pessimistic feeling with which they look at life in general; and second: the absence of a sufficient sense on the part of men generally that the work in which they engage should be conducive to the coming of the Kingdom of God. Third: the need of a more emphatic assertion by the Christian Churches of spiritual life as the constitutive principle of a Christian Church. Fourth: the false idealism which is established wherever religion and morals, sacred and secular, Church and State, work and worship, are set in opposition to one another.

Some of these things seem to be stated in terms more applicable to England than to ourselves; but the underlying principles of this League of the Kingdom, it seems to me, will be useful to us at St. Stephen's. At the meeting on Advent Sunday. It was decided that such a League should be formed in St. Stephen's Church. I invite all the men of the congregation to join. I hope that we will be able to find some field of activity in which to work together. First, of course, there is the Newsboys' Club, giving a splendid field. It would be well to have more men working in that Club. Secondly, I have always felt that we ought to do something for the prisons of the city. The laymen of the church ought to undertake to do some work for their inmates. The mere presence of visitors in prisons is a tonic influence upon the administration as well as a source of solace to the prisoners. Then we ought to have a group looking after new people, and inviting them to come into our Brotherhood. We ought to have regular suppers and fellowship meetings. I trust that something will be done to solidify and energize the men of our congregation. Let us join in the Nation-Wide Campaign in stirring up our members to become efficient; not merely receivers of spiritual influences, but imparters of them to others.

Although the working classes are now enjoying a season of high wages, the dependent classes are worse off than ever before. Those who receive pensions, or those who live on very small incomes find themselves in great destitution. Therefore, I think we shall need as much money as ever for our Christmas baskets. Perhaps we may not send out so many as heretofore. This will be determined by Miss Lewis and the Committee, after investigation, but it is certain that the baskets themselves will cost considerably more. We, therefore, will be much obliged if the congregation will bear in mind our Christmas baskets. I reappoint the usual committee, consisting of Mr. Van Dusen, Mr. Reifsnyder and Mr. Carrigan.

For various reasons there has been a falling off in the membership of the Altar Society. I would be very much obliged if any ladies of the church who can assist in the work of this Society would send me their names. The special task of this Guild is to see that the chancel is in good order for every service; that the places are found in the books, the proper hangings are on the pulpit and reading desk, and on Communion Sundays that all the necessary arrangements are properly made. Groups of ladies take the work in turn, each being on duty for a certain time. When a worker is on duty it is necessary that she should come to the church half an hour before the service to make the requisite arrangements. Miss Eisenbrey is the superintendent of the Society, and Mrs. William B. Campbell the secretary. I would be very glad to have anyone who would consider it confer with these ladies or with me.

On February 1st, at 11 o'clock, Bishop Garland will visit St. Stephen's Church to administer the rite of confirmation. I have already the names of several persons who intend to be confirmed. I would be glad to learn of any other candidates for confirmation. The class will not be assembled until January, but I am very anxious to have the names.

As for the Nation-Wide Campaign, I am anxious to fall in with it as far as possible. Certainly we ought to be able to participate in its zeal for greater energy and spirituality on the part of church members. The chief need in the Church is not money. I think it is unfortunate that this pecuniary drive should be part of the movement. In the long run it is destructive of the spirit of self-help to run the Church on a communistic basis. Parishes ought to be stimulated to provide for their own needs instead of being solicited to make known their wants to a central bureau, with the understanding that if they stand by the bureau with their gifts, the bureau will look after their needs. I do not believe in communism in a church any more than I do in the State. Our whole legal system is based on the assumption that the churches are supported by the people who worship in them, and that the obligation of raising money is upon them and their agents or vestries. This Nation-Wide Campaign in its financial features has not been carefully thought out, nor is it in accord with the parochial system of the Episcopal Church. But if we broaden it out and spiritualize it, we can get a great deal out of it. We shall not regard it in St. Stephen's as a drive to plant an Episcopal Church on every crossroads, but as an effort to arouse Christian people to the need of living more Christlike lives. Let us show our faith by our works, and let us not be content with membership in the church, but strive to be fruitful in good works. In that spirit we shall celebrate December 7th. Thus far we will go. I have asked Miss Bell to act as our representative among the women, and Col. Frank Wilbur Smith as our liason officer among the men.

It was a disappointment that the repairs on the organ were not completed by Thanksgiving Day. As everyone has doubtless observed, the chimes have been placed in the echo of the organ, but the full repairs have been hindered by the same causes that operate in all departments of our industrial life. The organ-builder assures me that his task will be completed before Christmas. We shall then have some special musical services in order to manifest the full beauty of the new instrument. I do not believe that any church in the city will have an organ to compare with it.

On December 4th in the afternoon the Sons of the American Revolution will have their annual service at St. Stephen's Church. Hitherto it has been the custom of this Society to restrict itself to churches of the colonial era, but this year it has accepted an invitation to our church. The generosity of the late Horace Magee has perhaps drawn the society to a church with which his family are so closely connected. It will be a noteworthy occasion, and I trust there will be a large attendance. The Society has honored me by asking me to preach their annual sermon.

Some mention ought to be made of the free supper to the Newsboys on Thanksgiving Day. Over eighty of them sat down to fried oysters, potato salad, coffee, celery, pumpkin pie, candy and ice cream. Those in charge of the Club understand the art of fishing, and bait their hooks with skilfully selected flies.

At the vestry meeting in November Mr. J. Hunter Ewing resigned the accounting wardenship, having retired from business. The vestry felt that the proper way to express their gratitude to him for his faithful and efficient service was to relieve him of a responsibility which he was no longer in a position to bear. They, therefore, received his resignation.

I want to add my own personal word as the Rector, to the vestry's official resolution. Mr. Ludovic Cleeman bore for years the responsibilities of the accounting warden of this church. By reason of his assiduity and devotion to his task there gradually devolved upon him any number of important duties. For example, he was chairman of the Board of Admission to the Burd School, and was practically the finance committee as well as the treasurer of the church. Consequently, when he died, it was a most serious matter to find a successor in his office. Everyone felt the greatest relief when Mr. Ewing yielded to my strong urging—I might say pleading—and accepted the position. He brought to the office the training of a banker, and introduced a new system into our administration. When a reserve fund was created in order to enable the church to pay its expenses every year and not carry our deficits, no one contributed more generously than Mr. Ewing. Indeed I think it is here proper to record that he was the most generous individual subscriber, and that the vestry insisted that he should reduce his contribution to the general level. But while thus heartily in favor of paying as we went, he also knew how to study seasons, and to conform to the exigencies of the situation. I cannot say how much it has meant to me all these years to have such a constant friend, such a wise counsellor and such an able financier in this important post. We are all delighted that he continues with us in the vestry, to give us the benefit of his counsel and the pleasure of his companionship.

In Mr. E. W. Moore, who succeeds him, we also have a banker, and we feel confident that he will walk in the same paths. He brings to his task youth and enthusiasm. He proved his skill as a collector in our drive for the ambulance, and has also shown his efficiency in the admirable way in which he made the arrangements for the Entertainment Committee of Old St. Stephen's Club. His father and his uncle, Mr. Samuel Moore, have for years been staunch friends and upholders of the charities of St. Stephen's.

Mr. W. H. Hansell has resigned the secretaryship of the vestry, a position which he has held for some ten years, with a really remarkable regularity of attendance upon the meetings. Mr. Charles S. Calwell has been elected as his successor.

May I be permitted to repeat my usual Christmas admonition, and remind the members of the congregation that it is a real benevolence to shop early and lessen the pressure upon the clerks just about Christmas? I confess that I am often an offender myself in this way, but as the old woman said to Carlyle, asking an alms, "I am an old struggler." So I am going to keep up struggling, and I invite my congregation to do the same.

I am glad to welcome some new members to the church, and I would like them to realize that no one is getting the full benefit of a church unless he joins some of the societies; and I also exhort the older members to introduce the new members to the work. Let us bring them in.

I accepted an invitation last month to make an address at the supper given to the enlisted men who went out from the parish of St. James' Church, Lancaster. Over seventy went out from that parish, and not a single one was killed. At the close of the supper a little medal was presented to each man from the congregation. It was a most enjoyable occasion. I hope that our Brotherhood will get up something of the kind for our enlisted men before many weeks have passed. Until then I shall postpone any formal address of welcome to them. I congratulate heartily the friends and relations of those who have returned, and I extend my sympathy to those whose sense of bereavement is heightened by these recurring anniversaries. It is sad that they are not with us, but it is good that they laid down their lives in such a noble cause. God grant that we may reap the fruits of our victory, and that having begun a good work, we may carry it on to perfection.

These are hard times, but whatever may be the state of our finances, we are all going to do our best for the children. I think we will all agree with Mr. Roosevelt in this passage in his letters to his children:

"I wonder whether there ever can come in life a thrill of greater exaltation and rapture than that which comes to one between the ages of say six and fourteen, when the library door is thrown open and you walk in to see all the gifts, like a materialized fairy land, arranged on your special table."

To this passage I should like to add that parents of young children have just as great a thrill at such time. It seems to me the most rapturous Christmases of my life, certainly those which I now remember most vividly, were the days when the children were young and demonstrative. When tears of joy stood in their eyes, we knew that our celebration was a supreme success. Let the ancient customs prevail, as they said at Nicaea. Let us keep up the happy Christmas festivities.

I hope we may have a joyous celebration in the Sunday School in the Newsboys' Club, and in the homes of the congregation.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

Through the generosity of sixteen members of the Parish instruments have been provided for 25 members of the Boys' Band. The Band was organized in October, with Mr. H. Fenton Cooke as Instructor, and is making remarkably good progress. Mr. Keable is now anxious to start a Girls' Orchestra. The girls at present meet on Wednesday with Miss Sherrard.

The Brass Band which was organized in October, is making very good progress under the direction of Mr. H. Fenton Cooke, Instructor.

The Finance Committee of Old St. Stephen's Club for Newsboys, acknowledges with thanks the contribution of $25.00, which was placed in the Alms Basins on November 16, 1919.

The Woman's Auxiliary and Nation-Wide Campaign.

In compliance with the request of Dr. Grammer, the November meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held on the evening of Thursday, November 20th, at 8 o'clock. On motion, the usual exercises and procedure of business were suspended in order that the illustrated lecture on, "The Diocese at Work," might be given in full by Rev. Llewellyn N. Caley, D.D., the Dean of the Convocation of North Philadelphia and a recently returned delegate from the General Convention.

This lecture is most interesting and instructive, giving information about many of the churches, missions and institutions throughout the diocese, with which every member of the church should be familiar. It also forms a good foundation for a better understanding of the Nation-Wide Campaign, the organized effort now being carried on to inform and interest every one in the mission of the Church. The meetings in this cause held frequently at the Church House, are most inspiring and literature on the subject may be obtained there gratis.

When facing the facts that there are sixty millions of people with no definite church association, twelve millions of children with no religious care or teaching, Bolshevist Sunday Schools thriving, and in our own city two Mormon churches and Sunday Schools flourishing, it is not surprising that under these circumstances so much social and industrial unrest should exist, and we, as church members should be aroused, and by prayer first and action later, try to do what we can to ameliorate these conditions.

Sunday, December 7th, will be the Every Member Campaign, when it is earnestly hoped that all members will attend a service so that our churches throughout the country may be filled on that day with thoughtful Christians who are alive to the emergency and will dedicate themselves anew to the service of God.

This is a nation-wide awakening to our responsibilities, and the co-operation of each one is vital to the work of the church.

LAURA BELL.

Through the usual Christmas kindness of Mr. Clement Restein the committee were able to add 213 lbs. of chickens, through the kindness of Mr. Craig Atmore, 125 mince pies, and Mr. Charles S. Calwell's kindness made it possible for the committee to place a bag of sugar in each basket. The Committee feels that all that received the baskets had a most generous and enjoyable Christmas dinner.

Average cost of each basket, with articles contributed, $6.27 per basket.

Miss Kate Lewis, Church Worker, Distributor.

Yours respectfully,
Howard Reifsnyder,
Jos. B. Van Dusen, Jr.
James Carrigan,

Rector's Letter.

My dear Parishioners:

I wish you a Happy New Year. I trust that it may be a year of progress and successful achievement. Our last year was in many respects the best we have had together. We closed the work of Old St. Stephen's Club for Enlisted Men after a splendid record, and in the summer we discovered and in the autumn opened up a most promising field of endeavor among the newsboys. New doors of opportunity are standing open on every hand.

Nothing has encouraged me more in all my ministry than the success of our Wednesday Noonday Services. The splendid attendance makes one realize that the service is not a strain upon the loyalty of our members. There are a great many services in parish churches which maintain a feeble life through the support of a few devoted parishioners who are anxious to stand by the clergyman and reward his efforts with some encouragement. It always seemed to me a particularly pitiable kind of ministration. It is manifest that the attendants at our noonday service are present for no such reason, but come because they receive help and encouragement. Our average number is close to 150. The other day a girl insisted on putting a contribution into the box, saying that she would rather go without her lunch than lose the service. I wish that I had been standing close by, for I should have said to her that I preferred that she should have both her lunch and the service. While we value these free will offerings, we are not reduced to such an extremity that it is necessary for our attendants to go without their luncheon. Yet I have no doubt the service meant more to the girl on account of her self-denial.

I believe that many people are coming to love the old church more and more. The other day an enlisted man visited the Sunday School building, hoping to find the Club still in operation. He was disappointed, but he took an interest in the Newsboys' Club. As he moved off he was seen to pat a tower, and heard to say, "You're a good old church; you've been good to me all right."

In finances this year we surpassed all our previous records. A deficit we had been accumulating during the war which had at last reached the amount of $4,000 was swept off as a Thanksgiving for Victory. One-half more than the usual amount was contributed for parochial maintenance. While we did not attain the missionary apportionment, we contributed $2,400 which is considerably more than last year. Moreover, we gave nearly a thousand dollars to the Episcopal Hospital on Thanksgiving Day. We doubled our Christmas contribution to the Pension and Disabled Clergy Fund, and we collected the largest amount for the Christmas baskets, and gave out the most generous baskets in all our history.

This success is chiefly due to the method and vigor introduced into our envelope system by the Finance Committee. It has gotten out a new card; I suppose everybody in the congregation has received a copy of it, and I hope all the old members will use it, and that new names may be added to our list of envelope users. I don't know a more liberal form of pledge. You are asked to fix the amount, and into the pledge is introduced the qualifying words, "if I am able," for we have no desire to lord it over the consciences of anyone. All that we wish is to stimulate each to do his best.

I want the men of the congregation particularly to bear in mind that on Wednesday, January 14th, at 6.30, there will be a subscription supper, for all the men of the church, and especially for those who are associating themselves with the League of the Kingdom. A committee has been put in charge of the arrangements and you will doubtless hear from them. Please save this evening for the supper.

There are one or two new workers who have come in through the Nation-Wide Campaign, and perhaps more may be secured. The documents I have received from the Central Bureau have been innumerable. The most interesting communication relates to the election of a vestry. I will quote it in full:

"Experience has shown that it is very desirable to have vestries elected in groups of three or four, each group to serve for three or four years as the case may be. The fact remains, however, that the elections held on Easter Monday are usually a mere farce, and no one except under unusual circumstances desires to vote against the re-election of retiring members, and it is often difficult for the retiring members to escape re-election, even if they so prefer. A simple device which is likely to produce a real interest in the Easter Monday elections is to declare the retiring vestrymen ineligible to re-election until one year after their terms have expired. This has the effect of opening the field to any number of candidates and also enables the dropping of former members who have lost interest in the work of the Church."

This, it will be observed, is along the line that I advocated several years ago for our church. I had an experience of this method in my parish in Cincinnati and also in my parish in Norfolk. Two of the vestrymen were dropped every year, and remained ineligible for a year or more, as the case might be. A system ought to be devised whereby in time all the men in the church of vestry stature and attainments should gradually be passed through that governing body. In that way they will be familiarized with the work of the church and take a new interest in it. To my great regret this proposition on my part was misunderstood. It was not intended as an indication of any lack of satisfaction with the vestry that I had, or as a reflection upon any vestryman or vestrymen. In all the years of my ministry I have been very fortunate in my relations with my vestries. The intercourse has always been of the most cordial character. I never have been able to understand why some people criticize our vestry system. My own idea is that the powers of the vestry ought to be enlarged. Instead of being as it is, only the financial guardian of the Church, it would be well to make its members as much as possible, religious leaders. But in order to fulfill this function, they ought to be the real choice of the congregation. This method would produce a healthy circulation in the body.

I notice also another measure that the Nation-Wide Campaign recommends which we have long practiced:

"Another step which has been found of great advantage in many parishes is the holding of parish meetings, preferably after a parish supper, at least once each year. It is found that such meetings on the one hand give the members of the parish a knowledge of the parish affairs and an opportunity to express their opinion as to matters of parish policy; and on the other hand it gives the members of the parish an opportunity to be thrown in contact with each other, thus meeting complaints that the members of our churches often have no opportunity for social meetings with each other."

It will be seen that in both these matters St. Stephen's is at the head of the procession, and has not been obliged to wait for direction from New York or from anywhere else in order to find the road. One of the great troubles about this Nation-Wide Campaign is that it seems to be assumed that everybody is to stop thinking except a central bureau that will do all the planning and contriving for the rest of us. That is, of course, the bureaucratic idea, but a great deal more power is really secured by encouraging people to act on their own initiative; by a spirit of liberty and enterprise. The effort in our church to make everybody keep step to the same tune and to conform to some authoritative norm involves a great waste of energy, and means that only one mind and one will are really to be operative. It is not in harmony with our national spirit or institutions.

I hope that we shall be able to secure good speakers for Lent. There have been many obstacles in the road of a speedy procurement of the right men. I expect, however, we shall secure our usual quota of prophetic messengers.

On February 1st, Septuagesima Sunday, Bishop Garland will administer the rite of Confirmation at the Church at 11 o'clock. On the four Friday evenings preceding, beginning January 9th, I will meet the class for confirmation at 8 o'clock in the vestry. While I am gratified if people can attend the class, and I make it a point with young people, I do not exact this of the older candidates. Young people need information, but what the older people need is not information as to the character of the Church or the nature of the step they are taking, but encouragement. These two classes have somewhat different needs. I am willing to treat them in different ways. I will be glad to see anyone who is thinking of taking this step at my home, or I will call myself if such a visit is more convenient.

After consulting with the most faithful attendants in the congregation on the Saints' Day Services, I have decided to try a new experiment for the next six months. The Saints' Day Services are miserably attended, and this general neglect is, doubtless, largely due to their irregularity. Few people wish to attend a Communion on Monday or Saturday—certainly the latter date is very trying for the clergy with their Sunday preparation. If the feast falls on Wednesday, there is now a regular prayer service and address at 12.30. Let us then, beginning with Thursday, January 1st, have a celebration at 10.30 A. M. every Thursday till Easter. We shall by that date discern whether this service will fulfill any useful purpose. Being every Thursday there will be no uncertainty as to the time. People who shun the long Communion service on the first Sunday of the month, will have a chance to attend a quiet devotional service. Please make a note of this change. I hope the new plan will not entail too much service from the Altar Society. May I again point out that I should be glad to have more volunteers for the work of this Guild?

The situation in the labor world has made it impossible for Mr. Haskell, our accomplished organ builder, to complete the alterations to the organ at the time specified. I hope, however, that before this letter appears the specifications of the contract may be fulfilled, and that in the course of January we may have a great opening service of the kind with which Miss Magee has made us familiar. Everyone is delighted with the chimes. It is charming, indeed, to hear the hymn played over by them before the congregation begins to sing. It seems like a heavenly invitation to join in song.

Speaking of celebrations, I ought to mention our gratification in having the Pennsylvania Society of Sons of the Revolution hold their annual service at St. Stephen's in December. The church never looked better. The flags were glorious, and the music was entrancing. The large congregation expressed so much pleasure at the beauty of the church that I hope the Society will put St. Stephen's down on the list of churches which they will visit in regular sequence. I learn that many features of the annual services are due to the loving thoughtfulness of Mr. James Magee, and I have no doubt that it was a sense of loyalty to his memory that brought the organization to the church with which his family is so closely associated.

On Christmas Day the Misses Bell surprised the newsboys by making the canteen of the club free for that night. Some such feast is given by them every Christmas in memory of their mother. This year the recipients were our little merchants of the street. Ninety-eight of them rejoiced in the good things. It was a beautiful memorial.

THE PARISH NEWS is obliged to go to press so early nowadays that I am unable to give an account of the Christmas celebration. A few hours after I write this there will be the Sunday School entertainment, and on Tuesday, when this monthly is in the press, the newsboys will have their Christmas dinner. That will be a joyous occasion, I am sure; that night many a little boy will regret the limited dimensions of an important organ.

In closing let me thank the members of the congregation for the numerous cards and the loving messages that I received from them; my heart has been warmed by their perusal. I sent out a little card myself, and I publish it here for the sake of our records. Unfortunately we had not enough printed; I could have disposed of many more. I received one letter which said that the card had been pasted up as a year's motto:

CHRISTMAS, 1919.

MY DEAR PARISHIONER:

A Christmas Greeting and best wishes for the New Year! Let us step forth cheerily to meet the unknown, confident that He who helped us in the Past, will sustain and guide us through the Future.

Let the out-going reformer among us appreciate that "the soul of all reform is the reform of the soul," and let the self-centred mystic realize that "Heaven doth with us as we with torches do,

Not light them for themselves."

Let us cultivate kind thoughts, and prove that our inward life is not a delusive dream but a potent reality by speaking kind words and doing helpful deeds.

Let us show our gratitude for the gift of life, and for the manifestation of God in Jesus Christ, by highly resolving with God's help to follow more faithfully the Master. Let us make our Church a congregation of fellow-workers unto the Kingdom of God.

Your friend and Fellow-worker,

CARL E. GRAMMER.

Here are some verses that I think would make a lovely motto for the year:

"So much to do! so little done!
Ah, yesternight I saw the sun
Sink beamless down the vaulted grey,
The ghastly ghost of yesterday.

"So little done! so much to do!
Each morning breaks on conflicts new.
Yet eager, brave, I'll join the fray,
And fight the battle of to-day.

"So much to do! so little done!
Yet when it is o'er and vict'ry won,
Ah then my soul, all pain and sorrow
Will end in that great glad to-morrow."

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

There were twenty-nine members present at the December meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary. We have never had finer reports from the various committees of money spent and boxes sent to Domestic, Colored and Indian Missionaries.

Miss Magee has already collected $123.50 for the United Offering.

Miss Earle read an interesting paper on Liberia and made an urgent plea for St. Timothy's Hospital where our Miss Conway is stationed.

Miss Emlen read a paper on the Church Mission of Help. This organization, with headquarters at the City Mission, offers help to the girl who is in trouble—whether she needs medical or financial assistance, or help to obtain a suitable boarding place or a position or recreation.

A plea was made for new members, for money for another worker, and for the general work, and contributions of books, magazines and clothing. The monthly expenses are from $50 to $100 and the address is 225 South Third Street.

The next meeting of the Auxiliary will be held in the Parish House, January 15th.

BEULAH E. HOLLAR,
Secretary.

At the December meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary an interesting report was made by Miss Anne Magnus Earle, of which the following is the precis:

LIBERIA.

A special interest attaches to Liberia, both from its history and as the scene of our first foreign missionary work.

In the early years of the last century, when slavery was the all-absorbing question in our country, one of the problems of the Abolitionists was the ultimate disposal of the negro when freed. One solution which commended itself to many was the founding of a free state in Africa, his native home, in which the black man might govern himself. Accordingly, 1816, the American Colonization Society secured a tract of land on the West Coast and sent out some shiploads of freedmen to populate it.

The theory was a beautiful one, but the conditions which confronted the little colony were difficult in the extreme.

Untrained in self-reliance, between the sea on one hand and the savage tribes of the interior on the other, and largely left to their own resources, the people were at first hard pressed for existence.

Surely, it speaks well for them that after twenty-five years the colony proclaimed its independence as the Republic of Liberia and took a place—though a modest one—among the nations.

Liberia occupies a strip of coast some three hundred miles in length between the British Colony of Sierra Leone and the Ivory Coast. It runs back from a hundred to two hundred miles from the interior, having an area of 41,000 square miles.

The climate, of course, is tropical and has had a bad name in the past as being unhealthy for white people. Our white missionaries at Cape Mount, however, have proved that with proper precautions the risk of life is not greater than in any country similarly situated. The soil is fertile and is capable of producing all the necessities of life.

The total population is about 2,060,000, only 60,000 of whom are Americo-Liberians.

The constitution is modeled after our own, all men considered free and equal before the law. Elections are conducted by ballot and every male citizen possessing real estate has the right of suffrage.

The president is elected for two years, the senators for four, the representatives for two. English is the official language.

When the Church in 1820 established a Missionary Society, the little band of transplanted freedmen in Africa seemed the most natural object of its first efforts, and now, after a century has elapsed much has been accomplished by the devoted men and women, not a few of whom gave their lives for the cause.

The Church has educated fully two-thirds of the men of Liberia—presidents, chief justices, senators, missionaries—and trained the women who are their wives.

Cape Mount, the only station at which we have had white missionaries, is in some respects the most important. At this station the Rev. Nathan Matthews founded Saint John's School for boys. At the House of Bethany, Miss Ridgely and Miss Seaman are doing the same service for native girls, while Miss Conway, at Saint Timothy's Hospital, ministers to the bodily ills of all the country-side.

But we are specially interested in Cape Mount because Miss Conway, in charge of St. Timothy's, was a member of St. Stephen's, and surely we should do all we can to encourage and uphold her work.

We make a very earnest appeal for the hospital which is greatly in need of the following list of articles: Sheets, single bed size; pillow cases, 18x36 inches; cotton towels; clothing for patients, any size, bright colors; slips for children; bandages, sponges and smaller dressings; wash cloths, soaps of all kinds; picture books, dolls and toys; money for instruments and surgical supplies; physician's samples.

Any of these articles may be sent to Miss Anne M. Earle, Chairman of Committee, St. Stephen's Parish House, before April 15, 1920.

The King's Daughters

Will have their next meetings January 7th and January 21st in the Guild Room of the Parish House, at a quarter of 8 o'clock.

We wish to correct an error printed in last month's PARISH NEWS.

The interest received from Mr. Patton's Estate was $31.80, instead of $13.81, as was printed.

This Circle has been very busy sewing on little dresses and skirts to be given to children who need them most.

The members donated $3.00 to the Episcopal Hospital and $5.00 for Christmas baskets.

Shoe Fund.

Money received in December from Church Fund (through Dr. Grammer)	$50 00
From Miss Laura Bell	1 00
From those receiving shoes	6 50
Total	$57 50
Have expended for shoes	$31 69
Balance	$25 81

Have given out fifteen pairs of shoes, and half dozen pairs of overshoes. Last Tuesday three children who could not be fitted with shoes on hand were taken to a store and on paying for the three pairs, ten cents was left from a ten dollar bill, much to the children's astonishment.

However, Santa Claus was not going to desert the children, even with the high cost of shoes.

Last Tuesday I found two large boxes of shoes waiting to be opened and one box of overshoes. It certainly was good of Santa Claus, and we all hope he may have a very Happy New Year. I send our thanks.

The Christmas season in the Sunday School was a most successful one. The Sunday before we were able, with motion pictures, to pictorially show the first Christmas. The week-day festival night, on Friday, the night after Christmas, was crowded with the children, their relatives and friends. The play, after six weeks' rehearsal, was only excelled by the joy that closed the evening. The following Sunday the Christmas story was depicted with slides from paintings by the great masters on The Holy Birth.

Frederick B. Keable, Treasurer.

Rector's Letter.

My dear Parishioners:

An early Easter shortens the number of Sundays after Epiphany, and unless we are on our guard will lessen the amount of our church work. There is apt to be a general let-down after Easter. For this reason I have established the custom of having the Parish Meeting on a fixed date, the second Wednesday in May.

I wonder how many people in the congregation understand how the church year is lengthened or shortened to adjust it to the variations in the date of Easter. The first change is made in the Sundays after Epiphany. When Easter comes late there are many Sundays after Epiphany. If it is early the number of Sundays after Epiphany is diminished. In one respect it is very unfortunate that the Epiphany Sundays are treated in this way because one of the best collects in the Prayer Book is the collect for the sixth Sunday after Epiphany, which runs as follows:

> "O God, whose blessed Son was manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil, and make us the sons of God, and heirs of eternal life: Grant us, we beseech thee, that, having this hope, we may purify ourselves, even as he is pure; that, when he shall appear again with power and great glory, we may be made like unto Him in his eternal and glorious kingdom; where with thee, O Father, and thee, O Holy Ghost, he liveth and reigneth ever, one God, world without end.—Amen."

Inasmuch as Christmas is a fixed date, and there are four Sundays in Advent, before Christmas, it is manifest that there must be some device to make the adjustment between the Sundays after Trinity and the Advent Sundays. This is accomplished by cutting off some of the Sundays after Trinity when Easter comes late, and increasing the number when Easter comes early, always with the understanding that if there be more than 25 Sundays after Trinity, the services of some of those Sundays that were omitted after the Epiphany shall be taken in to supply so many as are wanting. The Collect beginning "Stir up, we beseech thee," is always used on the Sunday next before Advent.

I do not know that this information is of any great value except that it enables people to handle their prayer books intelligently. In old times it was necessary, but now that we have notice boards hung up in the churches, people follow the direction on the board blindly. After a while all such information will only be in the possession of experts, like the understanding of the golden letter in the scheme for calculating Easter, which still encumbers our prayer books.

The next meeting of the League of the Kingdom, the Men's Club of St. Stephen's, has been put down for February 11th, the Wednesday before Ash Wednesday. The last occasion was such a great success that everybody is looking forward with lively anticipations to this next meeting. I hope some one will present a scheme for the registration of the members. While the organization is to be loose and flexible, some organization is necessary. It is, of course, understood that we do not limit our membership to the attendants on St. Stephen's or to members of the Episcopal Church. Any man who would like to join with us is heartily welcome.

I learn from Mr. Keable that carpentering is to be taught the boys in the Newsboys' Club. This is a distinct step forward. It is very desirable that we should be able to make some arrangement to secure better sleeping quarters for some of these lads.

Elsewhere in this number appears a notice of the Mission Study Class. I hope that it may be well attended.

A list of the speakers at the Noonday Lenten Services, which also appears in this number, shows that we have been fortunate in securing a fine list of speakers. I hope the members of our own congregation will make a point of coming to St. Stephen's if they attend a weekday service anywhere. Loyalty to the church would seem to exact this. The Rev. Charles Wood is so well known in Philadelphia that I am sure we will have large congregations during his week; but all these gentlemen who come to us at a sacrifice of time and a great expenditure of energy are entitled to good audiences.

As I announced last Sunday the Woman's Auxiliary has appointed a committee, consisting of Mrs. Grammer, Mrs. C. Watson McKeehan and Mrs. Samuel Austin, to raise funds for the erection in the Mahan School, of which Dr. Benjamin Ancell is the principal, of a hall which they hope may be called St. Stephen's Hall. The letter is published elsewhere.

I heartily endorse this appeal and hope that all the guarantors of the special fund to meet the expenses of St. Stephen's Church will follow the example of several gentlemen who have already donated the amount that they had pledged themselves to give to that fund if called on, for the erection of this hall. You remember the treasurer of the church announced that he would not call upon the guarantors this year.

It will interest the congregation to know that Mr. James Milburn Bennett, one of our communicants, has accepted the office of Director of Publicity for the Diocese. He resigned a position on the staff of the Evening Ledger in order to render our Church this service. His office is in the Church House, Twelfth and Walnut streets, Department of Publicity. He would be glad to receive any items of interest with regard to the parish or the diocese. He says that he needs the help of everyone to get the news.

I wish that I could announce in this number that all the repairs to the organ had been completed. As soon as I learn from the organ-builder and Mr. Thunder that the contract has been fulfilled, a special musical service will be given in celebration of the event, and for the purpose of showing the enlarged equipment of the organ.

God has been very good to us in the church in enabling us to render large service to the community in the last three years. If one were to confine his record to the affairs of our own household, there would be nothing but cause for thanksgiving and rejoicing. But as we look abroad we realize that the world is grappling with many difficult problems, and it is our duty as fellow-workers with God to take them into our hearts, and make them the subject of our prayers, and to devote to them all the energy and time that are at our disposal. I don't see how any Christian person can offer with earnestness the petition, "Thy Kingdom come" without meaning by that phrase to ask God to overrule the folly of men and cause our country to take its proper part in this League of Nations. Without us it can never fulfill its purpose, and standing outside of it we will not be doing our full duty for the uplift of the rest of mankind, as the richest, the most powerful and on the whole the most intelligent community in the world. Certainly there is no other group of white people under a free government of corresponding numbers and power anywhere else on the earth; and for us to stand aloof and consult our own interests without regard to the common welfare, is a shirking of the responsiiblities of our position.

Not only are there national problems that engage our attention, but the civic situation calls for the most thoughtful interest and most careful attention of our Christian citizenship. This new department of Public Welfare is full of possibilities of good and of possibilities of evil. It may be made the instrument of widespread social betterment, or it may be made a tool for building up a vast political organization. Director Tustin has begun well; he needs the support, the sympathy and the helpful watchfulness of the church members of Philadelphia.

Then there is the civil service. This important department of the government needs readjustment, but I must admit that I was greatly shocked to hear the Mayor compare it to a sausage-grinding apparatus for turning out employes, thus depicting it as an obstruction to an efficient administration. Surely, it is not necessary at this date to go over again the arguments in favor of civil service. The conduct of the Executive in steadily enlarging the area of the application of civil service rules is an incontestable proof that the system has commended itself to both parties. From the day of President Cleveland down the application of civil service rules has been steadily extended, unless it may be the present administration is an exception. Undoubtedly, a stiff civil service examination is a formidable barrier in the way of building up a group of political workers by the promise of political preferment. But is there any greater injury to the effective administration of our affairs than making the doorway to preferment not success in the discharge of the duties of the office, but usefulness in the political contest outside of the office? No system can be devised that will not have drawbacks. Undoubtedly the examination has defects as a method of testing the qualifications of candidates, but it has been proven by a long experience that it is much more objectionable to leave these appointments open so that they can be used as rewards for activities in the ward, for eloquence on the rostrum and for deftness in political management. We cannot have a well administered city or a righteous city unless we have good civil service.

In addition to these problems of the nation and of the city, there are the problems of the Church. It is true there are some people who say, "Oh, let us not have any contest inside of the Church. Let us have no arguing about doctrines or government or administration. There is nothing I so dislike as a church contest." But suppose the Reformers had felt that way! Suppose that Athanasius had said, "Well, I really can't engage in a discussion with this sophistical Arius. I went into the church for peace." Suppose that Augustine had said, "I really can't debate this question about the relation of Christianity to the fall of the Roman empire." We never would have had his "City of God," nor his splendid proofs that while the imperial state was decaying there was a new order arising from its ruins. Suppose that Luther and Calvin had sounded this note! Would England ever have had the Great Awakening in the eighteenth century if Wesley had said, "I really can't engage in any struggle with these bishops and parochial clergy who are unwilling to have the gospel preached by itinerant clergymen and lay preachers." The whole history of England would have been changed and the English-speaking people would have been different.

I am profoundly interested, I confess, that the Episcopal Church shall continue to be Protestant in doctrine, and be governed by the system of laws enacted by its proper legislative bodies, the General Convention and the Diocesan Convention. I could not take much interest in its development if it were a society of personal rule rather than the rule of law. As I understand our church it is governed by laws enacted by a representative assembly. Indeed it is the great contribution of Bishop White, of Pennsylvania, to our Church that he organized our congregations into dioceses on that basis. The English bishop on his consecration promises obedience to the archbishop. Here is the form: "In the name of God, Amen. I, N, chosen bishop of the Church and See of N, do promise all due reverence and obedience to the archbishop and to the metropolitical Church of N, and to their successors. So help me God through Jesus Christ."

In our prayer book the promise runs: "In the name of God, Amen. I, N, chosen bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church of N, do promise conformity and obedience to the doctrine, discipline and worship of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America. So help me God through Jesus Christ. Amen." Among the causes for which a bishop may be tried is violation of the constitution or canons of the General Convention, and violation of the canons of the Diocese to which he belongs. In the formation of the Diocese of Pennsylvania it was laid down as a fundamental principle that the powers of the bishops, priests and deacons were to be exercised according to definitely expressed laws.

There has been a great tendency of late years under the influence of the Tractarian Movement to neglect the representative side of our church life. Nothing could be more detrimental to the peace and prosperity of our Church. Those who are accustomed to freedom under law in the State will not be content with anything less in the Church. One of the great problems of our Church's life is to adapt the historic episcopate to local conditions. Our quadrilateral mentions the historic episcopate locally adapted as one of the essentials of church unity. The question ought to be candidly asked whether we have fully adapted the historic episcopate to the local conditions of America. My own conviction is that in our recent legislation we have followed too much the methods of railroad corporations and business enterprises, and have not conformed sufficiently to the proper precedent, namely, the governmental system of our country. We must plan not only for ourselves and our immediate interests, but we must consider the generations that are to come, and the tendency of the various principles that are at work in our Church's life. May God make us wise builders upon the foundation laid by our fathers.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

The Woman's Auxiliary had a very interesting meeting January 15th. All the committees were represented and the delegates had good reports.

The treasurer has a balance of $111.09 and Miss Magee has collected $154.50 for the United Offering.

Mr. Keable suggested that an occasional penny on the mission side of our envelopes would add to the fund for our great work.

Mr. Ancell spoke a few minutes. He wished to make only two points concerning Mahan School about which he had spoken to the congregation. First that Mahan School was not provided for in the Nation-Wide Campaign, and, second, he was not asking for any scholarships. All of the hundred and fifty boys but six pay their way. All they ask is for room to take more boys.

He asked Miss Bell to appoint a committee in the Auxiliary to consider ways and means to collect funds for the new St. Stephen's Building. Mrs. Grammer, Mrs. McKeehan and Mrs. Austin were appointed.

The next meeting of the Auxiliary will be held February 19th.

BEULAH E. HOLLAR,
Secretary.

My dear Friend:

As you probably know, the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Stephen's Church is trying, in conjunction with the rest of the congregation, to raise a fund of nineteen thousand dollars to build a hall in the Mahan School at Yangchow, China, of which Dr. Ancell is the head, to be called St. Stephen's Hall. This hall will accommodate sixty additional Chinese students, thus making the school entirely self-supporting. This will lift a burden from the church at large, but most of all from the hearts and minds of the self-sacrificing missionaries who can then go joyfully on with their work.

Now what is this work in which we are to help? Each one of these students carries back to his home and to his town even the wonderful message of Christ, of the kingdom of heaven within us, that manifests itself in a changed life, in a changed concept of man, of his relation to the family and to the state. This Christian education, these new concepts, result in bringing in the glorious light of the sun of righteousness and the rapid growth of an attendant civilization.

Shall not St. Stephen's, which has done so much in the cause of patriotism, which has always been ready to help the poor of this great city, shall it not stretch out a hand to the Orient and plant a seed that shall grow into a beneficent tree? Shall we not have the proud consciousness, the heart-warming joy, of doing great things abroad, as well as at home?

Other churches are occupied with the Nation Wide Campaign; shall not we be as earnest as they, and raise the money for this specific object that has been so well presented by our missionary whose chief reliance must be on those who know him personally and those who know what a great teacher he is?

Let us each one contribute a gift of love for some dear one. Would it not be wonderful to have our loving thoughts of one who has gone before, bring joy into hearts that are depressed and bring light into countless lives that pass through these Christian halls year after year?

Nothing can be too small, for we know the power of small things; nothing can be too large, for we know that nineteen thousand dollars is a large sum to raise.

With great hope and earnest prayer we, your committee, make this plea.

Mrs. Carl E. Grammer.
Mrs. C. Watson McKeehan,
Mrs. Samuel H. Austin.

King's Daughters.

The King's Daughters will have their next meetings February 4th to February 18th in Guild Room, Parish House, at a quarter of 8 o'clock.

From those receiving shoes	2.00

The Church Periodical Club.

The Church Periodical Club, like most other organizations of its kind, has been running along with an after-the-war apathy. The magazines that everybody was glad to send to the boys in France or in camps here are no longer needed for that purpose, but they have not yet gotten back into the roads leading to missionaries and church schools. All over the country our recipients have been patiently waiting, for it was really a patriotic service on their part to do without this reading matter while it was going abroad.

So St. Stephen's Branch makes these requests:

If you stopped your magazine during the war, please continue it now, but ask the Librarian for address before sending, as the old address may have changed.

If you can send only occasionally or irregularly, we will be glad for this, too; but do not send to Parish House—get a real live name and write and send direct.

If you don't know just what we are doing but want to help, ask the Librarian for particulars; or contribute a small sum monthly or annually for postage and other necessary running expenses.

Special requests this month: Everybody's Magazine and Pictorial Review.

The Mission Study Class will be held on Friday mornings in Lent at half past 10 o'clock, Mrs. W. Hoover Smith, leader. The text book to be used is called "Neighbors" and treats of Americanization. Rector's Letter.

My dear Parishioners:

I am wondering whether it would not be a good plan to have a Confirmation Class during April? Two candidates have already made themselves known. Spring is the natural time for confirmation. The frequent services in Lent, the increase in spiritual fervor, make themselves felt even by the young and careless. I wish it could be arranged that all the churches could have confirmation about the same time. It would be a wonderful help. The spirit of inquiry and evangelistic fervor would spread all over the community. I know that there are some children in the Sunday School who are on the verge of being confirmed, and I would like to give them another opportunity to come forward. I, therefore, request anybody who has the matter under consideration to communicate with me. I hope that before Easter I shall have a nice class, and that we can begin to have our meetings during April.

I was quite appalled to learn from an expert that it has been ascertained that 54 per cent. of the population of Philadelphia is outside of the church. One million people were said to be outside of church or synagogue. This is shocking. No wonder Bolshevism spreads. When a man has very little hope of a world to come and realizes that he is getting on in life without much opportunity to enjoy the good things of this world, a fierce rage against existing conditions is apt to take possession of him. He does not consider the generations to come. He simply says, "I am resolved to enjoy some of these good things while there is yet time." I don't wonder that the anarchists and Bolshevists hate Christianity. They regard religion as an opiate. We know that they themselves have lost their sanity, in their frantic eagerness to possess and enjoy. Undoubtedly the Church has not sufficiently emphasized its duty of laying the foundations of the Kingdom of God here on earth. It has dwelt too much in mystic rapture on the vision of the New Jerusalem descending out of the skies. I am profoundly opposed to these Second Adventists who would sap all our energies by teaching that nothing can be accomplished until the Lord comes, that everything must be left to him. There is such a thing as an excessive otherworldliness; still it is not an error into which mankind as a whole is apt to fall. Much more wide-spread is the error of confining our thoughts entirely to this world and becoming mere inhabitants of earth, without any vistas into the future, without any calm assurance that somewhere in God's universe duty and happiness will meet. For it must always be borne in mind that if the individual does not continue hereafter, then everything ultimately ends in the grave. Science speaks with authority when it tells us that the world will, after a while, be no longer habitable. Sir Oliver Lodge gave us as a limit twenty million years. According to this calculation the world is in its old age, since four hundred million years have passed since it first became habitable; and then, unless the individual persists and carries with him his mind and will, all our knowledge and achievement and sacrifice and heroism will come to nothing. So much of reason in the means, and so little in the end! Who could believe that? The chief glory would be taken from life if this world were not the gateway to another world. Belief in immortality is not merely a comfort and solace to the individual; it is one of the pillars of our civilization. As soon as it is weakened, one of the great steadying influences of society is withdrawn. I do not wonder that the statesmen and social workers are concerned about the churchless masses. It would be a good plan for our church to imitate Lyman Abbott's course during his fruitful pastorate in Brooklyn. I think it would be wise for us to find out what are considered our parish bounds and to make a regular survey of the region. I once investigated the block bounded by Tenth and Eleventh, Walnut and Chestnut Streets. It was a most instructive visitation. In the lodging houses were seventeen or eighteen people, each of whom had a latch-key and came and went when he pleased; there was no parlor nor meeting room, no one knew anything about his neighbor; all of the bonds of social life and convention were relaxed. The trouble with the Church is that we are not anxious enough to bring people out of darkness into light. If we believe, as St. Augustine said, that our hearts are made for God, and that they are restless until they find their rest in Him, then we ought to seek to bring this knowledge of peace into the hearts of our brothers. It is quite worth while to give the poor Christmas dinners and to provide hospitals for them when they are sick, but it would be better if we could give them in their homes that peace which makes a dinner of herbs better than a stalled ox; so that instead of wrangling and discontent there would be cheerful courage and hearty co-operation. Our chief needs are spiritual, not intellectual or physical. The soul of reform is the reform of the soul, as Horace Bushnell said.

If I had the strength I should like in summer time, when there is a dearth of entertainment in the city, and the people are much in the streets, to have one week of bright, helpful evangelistic services, with the church bells pealing out, "Jesus the water of life will give, freely, freely, freely." The trouble lies in us. Was not that a moving picture Dr. Ancell drew of that little Chinese boy with whom he conversed, with such a bright mind and docile disposition and winning ways, who would be so certain to grow up if heathenism did its usual work upon him, hard and backward-looking, suspicious, revengeful and fearful. It is good to know that our missionaries are doing this work for us in China. But we need to seek in the same spirit the Christless and semi-pagan multitudes at our door.

That is, indeed, one of the best results of the heroic labors of our missionary leaders. As we hear of their zeal and longing to help, we realize that we must, in our narrow sphere, follow their Christ-like example, for undoubtedly the missionary's influence extends further than that of any rector of a church in a Christian land. The mere presence of an American teacher in a Chinese town brings a new realm of thought and feeling, and a new civilization before the people of that community. His conduct, his family life, if he is married, his attitude toward his wife, his bearing to his children, his manners, his method of dealing with people, his theory of the universe, his conceptions of God, are all carefully noted. In the case of a school like the Mahan School, I am sure that the whole province feels its effects. While traveling out west some years ago I was talking with a western man about the attitude of the western man to women. "Why," he said, "they are adored. When a handsome woman steps off a train, she shakes five counties!" A school like Mahan School must shake a whole province of the Celestial Empire. Out of Dr. Ancell's former secondary school of this kind came eleven of our thirteen native missionaries. We see in Dr. Lee what splendid men he turns out. Almost every Sunday some contribution comes in for St. Stephen's Hall, but we have a long way to go yet before we reach even half of our $19,000. Unless we give a little more than half, I do not think we would be entitled to have the building called St. Stephen's Hall. It would be splendid if some one in the congregation would give us a large gift in memory of a dear boy whose own life was cut untimely short. Thus their deep affection for him would bear permanent fruit. What nobler outcome can there be of suffering than an increase of liberality? The good things that we cannot heap upon our dear one we will confer on others. There is no memorial monument like a great benefaction. What a pity it is that the money spent on those gloomy mausoleums out at Laurel Hill was not invested in some foundation for the benefit of mankind! It was a truly royal thought of William III to found Greenwich Hospital in memory of Queen Mary, so that all the British Navy could be blessed by his love for his loyal young queen. What a splendid thing it would be to have an endowment for Mahan School whereby the youth of poor benighted China would be for ages led onward into a new vision of God, a new hope of immortality, and a new happiness in this world.

As I have said to the congregation, Dr. Ancell is an old pupil, for whom I can speak as a sound and uplifting teacher. In order that he may do this work he has declined a great honor and a high position. He has recognized the Divine call in this opportunity, and I trust that we may be able to help him to discharge this great responsibility. I don't know of any congregation in the country that he ought to look to with more assurance than the one in which his old friend and teacher is rector.

The Lenten services have begun most auspiciously. In spite of the fact that we had no fresh voice, but that your rector was the preacher during the week after the first Sunday, the attendance was large, and I appreciated exceedingly the loyalty of my own congregation, for I saw that many of them had made a special effort to be present that week. It was one of the busiest weeks of my life, and I am very glad that I find myself comparatively fit at its close.

It is not necessary that I should repeat in the PARISH NEWS what I said in the church on the last Sunday in February. Differences of opinion about questions of administration are certain to arise, especially in an organization like the Church, in which so many interests center. It is not necessary for either side to impute to the other unworthy motives. I have no doubt the Bishop of the Diocese and those who are with him think that they will advance the cause of God in building this Cathedral by the method which they are pursuing. I think they are mistaken, but I do not asperse their motives. At the same time I claim that I am entitled to credit for the motives which I myself profess—viz., a zeal for representative institutions. We must not allow ourselves to be misled by the phraseology of the reporters. If, for example, I say that I differ, the reporter says I differ "sharply." The headlines are almost always objectionable. Instead of saying that I am opposed to the methods whereby the charter for the new cathedral is being sought, the headlines read "Grammer attacks the Bishop!" Some people are so sensitive to these characteristics of the press that they deprecate any public discussion, but it is my conviction that popular government cannot be protected in church or state without popular methods of appeal to the public. After all, there are greater objections to secrecy than to publicity. Let us walk in the light as children of the light. This is an Apostolic injunction.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

There were twenty-nine members present at the last meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary.

The treasurer has received $438.00 toward St. Stephen's Hall at Mahan School, and we have $147.84 in the treasury for our regular work.

Miss Magee has collected a total of $165.50 for the United Offering.

In addition to the regular reports from our delegates Mrs. Clemens made a special report on the meetings being held at the City Club by the Philadelphia Housing Association.

There are to be six of these meetings, and the Church Women's Housing Association is asked to send delegates so that they may report the work back to the churches.

The next Auxiliary Meeting will be held March 18th.

Mrs. Kempton, the Diocesan Correspondent, writes that she is anxious to place a good-sized library in some home in the mountains of North Carolina for the children made orphans by the influenza last winter. There are two hundred and sixty-five of them, between the ages of five and fifteen years.

We are asked to collect books, both old and new, and send by parcel post, the week before Palm Sunday, to an address to be given us.

Books left at the Parish House will be gratefully received and forwarded by the librarian.

On Monday evening, March 29th, at 8.15 o'clock, in the Sunday School Room, Miss Anne Earle will give an illustrated lecture on "The Passion Play of Ober-Ammergau," for the members of St. Stephen's Branch of the Girls' Friendly Society.

Members of the congregation are cordially invited to share with the G. F. S. the privilege of hearing this lecture.

Cathedrals and Representative Government.

To the Editor of The Churchman:

Now that some dioceses have cathedrals, and others are trying to get them, it is worth inquiring how this new feature ought to be introduced into our Church's life, and what relation these cathedral foundations should sustain to our representative system.

Of course the cathedral itself, as everyone knows, is as feudal as Warwick Castle. I don't mean by this the bishop's church in those little African towns, which sent so many bishops to the council of Carthage. I mean the cathedrals of our mother Church of England: Durham, "half house of God, half fort against the Scot;" Chester, the noble chapel of a fortress on the Welsh border. I mean Lincoln on its hill, and Ely 'mid its fens. I mean the churches of bishops who are ex-officio peers of the realm. How are these ancient institutions, the splendid incrustations of chivalry and piety, to be adjusted to American institutions? Are there to be chapters, and if so, what are to be their rights and privileges and whence are they to be derived? Is the dean to have anything of the independence that has made English deans so famous, or is he to be a pale reflex of the bishop?

Will the cathedral, as in Baltimore, haughtily require that all parish organizations keep at a respectful distance from the sacred bush of its unceasing devotions, or will it quietly nestle down in some parish church as in Boston, and be content to do the work of a free downtown church, under an ambitious name? These are all interesting questions worth discussion in our church papers.

They are of minor importance, however, compared to the influence of the cathedral upon the Church's democratic character. That the world is going to become more and more democratic is now not merely a prophecy; it is the base-line from which we make all our calculations. The world has been made safe for democracy, and a democratic world is an unsafe place for institutions and arrangements that are undemocratic: they have the stars in their courses fighting against them, and are destined to be removed, as things that may be shaken.

I don't say that a cathedral cannot be organized on such a basis that it will fit in with a representative scheme of government. Dr. Fulton, who was such an authority on canons and church history in his day, declared that cathedrals could not prosper in America. But he may have been wrong. A negative of this kind is too comprehensive to carry conviction. The truth of the matter is that the cathedral system in America is still on trial, and has yet to prove that it fits in with democracy in the Church.

This much, however, must be admitted: namely, that it has not yet been harmonized with a representative scheme of government. This incongruity has been manifested in the irregular, and in my judgment uncanonical, way in which it has often been inaugurated. In Boston, I learn from a well informed friend, it was the condition of the bequest for a cathedral that the Diocese of Massachusetts should endorse and adopt the project. In other dioceses, as for example, in Washington, the whole scheme was inaugurated outside of the diocesan convention. The question ought to be frankly faced: What is the proper manner in which to introduce into the life of a diocese, this new kind of church? It is true that under the pressure of controversy, it has been claimed that a cathedral must not be likened to a church, but should be considered as possessing the same independence of the diocesan convention that is enjoyed by a school, or a hospital, or a library. But such a contention cannot be seriously maintained. Law often separates arbitrarily things that belong to the same category, as in the well known ruling of the British customs, which classes monkeys with dogs, and turtles with insects. But no court would allow money left for a cathedral to be appropriated for the erection of a gymnasium, or hospital or singing school. A cathedral is always a church, a place of worship, and according to Webster, who is generally admitted to excel in definition, it is "properly the church which contains the cathedral, or bishop's official chair or throne, and which is therefore officially the principal church of a diocese."

It is true that the cathedral is the bishop's church, as well as the diocesan church, but it is not the church of the bishop apart from the diocese. If he resigned his jurisdiction, the cathedral would no longer be his church. It is his church, inasmuch as he is the head of the diocese. Separate him from the diocese and he will lose the church. Let the diocese elect a new bishop, and in due time the cathedral will be his.

One of the fundamentals of church union, according to the famous Chicago-Lambeth Quadrilateral, is "the historic episcopate, locally adapted." To claim that the bishop has the right to fasten on his diocese such an institution as a cathedral without consulting his convention is certainly not adapting the episcopate to American conditions. Imagine the governor of a state undertaking without the consent of the Legislature, by the aid of large gifts from corporations, to construct forts near our railway terminals, and claiming that as long as he asked no appropriations from the Legislature and was content to build his block-houses by gifts, it was nobody's business. Everyone would recognize that such a governor might be a vigorous executive, but that he was not in touch with representative government.

What then shall we say of the method that in some instances has been pursued, and in others may be attempted, indeed is being attempted, whereby the bishop, representing himself to the civil courts as a private citizen, yet claiming at the same time, when he fronts his church people, to act as the official head of the diocese, applies for a charter for a cathedral, with the intention of keeping the whole scheme out of the control of the diocesan convention, until it is out of the plastic stage, and has assumed such a shape that the convention, if it is consulted at all, has practically no freedom of choice?

Most people will say such a method is certainly not in touch with American life and modes of administration. Some canonists will raise the question whether a bishop who has promised to exercise his office in conformity and obedience to the doctrine, discipline and worship of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, has acted in this matter in conformity with our discipline. Some will take the ground that however our bishops may derive their orders—and on this there is admittedly a wide diversity of opinion—those powers themselves are to be exercised according to law, and that extra-canonical acts are uncanonical acts; that if bishops are to have the right to inaugurate cathedrals, that right ought to be conferred by canon; and that for a bishop to undertake to introduce this cathedral system, so ancient and also so feudal in England, into our American life, without the authority of his diocesan convention, is to show that he has a feudal conception of his own office, and will certainly be unable to adapt this old institution to our democratic life. Many lovers of our Church will hold that such arbitrary action works an injury to our whole representative scheme of church government, and will, if permitted to become a precedent, diminish the freedom of our Church, and lessen its comfort as a hospitable home for many schools of thought, and also alienate it from the life of our country.

Our Ambulance.

February 6, 1920.

Mr. Edward W. Moore,
141 South Fourth St.,
Philadelphia.

Dear Mr. Moore:

Dr. Frazier has referred to me your inquiry about the "gift plate" on the ambulance so generously donated to Base Hospital 34 by members of St. Stephen's Church. Of the value and usefulness of the ambulance many good tales could be told. It carried innumerable loads of wounded from the railway station at Nantes to our Hospital (No. 34) about two miles distant, in the outskirts of Nantes. Eventually all our ambulances were taken over by the Motor Truck Service of the American Expeditionary Forces, and thereafter were no longer under our own control; all motor vehicles being pooled for economy of operation and used by all hospitals indiscriminately. I regret very much that at the time we did not realize that they would thenceforth be lost to us as an individual unit, and that precautions were not taken to remove and preserve the gift plates from St. Stephen's Ambulance and from the other motor equipment with which we were originally provided.

I wish all members of St. Stephen's congregation could realize how great a help their gift proved not only to Base Hospital 34 itself, but to the cause of the wounded in general; and how deeply all of us who were connected with Base Hospital 34 appreciated the interest your church took in us.

With best wishes, always very sincerely,

Astley P. C. Ashhurst.

Letter from Miss Conway.

The following letter has been received by the Parish Visitor from our missionary in Africa:

December 18th, 1919.

St. Timothy's Hospital,
Cape Mount, Liberia, West Africa,

We started out this morning to go to Fallee, but the engine broke down about half a mile from town, and as this was Miss Ridgely's outing—the first she has had for many months—we came down to the beach, and she is now lying by my side, and the girls are making tea.

These are busy days for me. I could hardly spare the time, but my duty is to my fellow workers as well as the natives. There is a big meeting of Government officials and native chiefs. There has been trouble between the Gola tribe and the Liberian Government for a long time, and last year war broke out. Now—the peace conference. They have nearly all the Gola chiefs under arrest; what the outcome will be we do not know. My part is to doctor these poor creatures, and I have had to stay in town two weeks and hardly think I shall get in a trip before Christmas. Shortly after, if all goes well, I hope to go to Monrovia to the inauguration of President-elect King. I suppose you read about his being in America. He is one of the vestrymen of our church in Monrovia. I know him quite well.

I hope to come home some time in the spring. Shall try to get away not later than April or May. Then I would like to go in the country for a couple of months rest. If you hear of a good farm or boarding place, please speak for a room for me for the summer months. Just where I shall go first I do not know. One thing is sure, I cannot pay much board.

Mr. Ramsaur, the young man who came out last spring, is such a fine character and doing splendid work. He has now gone away over to the French border, taking a survey of the country and preaching and teaching as he goes. We need a few more like him.

Did I ever tell you that I had to use the fifty dollars sent by St. Stephen's Sunday School for my motor boat, as I could not get a horse. The boat cost a little over a hundred and fifty, but it is such a comfort. My life is spent chiefly in traveling from one dispensary to the other and back to the hospital. I was so disappointed in not getting a box from Philadelphia this year. The boys' school and Miss Ridgely's school each got one, but the hospital was not thought about. And how much I need drugs and supplies! Now that there are two dispensaries as well as the hospital, more and not less is needed.

Kindest regards to Dr. Grammer and those whom I know at St. Stephen's.

Sarah E. Conway.

P. S.—Last Sunday I had the Secretary of the Interior and of War and a major of the U. S. Army to dinner. High life in Africa!

It is necessary for the Parish Visitor to add this appeal: Our poor women, some of whom have had very serious operations, and others suffering from varicose veins in a dreadful condition, are very much in need of old linen or muslin. Even very small pieces will be most gratefully received.

Rector's Letter.

My dear Parishioners:

I greet you most heartily on this Easter Day. My first thought is that this is the fifteenth Easter we have had together. I can but hope that you feel as I do, that the tie between us grows closer as the years pass. I often sit down and let my mind run over the congregation, pew by pew. Some, of course, I know better than others. Some, I regret to say, I meet but seldom, but I believe all the congregation are fairly well known to me. I cannot stand up in our improved chancel, where the minister can look out over the congregation and see them well, and look at the great congregation without a deep sense of gratitude to God for having laid my lines in such pleasant places. My father used to regard Philadelphia as the garden place of the Episcopal Church in the United States. He was twice called to a church in West Philadelphia, and I can recall as a boy how much he was attracted to this city, though he eventually decided to remain in Baltimore, which he thought the finest city in the world. At one time he had a call to a great church in Chicago, which also called him twice, and he used to tell about visiting a school friend of his in Chicago, afterwards United States Minister to an important post in Europe, who whispered him that he believed he would regret it if he ever left the lovely climate of Baltimore for the Windy City by the Lakes. It is an especial pleasure and gratification to me when any of my father's old parishioners come to St. Stephen's and select it as their church home.

Christmas is the most popular of the Christian festivals, but Easter is surely the greatest of all our feasts. St. Paul said if Christ was not risen from the dead, then was his preaching vain. Unless there is a life beyond it is difficult to see how religion can hold its own. Whatever people may think about these messages that are said to come to us from the hereafter, it is good to be reminded that the departed are not dead. The reality of their existence is brought to our minds by the theories, even if we cannot accept the special communication. For my own part, I am convinced that the universe is one. I cannot take the strange attitude that I do not want any such messages. I notice that the simplest flower cannot bloom without the assistance of the distant sun. Not the smallest cloud can form itself in the sky without the aid of the same great luminary. The unknown metal helium which was discovered in the sun was afterwards found upon this earth. The universe is one. It may be that it is a more spiritual one than we think. I am inclined to think the poet speaks truly along this line. Sir Oliver Lodge quoted some lines which I think everyone will be glad to read. They are from a poem found when he died among the writings of Francis Thompson. The following note from his editor I think is interesting:

"If he had lived, Thompson might have worked upon them and removed here a defective line and there an unexpected elision. But no alteration would he have brought to the purport of it. The prevision of heaven in earth and God in man, pervading his earlier published verse, is here accentuated by a poignantly local and personal allusion; for in these triumphant stanzas he held in retrospect those days and nights of human dereliction he spent beside London's river in the shadow—but all radiance to him—of Charing Cross:"

The Kingdom of God.

"In no strange land."

O world invisible, we view thee,
O world intangible, we touch thee,
O world unknowable, we know thee,
Unapprehensible, we clutch thee.

Does the fish soar to find the ocean,
The eagle plunge to find the air?
That we ask of the stars in motion
If they have rumor of Thee there?

Not where the whirling systems darken
And our benumbed conceiving soars!—
The drift of pinions, would we hearken,
Beats at our own clay-sheltered doors.

The angels keep their ancient places;
Turn but a stone and start a wing;
'Tis ye, 'tis your estranged faces
That miss the many-splendored thing.

But when so sad, thou canst not sadder,
Cry—and upon that so sore loss
Shall shine the traffic of Jacob's ladder, Pitched between Heaven and Charing Cross.

Yea, in the night, my Soul, my daughter,
Cry—clinging Heaven's parting hems,
And lo! Christ walking on the water,
Not of Gennesaret, but Thames.

Since I have touched on this subject I will reprint elsewhere an article that I published in relation to spiritualism in a church paper.

I want to remind the congregation that although the farm has been sold the vestry has no intention of giving up the good work of providing for summer outings for the members of our congregation who need such provision. If I correctly estimate the mind of those who have used the farm they do not desire what the poet calls "a lodge in some vast wilderness, a boundless contiguity of shade," but prefer a pleasant outlook, either upon the Delaware River or the Atlantic Ocean, or some scene of cheerful activities. It has been suggested that we should combine with some of the other metropolitan parishes, as the churches in the heart of the city have been designated. We are anxious to act wisely, and those who give to the Easter collection for the farm may be sure that their moneys will be used to provide summer outings, which is the purpose for which the farm stood.

Some sensational accounts that have appeared in the papers, I am afraid may mislead people about the Burd School. That great property has been sold. It had become very expensive to run, and was far too valuable for us to hold. The general policy of the vestry is to rent for a term of years and subsequently to build a structure that can be more economically administered. We are particularly desirous of doing the very best for our wards in giving them every opportunity to equip themselves to be efficient members of society. During the last month two of the girls, Miss Lilian Clift and Miss Lola Bryan, have gone out into excellent positions. We are proud of their record at the High School and at the business college, and the people of St. Stephen's all feel the liveliest interest in their welfare.

The records of attendance show that we have had one of our most successful Lents. In ante-bellum days there used to be a considerable falling off in attendance in the third and fourth weeks of Lent, with a slight improvement in the fifth, and a splendid attendance in Holy Week. This year there was no falling off in those two weeks, a great tribute, I think, to the powers of the speakers, Dr. McComb and Dr. Wood. We are hopeful that this fine Lenten attendance will bear fruit and increase the numbers at the Wednesday meetings throughout the year, and during the last week a special effort will be made to remind the Lenten congregation that the noonday service on Wednesday obtains the year round.

I hope that the congregation will make themselves missionaries to spread abroad this invitation. I hate to suggest the slightest defect in the members of St. Stephen's Church, but may I be permitted to hint that they do not root enough, as the college boys say, for their church? I went down to a great bank to-day and one of the chief officers came up to me and said, "You have a great church down there. I drop in there occasionally, for I think you have got a wonderful church." I was delighted to hear him say that, because such words bring people. If he speaks of our church in that way some of the bank clerks will come in to see what the chief officer thinks worth while at St. Stephen's.

I have been very much surprised to find that a great many people adopt the theory that the churches are only ministering to the people who take pews or accept envelopes, and are making no appeal to the unchurched. It is for the latter that we put the advertisements in the papers, it is for them that we put the placards in the stores. I wish myself that the men of the congregation would devise some plan for putting an invitation in the boxes of the visitors at the hotels, to let them know that we are anxious to have them. I believe in the welcoming hand and in the hearty greeting. It is to emphasize these welcoming aims of the church that I take my stand at the foot of the aisle every Sunday night and shake hands with the people as they pass out. Dr. Rainsford used to take his stand in front of the church before the Sunday morning service and shake hands with the people as they came in. Surely nobody thinks that St. Stephen's is doing its work unless it reaches out. That is the message of our bells—Come in! I am glad to know that we are going to be able to open that central door, and make it more manifest to the passer-by that we are open to visitors.

The hope and zeal of the Committee of the Woman's Auxiliary is being rewarded, though not perhaps to the full measure of their desires, for I am afraid that we are not going to reach the $19,000 mark; indeed, we are a long way off. Nevertheless, we have a number of monthly pledges and one generous contributor whose name can easily be guessed by the congregation, has given $500. That is our largest single contribution, but we will have subscriptions of $400, $300 and $250. I hope that we will make the largest subscription for foreign missions ever known in St. Stephen's, and that will be quite worth while. Surely nothing can be more fundamental in religion than that those who have learned that God is love should pass the good news to those who know it not, who live in fear and uncertainty, and often in dark despair. It hardly seems to admit of debate that if religion is a great boon and comfort and inspiration, it is our duty to hand it on. Especially ought the Christian nations who have increased so much the problem of living for the backward nations see to it that they receive this great gift from us.

According to our custom the election of the vestry will be postponed until the Parish Meeting; the present vestry will hold over till its successor is elected. This is according to our charter. I have no doubt that the legally qualified voters will agree this year as in former years to elect the persons nominated to them as the choice of the parish meeting. In that way we comply with the requirements of our charter and also give to the people who contribute to the upbuilding of the church a voice in its government.

I think I ought to place on record here what I said in the congregation on the fifth Sunday in Lent, that in the death of Edna Vreeland the congregation lost a faithful member to whom under God our church was privileged to discharge in large measure the duty of a mother. This orphan girl was left to our care by her mother, and in spite of her bodily infirmities she was able to make a living and to enjoy the loving and tactful care of Miss Lewis. Her infirmities would have qualified her for a place in an institution, but I am very glad that we were able to throw around her a sufficient number of safeguards and helps to enable her to earn her own livelihood and keep her self-respect until the end. Her death was full of hope and the assurance of a happy hereafter. Surely God rewarded this child upon whom was laid such a heavy task with a happier lot in the world to come. We owe a great deal of gratitude to Miss Lewis for her faithful discharge of this obligation.

The best greetings of this happy season.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

The Attitude of Spiritual Leaders.

By the Rev. Dr. Carl E. Grammer.

Now that there has been such a recrudescence of interest in Spiritualism, people are naturally asking what their ministers think upon the subject, and the pulpit cannot hold its peace without coming short of its duty.

Undoubtedly this is a momentous and difficult question. The old belief in witches was a popular theory that it took great moral courage to oppose. This new belief comes not from the ignorant and backward circles, but from leaders of thought, from explorers and investigators; its fountain heads are such books as "Researches in Spiritualism," by Sir William Crookes, Fellow of the Royal Society, and the report on Spiritualism of the London Dialectical Society. Its teachers are such a man of culture as F. W. Myers, such a chemist as Crookes, such a physicist as Sir Oliver Lodge, such a pre-eminent scientist as Alfred Russell Wallace. But it now takes some intellectual courage to profess even a qualified acceptance of the evidence. The orthodox both in religion and in science look askance upon it, and many of the orthodox leaders in both realms are fulminating anathemas against it.

Yet nothing can be clearer, it seems to me, than the duty of keeping an open mind. Not that we are to be credulous and let our desires carry us beyond the proof, but that we should be willing to test the evidence.

The Biblical objection that dealing with sorcerers and witches is forbidden in the Old Testament is surely not well taken. Children are forbidden to come near to the fire, but such parental injunctions ought not to prevent a chemist from studying combustion. We are no longer under the pedagogical leading of the law; we are under grace. The spirit of truth has been promised us as a guide into all truth. This use of the Bible as a bulwark to check a rising tide of thought only injures the influence of that inspired book.

As for the objection that Spiritualism cannot be true, because the finite cannot communicate with the infinite—an objection urged according to the newspapers at a great religious service by a distinguished ecclesiastic—it will not bear a moment's investigation. If the finite cannot communicate with the infinite, why do we pray? If the universe beyond our sense—perception cannot affect our finite lives, how can God's guidance and inspiration be accepted? These theological and Biblical objections are rash and ill-advised. The universe is vast, and our knowledge is but little. A less dogmatic attitude, more of the spirit of a little child, is becoming.

For my own part, I am convinced that the universe is reasonable, and I therefore conclude that it cannot be so unreasonable as to let such a marvelous product as man cease to be, after such a ridiculously short life. This conviction is strengthened by the testimony for the resurrection of Jesus and by the teaching of His disciples.

But I am not unwilling to receive more light. I do not believe that more light would do away with the necessity of faith, and put our lives upon another basis, as I am convinced that the wider the sphere of our knowledge becomes, the greater will be the realm of surrounding mystery. I hold, therefore, that the Church ought not to close the ears of its people with this wax of dogma, for fear that they may be seduced by the siren song of these new prophets.

I do not think, however, that we ought to encourage untrained, immature and unqualified people to enter upon these investigations. There are "diversities of gifts." Not every message is to be received. We are to "try the spirits." There is such a large amount of humbug, deception and unreality in the whole business that a wise shepherd will warn his flock that in this portion of the pasture wolves abound. He will remind them of the danger of building the walls of Zion with untempered mortar. He will point out that if there is any measure of truth in the hypothesis that the spirits of the dead communicate through specially gifted persons, it does not, therefore, follow that they can teach us much about the nature of the hereafter. What could an unborn babe learn about the joys of sight, or hearing, or social converse?

Surely the true attitude in the whole matter is one of willingness to listen to the evidence, with a determined purpose to hold fast to the basic truths that we have already learned, and to give ourselves time to examine into all the bearings of these new phenomena. One of the surest marks of culture is the power to suspend judgment till the evidence has been examined or is all in. There are doubtless many forces in nature unknown to us. It may be that most, or even all, of the phenomena that now are attributed to discarnate personality may be explained by these hitherto undiscovered forces. This is a possibility. But it ought also to be frankly recognized that the inquirers who have recently given most time and thought to these phenomena have, in increasing numbers, come to the conclusion that the messages cannot be explained by telepathy, from brain to brain, but must be regarded as coming from discarnate personalities. The Church can afford to suspend its judgment, to warn the indiscreet, to examine carefully the evidence. The one attitude it cannot afford to take is one of scorn or dogmatic denial.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. A. S. Lippi was the speaker at the March meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary. She is the President of the Italian Women's Educational Association, a social organization where these foreign women are given fellowship and help from the intelligent class of Italian women who are the leaders.

Mrs. Lippi urged us as church women to send mature women as social workers; and also to give at least ten Italian girls medical training so they may go into the families and, speaking the language and understanding the problems, give the help most needed.

The next meeting of the Auxiliary will be held April 15th.

Church Woman's Housing Association.

The Church Woman's Housing Association was started in March, 1919, at Holy Trinity Church, Mrs. Abbey acting as chairman. In one year it has grown to be a well organized body of women from the different denominations of the churches of Philadelphia, who are doing earnest work for the betterment of the housing conditions in this city. The chief object of the Association is to bring before the church women of our city the many deplorable conditions at present existing, and to stimulate their interest and co-operation.

The chairman, Mrs. Abbey, was fortunate in securing Mr. Ihlder, who is the secretary of the City's Housing Association. He gave six lectures at the City Club, on consecutive Wednesday afternoons during February and March, and was most interesting in telling of the conditions existing in other countries as well as our own, and showing how our laws must, in many instances, be changed before we can have healthful, sanitary and moral housing for our poor people.

Mr. Ihlder spoke of a woman he had met and talked with on one of the London streets, who told him that for three generations back her people had never gone further than two blocks from their home, which was in one of the most crowded courts in the city. All of the women and MEN of our congregation are most earnestly asked to co-operate in this work by going, if possible, with Mr. Ihlder or one of his committee, through some of our slums, and thus seeing conditions as they are here at present.

"In the beginning God put man and woman in a 'Garden,'" and we are told that in the latter days, when there shall be a New Heaven and a New Earth, the children will be playing in the streets. May we, each of us, try to do our part to bring about decent housing and clean, healthful conditions, so that our children in the generations to come may have a fair chance in this city, intended to be a "garden" by its founder, William Penn.

MARGARET H. CLEMENS,
Delegate from St. Stephen's.

The Girls' Friendly Society.

The Girls' Friendly Society has finished the Endowed Beds at the Episcopal Hospital. I now want the Society to undertake to raise $50,000 for the Endowment Fund, but I think it will take several years to accomplish it. I am an Honorary Associate Member, and I have been asked to take part in aiding this worthy object. I am anxious to raise several thousand dollars, but it cannot be all done at once. I hope the girls will do the best they can to help in this matter.

I should like to raise $5,000 in 1920, and I am sure it can be done; if every one tries, they will succeed in doing this. It will be hard work, but it can be done. It is absolutely necessary to have an Endowment Fund, for the Society wants rooms for meetings and entertainments of different kinds. I said a year ago that the time had come for this. I hope this will appeal to the people, and any contributions can be sent to me.

ANNA J. MAGEE, Treasurer,
Honorary Associate Member.

The Heart of Serbia

We have a great treat in store for us. On Wednesday, April 14th, at 8 P. M., in the Church, Rosalie S. Morton, M.D., graduate of the Women's Medical College of Pennsylvania, Sergeant-Major in the Serbian Army, who was awarded the following decorations: Chevalier of the Order of St. Sava, Commander of the Order of St. Sava, Order of St. John, Medal of Mercy, Medal of Charity, and Serbian Red Cross—Physician, Soldier and Publicist—will deliver her wonderful talk, "The Heart of Serbia," illustrated by her own pictures, many taken secretly, telling the great story of suffering and sacrifice of these brave people.

At the outbreak of the great war Dr. Morton was Professor in the New York Polyclinic Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital and Attending Surgeon in the Vanderbilt Clinic of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the Medical Department of Columbia University, and has become famous for her research work on the Bubonic Plague in Ceylon, India, and other parts of the East. She was also a delegate to the Pan-American Medical Congress in Panama and the American Public Health Association Meeting in Havana, and established the first scientific nation-wide program for the Prevention of Disease through Education.

During the war Dr. Morton made a thorough study of the war-work of women physicians and surgeons in England, France, Corsica, Malta, Greece, Serbia, Roumania, Bulgaria and Austria. She was asked by the United States Government to organize for military service the 6,000 women physicians in this country, and became Chairman of the Committee of Women Physicians of the General Medical Board of the Council of National Defence.

In March, 1919, through Dr. Morton's leadership, the International Serbian Educational Committee was formed, and brought to this country during the past few months sixty young men and women of Serbia. These young men and women are under solemn pledge to remain in this country for study and training for four years and then to return home, mentally equipped as teachers and leaders of their stricken fellow countrymen.

Dr. Grammer has appointed a Reception Committee, composed of the following ladies; Mrs. H. Spencer Lucas, Chairman; Mrs. Carl E. Grammer, Miss Magee, Miss Laura Bell, Miss Cornelia L. Ewing, Mrs. H. H. Barton, Jr., Mrs. S. H. Austin, Mrs. F. B. Keable, Mrs. Howard Reifsnyder, Mrs. Charles S. Calwell.

We expect a large attendance. Each one should bring friends. Dr. Morton has Lady Astor's gift of making a thrilling address with feminine charm.

King's Daughters.

Received from estate of Mr. William Patton interest (through Mr. Edward W. Moore) $34.49

The King's Daughters will have their next meetings April 7th and April 21st, in Guild Room, Parish House, at a quarter of 8 o'clock. The weather has been so bad and so many of the members have been sick, that the work for the little children has gone slowly, but when finished will do lots of good.

Since last report little Edna Vreeland has died. Although not able to sew much, she seemed to be happy and enjoy the meetings. We all miss her very much, but know she is far happier.

FREDERICK B. KEABLE, Treasurer.

Rector's Letter.

My dear Parishioners:

With this number the present volume of THE PARISH NEWS closes. We have had a successful year. Yet I think all of us have felt somewhat let down after the extraordinary activities of wartime and Old St. Stephen's Club.

The Newsboys' Club has proven a success; it fills a very useful purpose. The envelope system of the church has been put on a better basis by the excellent work of the Finance Committee. At the Parish meeting on May 12th, all the societies made encouraging reports. I think that the most encouraging aspects of the work of the year have been the steady increase in the Wednesday Noonday Service, the excellence of the night congregation and the sustained vitality of most of the organizations. One of our great problems is the Sunday School. The households from which our children come move farther and farther away from the church. It is a question in my mind whether it would not be worth while to change the hour of the Sunday School or whether we should not embark on a regular campaign to gain more scholars.

The League of the Kingdom ought to be worked up, and I herewith announce a supper for Thursday, June 10th, at 6.30, in the Parish House. The feature of the evening will be an address by the Rev. Herbert Reese, of St. Matthew's Church. Mr. Reese was a chaplain in France, and had a most interesting experience. At a luncheon some weeks ago I heard him tell his story in a delightfully simple and interesting way. It was the general judgment among those present that his was one of the most illuminating accounts they had ever heard of war experiences on the other side. Especially moving was his account of a chaplain who felt it his duty as a Christian and patriot to behave as if bullets were as harmless as falling leaves. I hope that we will have a large attendance. Please save the evening; it will be our last supper of the season.

I think that all of us will agree that a great improvement has been made in the front of the church by the additional glass doors in the central doorway, which enable us to open the front door in cold weather. Another improvement will be made when the new window is placed in the front of the church. The old one has been blown in, in part, and the organ is exposed to the weather. You will recall that Miss Magee gave us five thousand dollars last spring for the improvement of the exterior of the church. With her approval some of this money will be used to put in new front windows. They will have some color in them, and when they are lighted up by electricity, will be a great embellishment to the fortress-like front.

It is a matter of regret that the repairs on the organ have been so long delayed. On one thing we are determined, and that is that we will not give our musical festival in celebration of these enrichments until the organ is in the very best condition.

The resignation of Mrs. H. P. Taylor as the head of the Mothers' Meeting was sent to the Rector at the last meeting of that Society, and was duly reported at the Parochial Meeting. By resolution, the Rector was requested to express to Mrs. Taylor the affection and respect of St. Stephen's, our regret that she is no longer able to attend the Society she presided over so acceptably, and our gratitude for her example of faithful service. Few people have had her wonderful gift of exercising authority for the good of others without any touch of self-seeking or vanity.

May her sunset skies be splendid and serene. As long as she is spared to us, she will be the Honorary President of St. Stephen's Mothers' Meeting. Mrs. Daniel R. Harper was officially appointed the acting president.

I have been very much interested in the healing mission of Mr. Hickson. In some cases I have recommended people to consult him. "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of." I am persuaded that the universe is not a block universe, as James puts it, but that personality flows through it as freely as the waves flow through a net. But I do not believe in sacerdotalism. I regard it as an accretion upon Christianity, and a perversion. I can as little believe that the healing wrought by Mr. Hickson's ministry proves sacerdotalism as I could believe that the sum of the angles in a plane triangle is more than two right angles if he should tell it to me, immediately after healing someone. A miracle could not prove sacerdotalism to me. All this sacerdotal paraphernalia, it seems to me, is calculated to build up a theological system that is in the long run hurtful. The woman who touched the robe of Jesus was healed, and she evidently thought that magic came out of the garment. Jesus said, "My daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole." I believe the power of faith is something perfectly wonderful. Every day I see that mind can control matter. Doctors tell us of real diseases that have their origin entirely in the imagination. I believe that with the peace and confidence and strength that come into the human heart by communion with God, great blessings and healings are wrought, but I cannot bear to see these healings made the source of relic worship, or of trust in the magic powers of clergymen ordained in certain ways. I believe that those who have hitherto done most for spiritual healing in the Episcopal Church feel as I do about Mr. Hickson's mission. Moreover, while good health is a wonderful blessing, and one of the chief sources of comfort, it is not the great end of religion. When St. Paul enumerates the fruits of the Spirit, he gives love, joy, peace, but he omits perfect health. "I have pain," said the dying Baxter; "there is no denying sense; I have pain, but I have peace."

The Thursday communions will be discontinued until the fall. The Wednesday Noonday Service will be kept up all summer. The Sunday night service will be continued until July. Mr. Keable will take the first part of his holiday in June.

It will be noticed that some of the old vestrymen have dropped out at this last election, and some new ones have come in. Mr. Reifsnyder and Mr. Lineaweaver felt that they could not continue to serve. Dr. Herbert Old has been elected by the vestry to one of the vacancies, and the other place will be left unfilled for a time until the vestry can ascertain whether Mr. Roland S. Morris is going to remain in this country, or whether he will go back to Japan. We should all like to have Mr. Morris back again on the vestry if he is going to give up his embassy. He always took a special interest in the Burd School, and we believe he would be greatly interested in the problems which that trust lays upon the vestry.

I expect to go to Vermont with my family again this summer. I shall, however, be always in touch with the parish. Every now and then I find that some of the people who have been worshipping with us make themselves known to me, and I learn that they have been coming to the church often for months and sometimes for years. I wish it might be considered a matter of good form for people who are attending a church to come into the vestry and make themselves known to the minister. It would greatly assist us in our services. For my part I never take much interest in preaching to strange congregations, but it is comparatively easy to preach when I see before me a number of people with whom I am acquainted, and of whose problems I have some knowledge. The attendant of the church who makes himself known and becomes a parishioner is a real helper to us in our ministrations.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

St. Stephen's Benevolent Society.

St. Stephen's Benevolent Society opened Wednesday, November 5th, with a good attendance. We have done sewing for the Pennsylvania Hospital, the Episcopal, Jefferson, Presbyterian, Howard, Oncologic, Woman's, Presbyterian Orphanage, Southern Home for Destitute Children, and Visiting Nurse Society. We average from ten to seventeen women who do the sewing, and the Society runs six months.

We aim never to make less than 4,000 articles. From November, 1915, to May 1, 1916, we finished 4,781; November, 1916, to May, 1917, was our record year—that year we made 7,000; 1917 to 1918, 4,635; last year 3,150, and from last November to this May 4,699, making 1,549 more than last year. We did not get as much material from the hospitals this year so had to make up the deficiency.

One of our members who takes a deep interest in the work sold the articles left in the closets from May, 1919, to May, 1920, to women who were glad to get them at the cost of the material, aprons and towels, and in this way added to our fund $602.00. Through another member the Germantown Hospital bought over $100.00 of towels and dusters.

The women of the Society are very faithful, never staying away except for some good reason. Our new members have shown so much enthusiasm and done such good work that we feel as if they had been with us always.

Dear Mrs. Browne had to leave us before we closed and will spend the summer with a sister in England. Miss Swift sails in June. We separate for the summer, but it is always a happy day when we meet again the first Wednesday in November.

We accepted with great regret the resignation of Mrs. T. B. Clemens, and hope to get her back in the Benevolent, as she was most faithful in her work.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

The Woman's Auxiliary of St. Stephen's has held the usual seven meetings during the season of 1919-1920, with an average attendance of twenty-six. There were neither deaths nor resignations, and eleven new members joined, bringing the number up to one hundred and sixteen names registered. Of these, seventy-four have contributed to the treasury.

At the October meeting, after the corporate communion service, the spiritual side of the Nation-Wide Campaign was explained by Rev. Mr. Keable, followed in November by an illustrated lecture by Rev. Dr. Llewellyn N. Caley, Dean of the Convocation of North Philadelphia on "The Diocese at Work," giving in detail the activity, growth and needs of the churches and missions in the diocese. Both of these talks were helpful in elucidating the object of the Nation-Wide Campaign.

At the December meeting Miss Dorothea Emlen of the Church Mission of Help, spoke eloquently of that branch of work among women and girls, followed by an able paper on Liberia, by Miss Anne M. Earle, and it is gratifying to record that in response to this appeal, fifty dollars and twenty-five cents were sent to Miss Conway for the purchase of instruments and necessary supplies for St. Timothy's Hospital, Cape Mount, $33.00 in cash for instruments and the remainder the value of articles contributed for the box sent from the Church House.

An important step was taken in January through the formation of a committee consisting of Mrs. Carl E. Grammer, Mrs. C. Watson McKeehan and Mrs. Samuel H. Austin, who, moved by the request of Rev. B. L. Ancell for funds to enlarge the Mahan School at Yangchow, China, have raised through their efforts the goodly sum of $2,203.06.

In February, Mrs. T. B. Clemens gave an account of housing conditions in the city; Mrs. Clemens and Mrs. John C. Browne being delegates from St. Stephen's to the Philadelphia Housing Association will bring reports of such matters to the Auxiliary from time to time.

Mrs. A. S. Lippi, of Italian parentage, told of Italian conditions in Philadelphia at the meeting in March.

The delegates have been most faithful in attendance at the monthly meetings at the Church House, the additional meetings in connection with the Nation-Wide Campaign and the Church Service League, the stated general meetings, various conferences and large missionary meetings, so that St. Stephen's has kept in touch and has been represented by one or more women at every meeting called.

The Mission Study Class, with twelve members, under the leadership of Mrs. W. Horner Smith, considered Americanization in every phase with the aid of the text-book "Neighbors," and much broadening interest was shown by visits to the neighboring churches of Greeks, Italians and Roumanians. The offering of the class of $33 for work among the Italians was presented by the youngest member of the class, Miss Cerboni, at the annual meeting of the Mission Study Classes. A feeling of good fellowship is engendered by these classes and a quickening of the spiritual nature is invariably the result of these hours of study and prayer.

At the last meeting of the Auxiliary in April the annual election resulted in the retention of the present officers, who desire to have the work of the Auxiliary continue to grow in strength of purpose, and in devotion to the object of extending the Kingdom of Christ, and to inspire all women with the sense of responsibility to do their share so far as may be, in the triple manner of service, gifts and prayer and the greatest of these is prayer.

Garden Party at Wyck.

The Woman's Aid of the Convocation of North Philadelphia announces a garden party to be given on Thursday, June 3rd, at Wyck, the resident of Mr. C. W. Haines, corner Germantown avenue and Walnut Lane, from 3 until 9 o'clock. Tickets, 25 cents, admit to the lawn where booths will be erected with all kinds of articles for sale, and to the beautiful rose garden, which is one of the sights of Germantown, and it is only on rare occasions that the public may have access to it.

St. Stephen's will have a booth in connection with other parishes of the Convocation and donations of fancy and domestic articles and money are asked for so as to help benefit All Souls' Mission for the Deaf, for which object this garden party is arranged. Candy, cakes, soft drinks, ice cream and a cafeteria with food at moderate prices will enable visitors to have a substantial or a light supper as they desire.

Donations may be sent to Mrs. Nicholas A. Petry, McKean Avenue, Germantown, Chairman of St. Stephen's table, or to Miss Laura Bell, St. Stephen's Parish House, 19 South Tenth Street, President of the Woman's Aid of the Convocation of North Philadelphia. Please help the "silent people" of the Diocese.

Auxiliary Notes.

The following notice has been sent to the Woman's Auxiliary since its last meeting for the season and is, therefore, printed in the PARISH NEWS.

The managers of the Church Farm School, Glen Loch, Pa., will give their annual tea on Friday, June 4th, and invite all members of the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Stephen's to attend. The train leaving Broad Street Station at 2.30 P. M., will be met at Glen Loch. Send name and address to your Secretary, Mrs. William H. Hollar, Jr., Drexel Hill, Pa., so that tea cards may be sent later on to those who signify their intention of going.

Woman's United Thank Offering.

At the sixteenth annual service of the Woman's United Thank Offering of Pennsylvania, Dr. Richardson preached the sermon, his theme being, "God's Grace Sufficient to Save to the Uttermost." He alluded to another meeting in a nearby parish church and spoke frequently of Mr. James Moore Hickson's preaching missions, of the improving bodily infirmities of the multitudes who attended the missions, of their faith and hope and the Father's transcendent power to heal to the uttermost.

While waiting the result of the offering Bishop Rhinelander announced that Deaconess Powell was now finishing her course at the training school and would enter upon missionary labors in the West at graduation.

At the treasurer's meeting which followed in the Parish House Mrs. North presided. Attention was called to the fact that this was a thank offering over and above the Nation-Wide Campaign donations. Of this 199 Parishes and Missions of this Diocese and 162 United Offering list, this number includes four new Parishes.

Comparative contributions: 1913, $3,200; 1916, $5,969; 1919, $7,117, representing about one-fifth of the Communicants of the Diocese.

Mrs. North introduced her successor, Mrs. John Pleasant Hollingsworth, formerly from St. James Parish, who made a short address.

Received during the last three years, $1,200. This year, $337 and 71 subscribers.

The meetings of the Aid Society which were discontinued during the Lenten season of 1919 were resumed this year. With this co-operation we were enabled to have a fairly good supply of baby garments for Miss Lewis' work among the poor of the parish. St. Stephen's Farm.

At our last annual meeting I reported that "In the summer of 1918 there were not as many visitors to the Farm as usual, probably due to the increased incomes of many who used our Summer House for rest and holiday." This condition was even more marked last summer and it did not seem as though our Farm was needed in the way that it had been in past years.

In view of the present conditions, I feel the Vestry did well in selling the Farm. We received for it about what it cost. It was sold to Christ's Home near Warminster, a home for homeless children which has been doing fine work for many years and is kept open all the year. We should be glad and hope that our Farm will be used in a good work for humanity, even greater than ours.

Mothers' Meeting.

May 12, 1920.

The members of the Mothers' Meeting of St. Stephen's Church have shown their continued interest in the organization by an average attendance of fifty at twenty-one meetings during the past inclement winter. We have lost one member by death, and have added eight new names to our roll. The Annual Sale was held on December 4th.

Mrs. Taylor was present at the communion service on Holy Thursday, though the evening was very stormy. The mothers have been entertained during the winter in various ways by music, recitations and helpful talks.

The season ended with a beautiful pageant, "Flora's Holiday," arranged by Miss Edna E. Marley and given by a number of young girls from the High School.

Miss Mary Page Grammer contributed some charming songs, accompanying herself on the guitar.

Dr. Grammer presided in his usual happy manner, reading a letter to the mothers from Mrs. Taylor, who was unable to be present, and making the presentation of flowers from the "Mothers to the Officers."

The bountiful supply of ice cream and cake furnished by Mrs. Taylor was much enjoyed by the large audience.

B. M. HARPER,

Report of the Parish Visitor.

This long, severe winter, with its most cruel weather, the cold east winds, snow, sleet and icy streets, the high price of coal, as well as the high price of everything else, caused much suffering, for wages, pensions and salaries would not stretch far enough, and consequently the destitution was greater than ever.

There have been many appeals to us this year. A Southern woman whose father was at one time a slave owner, is so reduced that she has absolutely nothing but what we are able to provide for her. Dr. Grammer has made it possible for her to have a good warm room all winter. She is ill and not able to work and earn even a little money.

On our visiting list is a woman suffering from tuberculosis. The doctor tells her he cannot help her unless she gives up work and goes to bed and rests, but she is not able to see her way clear to do that. She writes me: "I am not so well as I was a year ago, as I have the chills and fever all night long, and my lung is affected, but I am keeping it all to myself, as the doctor says I am not dangerous to anyone, and I am very careful. I am now starting to take milk and eggs again, and will fight it off. There was such a lovely piece in the paper about a man who had tuberculosis, and he fought it off, and if it is will power it needs I will fight it off." It is refreshing to meet with a person who has so much power of will to fight off encroaching disease.

A widow with two little children finds it hard work even to keep them supplied with shoes, for they will wear them out in running, which worries her considerably, and she says she scolds them; but when the children try to comfort her by saying, "Never mind, mother, we will soon be able to work," she reproaches herself for being so impatient when she ought to be thankful that the children are well and happy, even if they do wear out their shoes.

A little child of five years witnessed her father's death by an accident; as a result, she has been subject ever since to epilepsy, and now although grown, she is not able to work, and her mother is obliged to support her. This she does by scrubbing offices.

The little babies came into their share of good warm clothing this winter. Although we had a number of layettes, the calls were loud and long, and we were soon out of supplies. But St. Stephen's Aid Society worked well for us during Lent and replenished our stock, for which both we and the babies are very grateful.

A gentleman (we do not know what we would do without him, he is such a friend of the poor) gave us nine blankets and a number of boxes each containing two pairs of good warm union suits for men. One of many grateful letters received runs thus:

"My husband wishes me to tell you how pleased he was to receive those two thick warm union suits, and to thank you very much. They could not have come at a better time, as his others are three years old, and I can scarcely patch them any more. We were looking forward to an early spring, so that his old ones would last him, but it seems there is no end to this winter, and now it is snowing again, so you can think how nicely they have come in."

Mrs. Adinell Hewson made us a present of a ton of coal this winter. Last spring she also gave us a number of bundles of warm clothing, which did excellent service this winter for many who could not afford to buy them. Any person having winter clothing no longer needed, and not wishing to pack it away for the summer, will do much good by sending it to St. Stephen's, where it will be taken care of and distributed next winter.

Miss Gebhart's yearly memorial has been given to us regularly for years. Although it is always needed, it has never been more so than this year; we are applying it to one of our poor families, consisting of four little children and two women; only one of them is able to work.

Our one hundred and twenty-six Christmas baskets went to one hundred and twenty-six needy homes, for there are so many people that can hardly live under present conditions. Many letters thanking the donors were received. One reads as follows:

"I do want to thank you for the wonderful Christmas basket received. It was, indeed, a precious load and a heavy one, but none too heavy for all the goodness it contained. I wish you could have seen how we enjoyed our Christmas dinner! Our little boy always says the 'grace' Miss Dale used at the Farm, and without anyone telling him, he added, 'Dear Jesus, we thank Thee for this awful good dinner,' whereupon his little brother added, 'Mother, it is a wonder he didn't forget God for being so good to us.' I added a prayer for those who were so good as to help make up this wonderful Christmas basket."

Each summer Mrs. Albert Pancoast has sent one of our crippled women to the Mercer House at Atlantic City for a specified time. We are very thankful to her for this great kindness, as it is a bright spot in this afflicted woman's life. Mr. Luffbarry looks well after a family consisting of three children with mother and grandmother; the mother works in a laundry to support them all. The grandmother stays at home and takes care of the children, and Mr. Luffbarry's regular allowance comes every month and adds so much to her hard-earned wages.

Many hospitals have been visited continually during the year, as we usually have some of our sick in them. The women of the Mothers' Meeting and the Sunday School scholars are visited faithfully when ill.

On one of the coldest days this winter it was necessary to go to the cemetery to lay at rest a man who had died of cancer, one who had been separated for nineteen years from his wife; but in his need she came and ministered to him until his death. After Mr. Keable had read the Burial Service over him the body was taken to the cemetery in an undertaker's wagon, as there was no money to pay for a hearse, while the wife and myself followed in a trolley. On our return trip to the city we were glad to accept the shelter of the wagon, as it was one of the worst days in the winter, with snow thick upon the ground and the rain turning to hail as it fell.

These are a few of the many cases which have been helped in the past year. It seems to me that St. Stephen's has a record of much good accomplished, for which we may all be truly thankful.

Respectfully submitted,

K. H. Lewis.

The Sunday School.

The Sunday School happily survives in spite of the many uses its building has been put to during and since the war. In fact, we seem to have had a renewal of life. One of the joys of Sunday School work is that its constant youthful re-enforcements keep it ever young. Scholars grow big and move into the church or away, for reasons good and otherwise, the faithful remain, but the school goes on forever. In our school the sessions continue all the year, summer and winter, and in the summer time we have had two sessions—the second one being an afternoon session at the Farm.

We find our brass band of boys, under the good guidance of Mr. Cooke, brings in much enthusiasm and our girls are finding much interest in the possibilities of a string orchestra for them. We are all very grateful to our good friends of the church who have made this possible through the thoughtfulness and leadership of Mr. Keable.

For a number of Sundays we have had 100 children present long before the opening service at 9.45 A. M., and their happy smiling faces prove that we are winning the big majority to early attendance. We have a roll of 200 names, with an attendance at our best of 150, scholars, officers and teachers. Considering our location this speaks well for the spirit of the school.

Those who were with us at the last June picnic at the Farm, will agree that we never had a happier outing, and, of course, we are saddened to lose the place we all loved so much. But youth never dies and we are planning for other outings and we hope for as successful an excursion this year.

Some wise ones think our method of procedure should be more along pedagogical lines or as secular schools are run; whereas, really, a Sunday School is a small band of faithful men and women, mostly women of the Church, bringing and keeping the young to the love and obedience of the ideals and teachings of their Guide and Master—the Christ. In the Sunday School it is the personal influence of a devout teacher over a small group that wins them for a holy life. Often the seed of love planted in apparently inattentive scholars, does not sprout until later in life when watered by trials and difficulties; these seeds and fond memories of their teachers' lives and thoughts come to fruition and add more souls to the Kingdom of Christ's Love.

Even at our Christmas festival our play, given by the children, is consecrated with prayer in the name of the Christ to show His loving desire to make others happy. We feel that last Christmas we were able to present one of the best among the many we have yet given.

Our winter schedule of lessons culminated in our beautiful Easter Carol Service, when we all marched into the church on the Sunday morning following Easter, when Rev. Mr. Keable so wisely arranged the giving of potted plants to each scholar. Our Lenten offering to missions, then formally presented at the altar, amounted to $165.00, quite surpassing former years. So that all together we were pleased to report an excellent spirit of progress among the young of our church through the Sunday School.

Faithfully submitted,

G. H. Streaker, Supt.

The Burd School.

It has been said that happy is the land which is without history, and, apart from a momentous event which has just taken place in connection with the property of the Burd School, the Committee of Women Visitors has again the pleasant duty of reporting that the work of the school to which they give their attention continues to be carried out in a satisfactory and gratifying manner. The general health of the children has been good, although all but four succumbed to "flu" while measles, mumps and pink-eye claimed their victims. Two little girls had pneumonia. One proved a very serious case but it is good to be able to report her recovery. Efficient and at the same time, sympathetic discipline has been maintained and the general atmosphere of the school is one of happiness and well being.

Nine new pupils have been admitted during the year, six have left having completed the course, leaving at present forty inmates. Two of the older girls were confirmed and one of the little ones was baptised. In December a musicale was given to which Miss Tappen invited the members of the Vestry, the Board of Visitors and also the teachers of the various schools attended by the girls of the Burd School. Miss Tappen's desire was to give the teachers an opportunity to see the surroundings of the Home and thus enable them to form a correct estimate of the advantages afforded by this institution. It was a delightful affair and it was also very gratifying to have the head of the Banks Business College say that the girls who came to him from the Burd School could always be distinguished by their quiet deportment and good manners.

About ten days ago, by the aid of Miss Tappen, some of the pupils conceived and produced a play for the benefit of the Armenians which resulted in their raising a fund of over $100. Let us hope that the work of the school may be continued as happily and successfully for many years to come in its new quarters.

Girls' Friendly Society.

Monday evening, October 6th, St. Stephen's Branch of the Girls' Friendly Society opened for the season of 1919-1920.

The activities of the Branch this season have been many and varied.

Twice during the winter the members prepared and served supper for the men of the congregation.

One evening was spent helping Dr. Rose pack Christmas presents, to be sent to the French orphans.

Three French orphans have been supported and our adopted shut-in visited each week by two girls. Baskets of provisions and flowers have also been sent her at the holiday seasons.

No part of our work is more enjoyed than the filling of the fifty Christmas stockings for the children in the Philadelphia Hospital. This year, at the special request of the head social worker at the hospital, handkerchiefs and a hair ribbon were added to the contents of each girl's stocking and handkerchiefs and neckties to each boy's.

Twenty-five Christmas boxes, filled with candy and small toys, nine dressed dolls and a large box of toys were sent to St. John's Neighborhood House.

This year the members worked harder than ever for their "Special Effort" and were rewarded by the splendid result of $458.50. This money, raised for missionary and charitable objects, was divided among the following:

Materials for Lenten sewing	$60.00
Girls' Friendly Lodge	25.00
Cape May Holiday House	10.00
Young Women's Christian Association	10.00
Mahan School (China)	25.00

General Missions	15.00
Beneficial Fund	20.00
Special case of a girl in need	15.00
Miss Wilken's Memorial Flowers	2.00
	$453.50

Thirty children's knitted caps and sweaters were made and sent to the French orphans.

During Lent the members made ninety-four garments for St. Thomas's Mission (Colored), Eastover, S. C., and twenty-one children's sweaters and caps for San Juan Indian Mission Hospital, Farmington, N. M.

The Married Branch Helpers met on Wednesday afternoons during Lent and made twenty-five articles of children's clothing for the City Mission.

Hallowe'en, Christmas and Easter were celebrated with appropriate parties and the turkey dinner, enjoyed through the kindness of Mr. Reifsnyder, will be long remembered.

Very successful Millinery and Elocution Classes have been held during the season and the ever popular suppers served every Monday evening.

Our good friend, Mrs. David D. Wood, assisted by her daughter and a friend, gave us a delightful evening of music.

Mrs. Edwin C. Grice and Miss Lida Stokes Adams gave instructive and inspiring talks on "Citizenship."

The older members of the Branch were rejoiced by several visits from their beloved friend, Sister Elizabeth, and all thoroughly enjoyed the evening. She spoke on "Conditions Existing in England During the War."

Monday in Holy Week Mr. Keable gave a lecture on the "Passion Play of Oberammergau." The beautiful pictures and the reverent and inspiring description of the play were greatly appreciated.

The Branch has been strengthened and helped by the addition of three new Working Associates.

Most grateful thanks are offered to those who have encouraged and helped us in our work and as the record of another year comes to an end, it is with the deepest realization of the continued blessing of God and in firm reliance upon His strength for the future.

Dear Friends: There is no word more beautiful than "friends" to one who has been confined to a chair for years, whose hands are incapable of the slightest task, yet whose mind is so active as to crave companionship. Through you, dear friends, several young people during the last two years have put more sunshine into my life, as Miss McCollin's band of the Girls' Friendly Society of St. Stephen's Church remembers me constantly with visits and gifts. On Easter I received a plant, on Thanksgiving a basket of fruit; one Christmas a box with a gift package to be opened every hour, and this Christmas a dressing sack, hot water bottle and other things designed for an invalid's comfort and happiness. Were I to attempt to make a comparison, however, I am inclined to think I would express my greatest delight at the birthday party that the girls gave me in my room, at which time I fully realized that all that those dear girls have been doing for me has been truly a work of love. It is beautiful to realize that there is a good bit of heaven here on earth.—Mrs. James Kelly, 1813 W. Berks St., Philadelphia.

Church Periodical Club.

The call for children's books is sounding from all parts of the country. Community and parish libraries are being established as the only places for wholesome recreation. The shelves must be filled and we are all asked to help.

In response to an urgent appeal sent us by a faithful worker in St. Paul's School for orphans at Beaufort, N. C., five packages of books were forwarded. These were most gratefully received.

In a recent letter the secretary says: "You dear Pennsylvania folks really make me feel that I shall realize my desire to see established in Beaufort a library which shall be open for the free use of all our town people.

"At present our greatest need is for reference books, particularly those relating to English and United States history to be used in our History Map Work."

Many of St. Stephen's faithful church members send magazines regularly each month to missionaries and shut-ins in all parts of the world and frequently receive most interesting letters of appreciation and thanks.

A missionary in the State of Washington tells how his two boys "just devour the Popular Mechanics magazine and I myself enjoy many parts of it."

A clergyman's wife, at Lewistown, Mont., says: "Ever since we were married, fifteen years ago, we have enjoyed the privileges of the Church Periodical Club, but at no time has it meant more than it does now. In these days of moderate salaries for clergymen and immoderate prices of even the bare necessities, there is very little margin for books and magazines."

Again, a retired clergyman, now living at Poolesville, Md., thanks us most heartily for offering to send the Atlantic Monthly, as he says: "It will help to while away a portion of an exceedingly quiet life."

The periodicals subscribed for directly through the publishers are always most gladly welcomed.

Since the beginning of the year twenty ladies of St. Stephen's have shown their interest by enrolling as Associate Members of our Periodical Club and, as there is no regular appropriation for carrying on the work, the ten dollars so contributed will be of great use in mailing periodicals and books sent to the librarian at the Parish House.

The summer of 1919 was the seventh season of the Vacation Bible School held at St. Stephen's Church. It was undoubtedly the most successful year.

We opened the school on June 30th, and closed it on the 9th of August. It was in session six weeks. Total enrollment, 120; daily average attendance, 55. During the first two weeks the enrollment and attendance grew most alarmingly. It was quite a problem to handle the various classes with only two instructors. In order to relieve the situation, one of the older girls was made an assistant helper. She had attended the school for a number of years and, therefore, knew quite a little of the work. This plan relieved the situation immediately. Then followed a rainy season during which time the enrollment stayed just about the same. The daily attendance dropped down to normal.

Of the children enrolled, 54 were Protestants, 32 were Catholics and 34 were Jewish. They were between 1 and 14 years of age. We actually had two children who were only one year of age. They were called the "Mascots" of the school. The different nationalities represented were: Americans, Italians, Hebrews, Poles, Hungarians, Greeks and during the last few days we had three lovely Japanese children. They could not speak a word of English. It was very difficult to get the parents of these children to consent to their coming to the school. They were afraid something would happen to them. When one of the older girls of the school brought them, she had to give their father her name and address. She also had to promise that the children would be back in their home at a certain time.

The school was in charge of a principal who was assisted by a manual training teacher and a kindergarten teacher. The staff of teachers is very efficient and has been connected with the school the past three years.

The daily order of exercises has been outlined, to avoid confusion, as well as to secure the proper amount of change and variety for the children. The order of exercises in the Bible School was as follows: 9.15-9.30 doors open and registration. Devotional exercises were then held, after which a few minutes were given to "Habit Talks." Then followed the music period. The moral and spiritual purpose of the school is kept in view through the music activity. The Bible period came next in order. The supreme purpose of the school is to develop clean Christ-like character in boys and girls. Hence the daily Bible lesson is not to furnish dogmatic or sectarian teaching, but elementary Christian instruction that can be applied to the daily life of the young, who are exposed to the temptations of the streets. At the end of the six weeks one is quite impressed with the number of Bible stories the children remembered and also the great number of Bible verses memorized. The number of songs and hymns that they remembered is also amazing.

The manual period followed the Bible period. In this time, the object is not to make things but to build character. Slurring over mistakes in baskets or bead work, in fact any work at all they are engaged in, is steadily discouraged. The children are trained to respect material that does not belong to them. Unselfishness is developed in them by inducing them to work for the pleasure and comfort of the sick and crippled.

At 11.25-11.30 closing exercises are conducted. This consists of the salute to the flag, the singing of "America" and the children's Benediction being said or sung.

The total cost of the school, including salaries and materials, was $143; an amount much less than it cost to run the school any previous year.

The school will open this year on Monday, June 28th, and will close on Friday, August 6th.

FREDERICK B. KEABLE, Treasurer.

Rector's Letter.

Fifteen years—a decade and a half—what a goodly period it is! There are only five such periods in the life of a man 75 years old. Two of them will carry a man from his birth to the grand climacteric of his physical vigor. Thirty years used to be a generation, and I have been rector of St. Stephen's for half that time. There is not a girl at the Burd School that can recollect any rector before me. The boys and girls that were just out of their "teens" when I appeared on the scene are now settled in various careers.

Of all the vestrymen who united in that unanimous call that brought me from Norfolk, only one is now on the vestry, Mr. J. Hunter Ewing. Long may he be with us, to cheer our meetings and aid our deliberations by his cordial friendliness and his wise and progressive counsels.

Many have been the changes. What a noble company has journeyed on from this old church. Mr. Cleemann, our faithful accounting warden of so many years, such a devoted lover of St. Stephen's; Mr. George L. Crawford, the eminent lawyer; Clayton Fotterall MacMichael, our Sunday School Superintendent, and Secretary of the Vestry; J. Austin McDowell, who took such special interest in the Burd School; Miss Fanny and Miss Eliza Magee, and their brothers, James and Horace, who made such generous bequests to the Church; Dr. Mitchell, of whose great gifts we were so proud, and Mrs. Mitchell, who meant so much to our Benevolent Society; Miss Maria S. Wilkins, our gracious and inspiring Secretary of the Girls' Friendly Society; Mr. William H. Hollar, the Chairman of our Building Committee; Dr. David D. Wood, our wonderful organist; the Rev. Robert Long, and the Rev. Mr. Miller, our assistants; Mr. Joseph Clayton our Verger for many years. What a goodly company it is, who have crossed over the river of death ahead of us.

I have restricted myself to the officeholders and standard bearers. How the list would lengthen out if I spoke of the earnest men and helpful women who lived to serve, and found in Christ a Captain and Leader, who have passed on from this regiment of the Church Militant to join the Church Triumphant. We thank God for their good examples.

In the list of burials since our last issue, a list that is unusually small, it will be noted that we have lost some members of long standing. Mrs. Kempton was an old member, who had long been kept at home by ill health, but who always valued her membership here. Miss Rynard was one of our most regular attendants. After a long illness she seemed on the road to recovery. I had, indeed, given thanks at her request for her recovery, when suddenly her vital powers failed. She was a true Christian, unselfish, brave, cheerful, helpful, a blessing to all who knew her.

Dr. Edward Blackwell, a recent accession to our membership, a graduate of Princeton, where he was a classmate of President Wilson, was a busy physician, who loved to worship with us. His favorite service was the Sunday night service.

Mrs. Theresa C. Longshore was a devout Friend, a leader in that communion so honorably connected with the history of Pennsylvania. Her connection with St. Stephen's was through Old St. Stephen's Club, in which she was a faithful and helpful worker. She seemed so full of serene cheerfulness and abounding vitality, and she had so much to live for in her large family of young children that her death is an inscrutable mystery, and seems hard to reconcile with wisdom and love. But who are we, the children of a day, the poor limited inhabiters of earth, that we should presume to imagine that we can understand all of the ways of Him who filleth all things, and worketh for ultimate ends.

Similar submission and facts are called for by the death of Mrs. Mary Spring Gardiner Frazier, the wife of Dr. Chas. H. Frazier. A singularly ardent and idealistic nature, sensitive to the call of great causes, eager to join in the crusade against sin, oppression, injustice and wrong, it is good to know that she found in St. Stephen's a congenial church home.

By the death of Richard L. O'Donnel, one of our oldest members loses her only son. For several years, while he lived at Merion, Mr. O'Donnel had a pew at St. Stephen's, and attended our services as regularly as the conditions of his life permitted. When he became the head of the Eastern Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, he was obliged to move to Pittsburgh, but when he reached the end of his earthly career, the family desired that the service should be at St. Stephen's.

To all those who have been bereaved by these deaths, we give our deepest sympathy. "'Tis hard to part, when friends are dear." While it is true that for the Christian it is a gain to die, it is none the less true that such partings are like the tearing off of an arm, like a fearful blow upon one's heart. It is natural and it is certainly not wrong to grieve at such separations, but we must not sorrow as those without hope. In our grief we must remember that there are glorious promises, and that God expects us to trust Him, and to accept as loyal children the conditions under which we receive the gift of life.

This last month has been so crowded with personal incidents that touch my own life very closely that I have not been able to give much time to the PARISH NEWS. That is the explanation of the late appearance of this number. As Mr. Keable informed the congregation my mother fell and broke her right arm and shoulder on September 23rd; on September 29th my family sailed to spend a year abroad in Grenoble, France, and on the night of the same day, my brother, William Sparrow Grammer, died. He was next in age to me, and we were in our boyhood inseparable companions. He left behind a noble example of unselfishness and fidelity. I have appreciated much the messages of sympathy from the congregation. I thank God for such a brother and such friends and for the blessed hope of immortality which has been brought to us by Jesus Christ. My mother, I am thankful to say, is on the road to recovery.

In November all our societies will be having their regular meetings, the Benevolent, the Woman's Auxiliary, the Girls' Friendly, the Mothers' Meeting, the King's Daughters.

I hope that we may be able to get the men together in some efficient Brotherhood, Club or Fraternity. If the League of the Kingdom sounds too ecclesiastical, or out of touch with modern life, can't some other name be found? The youths who attend our church are entitled to Christian fellowship, not only in worship, but also in social hours. Some announcement will shortly be made about the Newsboys' Club.

I am obliged to appeal to those who contribute to the Rector's official purse to send me the contributions that they have so generously been giving for years at this time. Out of this fund are paid the salary of a secretary, who comes one or two mornings a week, as the need may be, the cost of publishing the PARISH NEWS, the stationery of the office, the expenses of the Altar Society, and various expenses incidental to the running of a large church. The high cost of printing has left me in debt to the printers.

Perhaps I ought to state definitely my plans of residence. I am staying at the Burd School, and will move with that school to the new quarters, 4226 Baltimore Avenue. On Tuesday and Wednesday mornings I expect to be at my office in the Parish House. I can always be reached either through the office or at the Burd School.

Dr. Leighton Parks, in his agreeable articles in the Atlantic tells of a visit to an English home, where the head of the family, at the close of the week, after family prayers, said a few words to his collected household and asked them to forgive him any faults or transgressions he might have committed during the week. On the second Sunday in October, the anniversary of my first sermon in St. Stephen's, fifteen years ago, I spoke of some of the problems that confronted us at the beginning of my rectorship, of the severe injury that the Church had sustained in its prestige, of the uncertainty and disheartenment of the time. To God, I would ascribe the praise for having given us the rich opportunities of service that we have enjoyed together in the past years. I thank Him for the loyalty of the old parishioners and for the accession of new members.

If I have spoken any words of wisdom at any crisis I realize profoundly that it has been chiefly due to the help that I have received, as a minister of the Word, for whom loving friends are praying, as an agent, working for the Kingdom of God, I have always been upheld by the conviction that I have a message.

I wish to acknowledge frankly that I have this treasure in an earthern vessel. After the example of that English friend of Dr. Parks, I ask my congregation to overlook my shortcomings. I have tried to speak out clearly my convictions. If I have seemed to come short in gentleness of tone or consideration of the views of others, I beg you to believe that this was not my intention.

For the record of these fifteen years I am, on the whole, profoundly grateful, and I wish to express again my appreciation of the faithful assistance I have received from my staff, of the wise counsel and work of the Vestry, and of the friendliness and responsiveness of the congregation.

Hitherto the Lord hath helped us, and looking to Him, let us go bravely forward into the unknown.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

The Sunday School.

On June 29th, a most delightful day, we had our annual excursion. Of course, we missed the farm; but that passed-joy was well replaced for the day at least, by the delights of Willow Grove. We had about 100 with us, mostly of the younger scholars, as the older ones were employed. The woodland there made a good picnic ground and the music and varied attractions made the day fly quickly by. We arrived safely home escaping a coming shower.

Our summer sessions began in July with a continued good attendance every Sunday morning. Our motion pictures, to those who came early, proved a good way to keep us on time. We are indebted to Mr. Carrigan for his faithfulness in operating for us, and to the helpfulness of Miss Lewis.

Our lessons were taught as one big class and were on episodes from the out-of-door life of the Master.

Mr. Cook frequently helped us with the music. Mr. Klink and Mr. Keable came to the rescue when the Superintendent was, on several occasions, called to speak elsewhere.

The older girls had a day at Atlantic City and the boys were fortunately able to have a week at "Treasure Island." The Church Picnic by auto busses to Valley Forge, was enjoyed by many of the scholars and teachers, all of whom are, of course, hungry to go there again.

We have had a very good summer school and are looking forward to opening in regular winter session with teachers and classes on Sunday morning, October 3rd. Mr. Keable has very kindly invited us, the teachers, to a meeting at his home on Friday evening, the 24th of September, when we expect to plan for an enthusiastic rally of our forces this fall. Several new teachers are lining up for the winter's work with the children. We are grateful to all who have helped us and will welcome all who would care to join our fold.

G. H. STREAKER,
Superintendent.

The change of two Valve Trombones for Slide Trombones as Schauffle and Scherzer are now big enough to handle same, and the addition of a woodwind section of Four B Flats Clarinets and one E Flat Clarinet (15 Key and 5 Ring Model) and one Piccolo D Flat (Myer System 6 Keys).

Progress was greatly retarded by changes in membership and the failure of some of the boys to do home practice. This feature is overcoming itself by a natural process of elimination by the survival of the fittest.

The Church Periodical Club.

The need for magazines is as great as ever. Have you a Harpers', Popular Mechanics, an American Magazine — anything — which you would be willing to send to some one who has little or no reading matter?

We are particularly grateful for a promise to send regularly once a month—as late as you choose. Many of our far-away clergymen or shut-ins can get them in no other way.

In order to appreciate the hunger for reading matter among isolated people, we need to cultivate our imagination. Let us all try to realize that these magazines and other periodicals, with their articles, pictures and advertisements represent to many a man and woman public library, concert, theatre, opera, intellectual companionship and the nameless something due to mere contact with the wider stream of human life.

Rector's Letter.

MY DEAR PARISHIONERS:

The great purpose of this year's work ought to be the revival of the parochial activities that were suppressed during the war and afterwards by Old St. Stephen's Club, and its successor, the Newsboys' Club. We used to have a flourishing dancing class that met weekly under the supervision of Miss Lewis, and often had an attendance of 50 or 60. This must be revived. To that end I am calling a meeting of the young men and youths and of chaperones and girls on Wednesday, November 10th, at 8 o'clock, in the room above the Vestry in the Parish House.

After a discussion of plans we will adjourn to the Sunday School Building for a dance. Ladies who will be willing to act as chaperones with Miss Lewis are requested to attend this conference. A pressing invitation is extended to the Girls' Friendly and the St. Stephen's members of that society in particular, are most earnestly urged to give us their coöperation.

Boys above 16 are also cordially invited. Let us have a large attendance and spend a pleasant evening together making wise plans and winding up with pleasant festivities.

Why should not the dramatic club be revived? Under the influence of Clayton Fotterall McMichael our young people at one time showed much histrionic talent; let us have some specimens of it. There are some very interesting Irish plays of one or two short acts that are quite worth while. Then there are single acts of great plays that might be rendered.

Bishop Heber has an exquisitely versified play based on the story of Bluebeard, that I have long been anxious to have presented. I wish that the Girls' Friendly would attempt it. The Oriental scenes, with tent, etc., would be most picturesque. Heber's lines are effective and beautiful. One couplet lingers in my memory, it is a kind of farewell apology for Bluebeard:

"Of wives, poor man, enough he has seen;
'Tis always unlucky to marry sixteen."

Then, too, resuming the projects of the winter, we ought to revive our Men's Club. I like the title the League of the Kingdom. But any title will serve. Can't we have a committee to get up a dinner between now and Xmas? Let the first be a men's dinner to plan for Sunday evening suppers such as we once had, and then let us have in January a dinner for men and women. It will surely be a great success. I never enjoyed anything more than those Sunday evening subscription suppers; very simple and informal, winding up with heart-to-heart talks in the twilight about the table, when men told how helpful they found such fellowship, and how glad they were to know one another, not as business men, or professional men, certainly not as members of political parties, or with reference to any of earth's distinctions, but as immortal spirits, all journeying together as in a caravan, from time to eternity; all like mountain climbers linked together by common interests, seeking to scale the toppling crags, and climb upward to the shining tablelands where God Himself is moon and sun. Can't we in such gatherings arouse ourselves to a more fervent zeal for the betterment of society, and the reclamation of the erring and fallen?

It often seems as if the church was conducted on the principle that those who want religion should come and ask for it, and those who stay away should be abandoned, as having deliberately chosen evil; whereas, in truth, they may fear that we don't want them. Why should we not have a committee to see that invitations to attend St. Stephen's are hung up in the dressing rooms of theatres and of great department stores? Why should we not have hand-bills inviting to our night service handed out on Sunday night on the corner of Tenth and Market streets, to the throngs that surge along only half a square away from our church? The power of a well-worded and direct appeal may be seen any Wednesday. The clangor of our bells fills the air at noon. People stop and listen to a well-known hymn-tune, then they notice the open doors of the church and go over and read the attractive notice board. If that is all, some helpful thoughts have been suggested to them; but that is not all; often the reader enters to worship and hear a message. Can we not carry out our fishing lines still further? Should we not definitely seek the wanderers? Ought we not to put an invitation in the letter boxes for visitors in the neighboring hotels?

Two Sundays ago two salesmen dropped in at the evening service. One of them explained that he brought a friend with the assurance that he would find a helpful service and address, and that he based his promise on his own previous experience. They were interested in viewing our memorials and assured us that St. Stephen's would be a regular station with them in their business trips. May it become such a station of the cross for many, such a house of refreshment on their pilgrimway to numbers of our tempted, tired, struggling, aspiring fellowmen.

O, ye Corinthians, wrote St. Paul, to those early converts, "our mouth is open unto you, and our heart is enlarged. . . . Now for a recompense in the same be ye also enlarged."

I feel that God has been wonderfully good to me. If He has cast me down He has also raised me up. He has proved in time of trouble a refuge and strength. If we have found religion an anchor to hold us in temptation and a beacon light to guide and cheer us when the way has been dark and fears gathered shall we not endeavor to hand on this blessing to others? What is the meaning of our General Thanksgiving, if it does not lead to general effort?

Are we not open to the condemnation of hypocrisy if we don't make our gratitude evident not only in our lips but also in our lives?

Confirmation at St. Stephen's will come on the morning of the fourth Sunday in Lent, March the sixth. This is the best date that we have had for a long time, for what ought to be a great feast of ingathering.

It is exceedingly difficult to get together a class about Xmas time, or in January. Social engagements make many claims at such a season on people who are at all responsive to social duties. But the fourth Sunday in Lent is preceded by weeks of special devotion and is such a propitious date that we ought to gather together a large class. The instructions will begin about the first of February, but the gathering in of recruits ought to begin at once. I have already four names. Why shouldn't we have forty? "Come with us and we will do thee good." Such is our invitation. Less and less am I willing to emphasize the doctrinal forms; more and more would I stress the need of earnestness of spirit. As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God. Do we really want to know and do God's will? Do we dedicate ourselves to the building up of His Kingdom? Are we really seeking the things of others? Do we really want to be like Jesus of Nazareth, to walk in the steps of His most holy life, not thinking our own thoughts, nor speaking our own words, nor walking in the ways of ease and self-indulgence? That is the core of the whole matter. Unless there is this self-surrender, we can never know anything of the peace or joy or strength that is promised in psalm and hymn, and that is expressed for us Sunday after Sunday in triumphant chant.

Such a religion is so simple that a child can live it; it is so far-reaching that the greatest genius cannot soar above it, or travel into realms where he will not find that it will gleam before him, like the polar star before the voyager on the sea.

It will be a source of regret to many that the Newsboys' Club has been discontinued. Yet this sorrow will not be shared by every one, for a social worker drew me aside after the last Wednesday service and confided to me her satisfaction that we had discontinued our efforts in that line, since many social workers feel that these boys ought to be drawn off to a better occupation, and, indeed, she assured me that there was a feeling among experts that our efforts were alleviative rather than remedial.

In the administration of the club I had learned of this conviction; still I feel that there was much to be said on the other side. There the boys are at our back door, playing craps; sleeping at times in store boxes, or coal holes, untouched by religion, or any uplifting influences of power. I thought the experiment worth trying, and hoped that it might develop into the foundation of a Newsboys' Home. Mr. Keable, Mr. Reifsnyder, Mr. Boyd, Dr. Cooper and a group of ladies, with Mrs. Reifsnyder at their head, did faithful service. We had an excellent staff, for the boys liked and respected Mrs. Place. Mr. Kaler had really unique ability in handling them.

Mr. Keable points out in the following communication the reasons for his vote:

November 3, 1920.

I presume that in the next issue of the "Parish News" you will make mention of the closing of The Newsboys' Club, but since the meeting of the Directors on October 28th, some of our good friends have expressed their surprise on learning that I voted in favor of closing. My principal reason for so voting was because I was convinced that it was not possible to carry on in our present old and inadequate building such a club as I hoped to develop.

In the first place our limited accommodations would not permit us to provide separate rooms for the Junior and Senior members. To deny admittance to boys over 17 was not agreeable to me. If we had done that in the beginning we would not have reached Morris, or Benjamin, or Eddie, three boys over 18 who for the last nine months have made good. One of these boys was away from his home for at least five years. He now lives with his parents and has a goodly sum of money in the bank with one of our Vestryman as Trustee.

Eddie was a runaway from Tamaqua; was arrested for "playing craps" but since May has been working in Detroit. In October some of us received splendid letters from him expressing his appreciation of the Club.

In the second place it was impossible to carry on such classes of instruction as I had in mind.

We tried a Wood Working Class which was held on the stage of the Assembly room, but just as soon as the Boys Brigade began their drilling on the Main floor at 8 o'clock the would-be wood worker simply could not resist watching, and sometimes making fun of the awkward squad. My vision of other classes faded away, for there was no place for them, not even in the cellar.

My own reason for accepting the necessity for closing are:

1. The impossibility of raising the necessary funds, about $80 a week.

2. Limitations of our equipment, which prevented us from opening classes, etc.

3. The fact that the older boys ought to be encouraged to get into a steadier work. There were also peculiar drawbacks on the work with the younger boys.

4. The manifest need of our Sunday School Building for our church's own social activities, a need which we could not properly disregard, unless the Newsboys' Club did a work of enduring value.

I hate to give up an undertaking; but the reasons were overwhelming. We had too few contributors to support the kind of work that would be truly remedial. There is reason to believe that we can expend the same energy more usefully in other directions.

The newsboys will always find a hearty welcome at St. Stephen's. We shall do what we can to hold those whom we have helped and to attract others by our services and social activities.

By the death of Dr. George S. Gerhard, we lost one of our most regular attendants. Confirmed late in life, he selected St. Stephen's as his Church home, coming all the way in from Overbrook faithfully every Sunday morning. After service he was accustomed to take some of the Burd School girls back to their home in his car. He was exceedingly kind to these children, making a most generous subscription to a Liberty Loan through them.

It was a privilege to be called on to minister to him in his last hours. An acute attack of dilation of the heart came upon him, while he was visiting the hospital at Bryn Mawr, of which he bore such a leading part in its foundation and ministration. "If this is my last illness," he said, before he became unconscious, "Tell ——— I die in harness." Thus ended a life of large usefulness peacefully.

There was an exceedingly large attendance at his funeral in St. Stephen's. He who had prolonged the life of so many by his skill, had at last succumbed to disease. There is a peculiar pathos in the death of a physician. A representation of the Burd School was in the congregation. Greatly were the children grieved to learn of the death of their kind friend.

Among our communicants for the past year or so was James P. Duffy, an invalid employee of Mr. Reifsnyder's firm. By birth and early training he was a Roman Catholic, but he had become alienated from that church, and drawn by his deep affection for Mr. Reifsnyder, a feudal loyalty comparable to the devotion of a Highlander to his chief, he attended St. Stephen's, sitting in Mr. Reifsnyder's pew. Learning that I was quite willing to administer the Communion to him, he came regularly to the Lord's Supper. While always devoted to the head of the firm he served, he had not been a man of devotion, or particularly high morality in former days, but as his bodily infirmities grew, he turned more to religion. His great affection softened and ennobled him, and in the closing months of his life his progress in the religious life was remarkable.

He had a penetrating vision into the great moralities and pieties of life. His words were singularly simple and profound. Especially unique was his strong missionary spirit, his yearning to help others to make religion a reality in their lives.

He requested a friend to buy a wedding present for him for a young couple, and especially directed that it should be a picture with a religious subject. There ought to be something in a home, he said, to speak of religion. He earnestly asked me to say some words at his funeral. He wished it to be a helpful ceremony. Above all, he yearned to have me say some words expressive of his gratitude to Mr. Reifsnyder, that people might know what kind of man his friend was. Never have I known a man to exhibit more zeal to help others with less thought of self. As he lay on his dying bed, a Roman Catholic priest burst into the room, and asked an explanation of his conduct in leaving his mother church. Duffy met him with dignity and gentleness. "I am following my heart to heaven," he said in his simple and forceable way.

He would not be drawn into controversy. He refused to make explanations that might bring in others. But he was absolutely assured that he was in the right path. He had no fear and he was filled with great gratitude and love.

Here is the message that I read at his service. Mr. Keable wrote it down for him:

I realize that my time on earth is short, for I am growing weaker every day. But before I go I want to say a few words which can be read after I am gone, then no one can say that I am seeking notoriety, or have anything up my sleeve.

I have been in Mr. Reifsnyder's employ for many years, and he has always treated me with the greatest kindness and consideration. Nothing has ever been too much trouble for him so long as he could be any help to me. He has been like a good father to me, and during these months of sickness no one could have shown more love for me than he has.

And Mrs. Reifsnyder has been very thoughtful of me, and I appreciate the many things which she secured in order to make me comfortable. I believe that good deeds should be made known, so that other employers might be encouraged to take a personal interest in those who work for them. And workmen should talk things over with their boss, because it is to the interests of both sides to live and work together in happiness. In this way there can be a square deal for everybody.

I want to thank all my friends who have been so kind to me. I hope Mr. Longshore will have much happiness.

To all at the store I want to say that Mr. Reifsnyder will be just as kind to you as he has been to me if you treat him as your friend, for I know he wants to be a true friend to all.

Goodbye, and God bless you all.

I feel that in publishing this letter here I am fulfilling the wish of a loyal heart.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

Auxiliary Notes.

The first meeting of St. Stephen's Woman's Auxiliary for the season of 1920-1921, was held on Thursday, October 21st, at 11 o'clock, preceded by the celebration of Holy Communion. There was a small attendance, but much interest was shown in the various activities reported and discussed. Among other things the working of the new supply bureau at 1011 Locust Street, was dwelt upon, and the Auxiliary voted to coöperate so far as possible with the method inaugurated. In order to pay for materials used, every member in every parish is asked to buy one or more pencils at ten cents apiece. A gross of pencils is at the disposal of any one at St. Stephen's who wishes to purchase for offices or personal use, and more may be procured at any time through Mrs. Addinell Hewson.

A welcome gift of a motor boat was made to Mr. and Mrs. Ancell on their return to China, and this will enable them to visit other cities more easily from Yangchow. The cost was three thousand dollars, collected by the Foreign Committee of the Diocese and St. Stephen's Auxiliary contributed twenty-five dollars toward the fund.

The reports of the delegates are so interesting and so widen the outlook into the Church and the world that it seems a great pity that every woman in the parish does not connect herself in some way with the work of the Woman's Auxiliary.

Please think this over, every woman reader, and come to the meetings held on the third Thursday of each month to hear what is being done and help do it; or, if it is impossible to attend, please contribute your mite to the treasurer, so that you may be represented in the missionary cause.

A true little incident may be of interest in this connection. A woman not kindly disposed towards missions or regular contributions thereto on being appealed to for a weekly subscription through the supporting envelope system said she would give a fifty cent piece every time she got one in change, thinking to herself there were not so very many in circulation as to involve her deeply, and she did not often get them. However, her conscience would be absolved. (We are very human!) Some time elapsed before a fifty cent piece was received in change, and true to her pledge she deposited it in the envelope. Shortly afterward another coin turned up in change, and soon it seemed as though fifty cent pieces were in very rapid circulation. Gradually the fifty cents for missions became a habit and a pleasure, and when the coins did not come in fast enough she actually went to the bank and got them for the weekly envelope.

So do missions grow by supplying the wherewithal for the support of those missionaries who are privileged to give their lives and service for the recognized work of extending the Kingdom of Christ.

United Offering.

The notice for the United Offering of 1920 and 1921 was sent in October to all former subscribers to this branch of the Woman's Auxiliary, and a generous response from many has already been made. So far as possible a copy of the United Thank Offering number of The Spirit of Missions was mailed with each appeal. The amount of subscriptions to date now is $242.00.

The June Garden Party at Wyck.

The garden party at Wyck in June last, at which St. Stephen's had a table, cleared one thousand dollars, five hundred of which was given to All Souls' Church for the Deaf, and five hundred to the Free Church of St. John.

Many thanks are due to the members of St. Stephen's who so kindly contributed articles and money as well as their time and service. During the community singing in the circle formed on the lawn, it was a pleasure to see and hear our Rector and his family mingling their voices with the chorus in a harmonious quartette.

Written long ago by Sir Matthew Hale, a great English Judge; and it is still true.

"A Sabbath well spent
Brings a week of content
And health for the joys of tomorrow.
But a Sabbath profaned,
Whatever be gained,
Is a sure forerunner of sorrow."

Rector's Letter.

MY DEAR PARISHIONERS:

I must appeal to you for the usual contributions to the Christmas baskets. We sent out ninety-eight baskets last year, and fed about a thousand people. I remind you that provisions are very high, and the poor are beginning to feel the shutting down of the factories and alterations in the labor market. Most of our baskets go to widows with children and to aged people. We make it a rule to investigate the cases and every precaution is taken that the baskets get into the right hands. The work has been done so efficiently that I think it would be inadvisable to change the committee; I am reappointing Mr. Van Dusen, Mr. Reifsnyder and our verger. Miss Lewis is already getting up her lists.

The best piece of news this month is the wonderful success of our first mid-day Communion. We had 180 persons at the prayer service. The communion service began at ten minutes to one, and closed at twenty minutes past one. In place of the Gloria Excelsis a hymn was sung. To the astonishment of all of us 67 persons remained to receive the Communion. The next celebration of this character will be on the last Wednesday of December, the 29th.

I believe that this noonday service would be greatly helped if we had cards distributed in the office buildings and signs put up in the stores and hotels, the same as we do at the Lenten season.

I am very anxious to have a subscription supper on Sunday, December 12th, at 6 o'clock, in the room above the vestry. For the morning congregation Dr. Cooper and Mr. Ellis are the committee, and for the evening congregation Mr. Barton and Mr. Hasenpat. I particularly invite strangers to join us on this occasion and make themselves known. The men of the congregation will understand that if the gentlemen of the committee approach them they are seeking to have them join with us on that evening.

Numerous are the appeals that come to a rector at this time. For example, I received a letter from Mr. R. F. W. Beekman, Rector of the American Church at Paris. That church was injured during the war, and they are trying to put it back in condition. I hope that those who have visited it, or have any friends over in France who might attend this church will make some response. I will be delighted to send the contributions on to Dr. Beekman, who is a very fine man. Mr. Caldwell, of our church, used to be a vestryman there.

Then there is that little colony of 300 people of mixed blood, predominantly Indian. I want to remind the congregation that I am anxious to get up a box of old clothes for them, especially men's garments. If they will give them to Miss Lewis, I will appreciate it very much. Everyone will be interested in these extracts from a letter written by Miss Wagner, who has given her life to working among them:

"The children are all looked after, I think. The grown-ups never have any remembrances. I have often wished they could have, as they never had any Christmas. If you felt you could do it, I think a pair of warm gloves for the women, and a change purse for the men. You may think this last a funny request, but they are always asking me if I have any. Those who are fortunate enough to possess one always pull them out with an air of prosperity. Then perhaps you could send some candy for them. I should say about three dozen of each would give every man and woman a present.

"There are two little boys who come to school that I could cry over. They are in rags and tatters, and I know the family is in awful hard straits. Lowrie Branham, aged nine, and Ambler Branham, aged 12. Underwear and some trousers and a sweater or a suit of some kind. Can you help them out? Also Polly Adcox (wife of J. Adcox) needs a pair of shoes very badly, size 5½.

"If you can interest some of your friends to send a box or barrel of any kind of second-hand men's, women's or children's clothes we will be more than obliged. We need men's clothing most particularly. They are so high now at the stores.

"The things for Lowrie and Ambler I would like right away if I can have them. They have fairly good shoes.

"The presents for the men and women I would like about or before the 15th of December if possible. After that things get delayed in the holiday rush, and our mail carrier has so much to do."

Everyone on the list of envelope-users or pew-holders has received an invitation to attend the opening of the Burd School on December 11th, from 4 to 6. I hope that there will be a large attendance. Punctually at 4 there will be a brief service in the chapel. There will be no formal dedication of this building. It is not yet determined whether it will be anything more than our temporary home, but it seems proper that there should be some religious service in entering into these new quarters, some invocation of God's blessing upon the school in these altered conditions. I, therefore, ask the people to depart from the usual custom of afternoon receptions, not to wait till 5 or after before putting in an appearance. I hope there will be a good attendance punctually at 4. The building will then be open for inspection. I am sure everyone will recognize at once that this building is much less expensive to warm and light, and that the accommodations are superior in every respect. One very desirable achievement is that greater prominence is given to Mr. and Mrs. Burd, and also to Dr. Ducachet, who shared in some degree the honor of being one of the founders. Their portraits have been cleaned, put in good condition, and hung where everybody can see them.

The Nation-Wide Campaign has asked me to be one of a hundred speakers who place themselves at the disposal of the Executive Council to conduct missions. I did not feel at liberty to decline such a request. At the same time I pointed out to the authorities that I expected to leave for a long holiday in the spring, and that there was much to be done before I sailed. I also regretfully confessed that my throat was not very strong, and I did not think I could stand up under a mission of two weeks. That is the time most of the missioners were asked to give. They accepted me on these terms, and promised not to call on me for more than a week's service. I felt that the congregation would not wish me to decline to coöperate with such a movement.

All of us are deeply grieved over the trouble that has come to the Wallace family, in the death of their brother, Richard. He was brought up in St. Stephen's and always had a warm spot for it in his heart. When his little boy died suddenly it was to the Rector of St. Stephen's that he turned for consolation in those agonizing moments. Mine was the sad privilege of burying the boy. I never knew a more devoted father. May God comfort his wife and brothers and sisters. I cannot believe that these deep affections, so much stronger than is necessary for any earthly purpose, should be given us except as a pledge of immortality.

It was very gratifying to me, and I am sure it will be gratifying to the congregation that in the struggle that we have been making in behalf of a high standard for the Board of Moving Picture Censors, Dr. Twombly and I have received the endorsement of the Church-women's Association. At a recent meeting they passed the following resolution:

Whereas—The influence of the Moving Picture is very great upon the mind of youth both for good and evil, and

Whereas—We believe in careful censorship of all films, and as a group of Christian women we deplore any change in our Board of Censors as its work thus far has proved its value and placed the films chosen in Pennsylvania on a higher plane than those of most other states,

Be it Resolved—That we commend the Rev. Drs. Grammer and Twombly for the stand they have taken in this matter and that we in turn ask the Governor for an explanation that will justify his action in remaving Dr. Oberholtzer who has most carefully guarded the interest of the common good during his years of service.

I think this is the most joyous season of the year, this period between Thanksgiving and Christmas. We ought to join the S. P. U. G. and cut out all gifts of social convention. Such money might be given to the Red Cross Society, or as Mr. Bok has suggested, to Mr. Hoover's Relief Fund. It is dreadful to think of the people in the world who are dying of hunger. I do not advocate this policy, however, with regard to the children. I think childhood and youth are entitled to Christmas experiences. Let us economize in our self-indulgences and not in our charities.

I feel confident that we will have our usual bountiful baskets, our usual happy Sunday School celebration. The best of all gifts would be if we could unify our hearts and give ourselves entirely to God. I am persuaded that is the reason why we do not have more power. There is always some Achan's wedge of gold or Babylonish garment. There is always some secret chamber such as Ezekiel found in the temple, where idolatrous rites are being practiced. We want to give ourselves to God with a reservation that He will let us have our own way in some important particulars.

After all the giving of this Christmas season, if we could give ourselves more heartily to God it would be the happiest season of our lives. "Unite my heart to fear thy name," says the Psalmist. Before you get another copy of the PARISH NEWS 1921 will be upon us. I hope we will enter this New Year with a new consecration, with a new zeal. Christianity will never get away from the military metaphors; the pacifists are entirely mistaken about it. We will always have to fight a good fight—not against flesh and blood, except perhaps our own flesh and our own blood—but against self-indulgence and selfishness and cowardice and sin in all its forms; a fight for righteousness, for the welfare of others, and for God. Let us gird up our loins, let us consecrate ourselves to the cause of God.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

The Memorial Banner.

On Sunday, November 14th, a banner was presented to St. Stephen's in memory of our young men who gave their lives in the Great War. It is an exquisite piece of needlework. On a white front is embroidered in gold the text, "They Fought a Good Fight." Underneath are crossed palms. Then follow the names of the six young men. Under all are six golden stars. The names are:

JOSEPH F. COVERT,
JOSEPH G. LAMB,
JAMES STORK,
JAMES J. PAGE,
S. C. HETHERINGTON,
LEWIS G. SMITH.

The final location has not been determined. Near the baptismal font, where we dedicate the children to be "Faithful soldiers and servants to their life's end," has been suggested. But for the unveiling it was hung on the north wall under the gallery, near the Angel of the Resurrection. Mr. Wilson Leithede, a cousin of Joseph Covert, unveiled it, after the Rector had made this announcement:

"This banner is presented to St. Stephen's Church by one of its most benevolent and revered members, Mrs. H. P. Taylor, for many years the beloved head of the Mothers' Meeting. Zealous, beneficent, firm, she has been in her life a leader in this city in all manner of good works, in the fairs of the Civil War, in the organization and management of the Home for Aged Couples, and in many other enterprises. In this Church her chief office was the Presidency of the Mothers' Meeting, where she was a wise ruler and a real inspiration by her staunch and generous character. She always took a great interest in the Embroidery Class, and in the decoration of the chancel. She had a large share in the making of our magnificent pall. She also presented to the Church our splendid purple Advent hangings, decorated with the stubborn thistle bursting into blossoms. She is now unable to attend the Church, and suffers from great weakness; but she still thinks of the Church. She can no longer attend and sends this beautiful memorial of heroic youth, early cut down for a great cause:

"May God bless her, comfort the mourners and inspire us to gather in the harvest that these men sowed."

An appropriate anthem was then sung. In the service the rector spoke more at length upon the great cause for which these men had given their lives.

There Is No Death.

The first and second verses were sung at the unveiling of the Memorial Banner, Nov. 14, 1920.

I tell you they have not died,
They live and breathe with you;
They walk here at your side,
They tell you things are true.
Why dream of poppied sod
When you can feel their breath
When flow'r and soul and God
Know there is no death.

Death's but an open door,
We move from room to room
There is one life, no more;
No dying and no tomb.
Why seek ye them above,
Those that ye love dear?
The all of God is Love,
The all of God is Here.

I tell you they have not died,
Their hands clasp yours and mine;
They are but glorified,
They have become divine.
They live, they know, they see.
They shout with every breath:
Life is eternity.
There is no death.

—Gordon Johnstone.

The Sunday School.

We are full of preparation for the Christmas Season. Each Sunday the Christmas Carols precede the lesson. This year we have commenced a new three-year course of lessons, beginning with the Old Testament Stories.

Our attendance is good. New scholars are coming in. The specially selected motion pictures, which are shown before the opening of the session, bring the scholars in on time. Several teachers have retired from active service, but others have joined us to fill their places. Miss Elizabeth Davis and Miss Trussell have recently taken classes.

Our carols will be sung and Christmas pictures shown on the screen Sunday morning, December 26th, before the church service, at 9.30. We cordially invite all who will to be present.

The School's Christmas Festival this year will be held on Tuesday evening, December 28th, at 8 o'clock, in the Sunday School Building. A musical play entitled "Cinderella's Christmas Party" is now in rehearsal. The children are happily preparing to do their part to make others merry during Christmas week. We will welcome all who will come to our entertainment.

GEORGE H. STREAKER,
Superintendent.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

The speaker at the November meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was Mrs. A. F. Kempton, President of the Church Periodical Club of the Diocese of Pennsylvania. There are about one hundred parish librarians working in the Diocese, and it will stimulate our interest in this work to see what the club did from April, 1918, to January, 1920:

Current Periodicals	7,476
Contributors	3,892
Bibles, Prayer, Hymnals, etc.	3,243
Books, both Secular and Theological	15,024
Tracts and Catechisms	10,823
Odd magazines, sent in bulk	111,605
Christmas and Easter Cards	29,267
Picture Cards and Calendars	25,634
Sheets of Music	1,231
Games and Scrap Books, for Hospitals	8,366
Boxes sent by Express, contents not counted; Camps and Hospitals	930

The December meeting of the Auxiliary will be held Thursday, the 16th, at 11 o'clock.

B. E. HOLLAR,
Secretary.

Kings Daughters (Whatsoever Circle).

Will have their next meeting December 1st and December 15th, in the Guild Room of Parish House, at 8 o'clock.

This Circle is now busy sewing for the poor children in St. Christopher's Hospital, and would be glad to have others help sew if they are interested in the work.

They have also donated $2.00 to the Episcopal Hospital as a Thanksgiving gift.

Shoe Fund.

The shoe closet was opened November 8th, and will be open every Monday from half past 10 o'clock until 12 o'clock. Mrs. Vanderslice will be there. She has had to change the morning for the present.

Handwork of the Southern Mountaineers.

Those interested in the beautiful handwork of the Southern Mountaineers can see examples of their work by applying to Miss Julia C. MacAlister, 2212 Rittenhouse Street (telephone, Locust 2352-J). A special exhibition of the Alnwick Bedspreads will be held on December 1st, 2nd and 3rd, but sample can always be seen and orders taken at any time.

In the making of the Alnwick Bedspreads an old industry has been revived, for these creamy white spreads in the beautiful designs in tufted and knotted work are exact reproductions of old English bedspreads.

It would be hard to tell what this work means to these Southern women, but it keeps many of them from starvation. Therefore, in encouraging this beautiful native industry, we are giving our money where it is desperately needed, and we are gaining an endless source of pleasure for ourselves. These spreads are practical and economical, as well as beautiful, for they launder well, do not soil or wrinkle easily, and last a lifetime.

Upon the Way.

What will it matter in a little while
That for a day
We met and gave a word, a touch, a smile,
Upon the way?

What will it matter whether hearts were brave
And lives were true,
That you gave me the sympathy I crave,
As I gave you?

These trifles! Can it be they make or mar
A human life?
Are souls as lightly waved as rushes are
By love or strife?

Yea, yea! a look the fainting heart may break
Or make it whole;
And just one word, if said for love's sweet sake,
May save a soul.

—May Riley Smith.

The Rector's Letter.

My dear Parishioners:

I wish you a Happy New Year. Now that the century has attained its majority, I suppose we ought to cast away childish things and attempt manly tasks. I am persuaded that the old devotional books were all wrong in their efforts to inculcate humility by meditation and self-examination. The real way to gain a proper realization of our limitations and our pettiness is to grapple with some really great tasks, to essay some enterprise of high endeavor; not to consult with Prudence the timid entertainer of strangers on their way to the Celestial City whom Bunyan portrays as presiding over the House Beautiful, but whom he really should have made a distant relation of Mr. Worldly Wiseman; but to take into our counsels Mr. Greatheart and Mr. Valiant and that glorious band who destroyed the castle of Giant Despair, and made the way to the Celestial City easier for other pilgrims. Let us call such graces into council; let us not take counsel with flesh and blood, that is with worldly-minded and low-toned people.

Do you remember that witty reply of young Walter Raleigh in Scott's Kenilworth to Queen Elizabeth? Raleigh had gone up to the court to make the apologies of his master, the Earl of Sussex, for the reception which the Queen's physician had met at the Earl's headquarters, where he had been refused admission. He found the imperious daughter of Henry VIII very much offended by this refusal of the physician who had gone as her emissary, and as a gracious condescension on her part. She asked sternly who had put the slight upon her messenger; whereupon young Raleigh, who had just won his way and got his foot upon the rounds of the ladder of her favor by his famous episode with the clerk, bravely spoke up and said he was to blame. "Young man," said the surprised and offended Queen, "Don't you know that in the multitude of counsellors there is safety?" "Yes," answered Raleigh, "But I always thought that meant safety for the counsellors." The clever Queen was placated by a reply which combined so much wit and wisdom. Most counsellors say no; it is the safest thing to say. Nothing being done there is no misadventure to rise up and confute their counsel. The sins of omission, the neglected openings, the splendid opportunities—these are easily forgotten. There is many a life that dries up because the parching breezes of timidity and fear and distrust wither all the buds of hope. Especially as we grow old must we be on our guard against the undue development of the inhibitive powers. Some people's first instinct is always to say no. They remind one of a sally of Tom Reed, the famous speaker, who said of the American Congress at one time that it resembled an engine whose brakes and backing powers were far superior to the forces that made for progress.

At all events, if one wishes to learn humility, he must not cultivate great timidity and avoid every difficult task. The people who sit on the side lines and never attempt anything are the most opinionated and critical. They have no comprehension of the difficulties of achievement, and they are really ignorant of the forces that carry all enterprises of great pith and moment on to a successful conclusion; of the power of aspiration, of the truth that unseen helpers will be raised up for a good cause; above all, of the supreme conviction which sustains all high enterprise and heroic natures that at heart the universe is friendly and good, and that the great power which expresses itself through all these phenomena is working out some splendid plan of which these heroic souls have caught some vague glimpse. I sometimes think it is a pity that our churches are so solidly built, and speak so of permanence and ancient traditions and long usage. Really every child of faith is an emigrant, like Abraham, the Hebrew, for emigrant is the nearest translation of the meaning of the Hebrew term. We are on our way into a land of promise. We are supposed to be conducting those in our charge into a new realm where God will be more purely served, where ancient idolatries, the idolatries of power and of place and of genius will be thrown aside, and love and service and purity and truth will be exalted, where God Himself is King and Sun.

One of the most heroic enterprises a man can attempt in the world is to undertake to make himself a means of religious helpfulness. Such a purpose requires that he shall endeavor to live in such a spirit and so order his conversation that he will arouse the spirits of others to more loving and gracious service. I have known some very unselfish people who shrank from this endeavor. They lived very unselfish lives, but they were unwilling to reveal the mainspring of their efforts, and, therefore, people ascribed to natural goodness and amiability the graces which in many cases were entirely due to self-conquest and constant prayer. So they deprived God of His glory, and gained for themselves for their disposition, a praise that should have been given to religion. There is nothing really more helpful than a brave avowal of one's effort to lead a Christian life. Indeed, I think it ought to tend to humility, because no one can say this without realizing that he has his treasure in an earthy vessel, and that the earthiness of the vessel is much more manifest than the presence of the treasure.

Let us not shrink from saying a word of cordial greeting to the stranger in our midst, from asking a friend to come to church with us, from doing what we can to build up the Kingdom of God. No set rules can be given. For my part I have never thought much of this mechanism of teaching. The great rule for the good teacher is to fill himself with the subject, to have a passionate desire to impart it. The ways will vary according to the idiosyncrasy of the learner. The analogy holds good in religious teaching. The chief thing is to have a sense of the spirituality of the universe, of our own selves as spirits with an immortal destiny, and with fateful issues depending on our fidelity, and of our fellow men as kindred spirits with similar problems, similar trials, similar weaknesses, and needing our help, our sympathy, our love.

This year Lent comes very early. Ash Wednesday falls on the 9th day of February; there are only two Sundays after Epiphany. Easter will be on the 27th of March, almost as early as the feast can fall. You remember that Easter is the first Sunday after the full moon after the vernal equinox, and if the moon falls on Sunday, it is the Sunday thereafter. So you see it is not possible for Easter to come more than five days earlier, as the equinox is on the 21st. Confirmation will be on the morning of the fourth Sunday in Lent, which will be March 6th. It will be necessary to begin our class of confirmation in February.

I have never thought that it was an injury to the parish that I am the President of the Board of Trustees of Sweet Briar College, which has enlarged my administrative experience very considerably. I have learned many lessons of value on that Board. But these responsibilities require some thought and some energy and I shall be obliged to go down to the College in January and it may be in April before I sail, to make some final arrangements. I was never busier in my life, and if I am unable to do much pastoral visiting, I want the congregation to know that I am always at their command. The other day a friend called me up to let me know that a member of the congregation had sickness in the home. I called at once, and felt very much indebted to that friend. Both Mr. Keable and I are very grateful to anyone who will let us know of such cases.

If you will study Mr. Keable's report you will see that we did much better with the envelopes last year than ever before. Both the regular and the special offerings were larger. Let me urge the members of the congregation to co-operate with this envelope system. It has been the salvation of the church. Especially do I appreciate the helpfulness of those who have expressed an intention to increase their gifts. He that soweth plenteously shall reap also plenteously.

I give elsewhere a copy of the remarks that I made in announcing Miss Magee's generous intention to give us a roof that will adequately protect the church. We cannot be sufficiently grateful for the helpfulness of this generous friend. The new outside window over the front doors, also her gift, was at last completed on Wednesday, the 29th. The maker is D'Ascenzo. The firm has had to struggle with many difficulties in the labor situation. The committee in charge of the matter consisted of Mr. E. W. Moore and Mr. Keable. The result will, I am sure, be pronounced by everyone a success. By day it has the effect of a fine mosaic. At night it will be brilliantly illuminated. We trust it will attract many a passer-by. As the window looks out directly upon Ludlow Street, its light can be seen for many squares away. It is a long needed improvement; the lead of the old window had degenerated and the panes were about to fall out.

I sent out over 350 Christmas cards, but I find that I am receiving remembrances from many people who were not on my list. I wish that I could acknowledge all of these tokens of friendship. I can assure you that my heart is warmed by the kind messages that they have conveyed. May I in this way express my grateful thanks?

The day before Wednesday, the 22nd, I received two hundred cards from one of the attendants at the noonday service, a member of a firm that manufactures Christmas and anniversary cards. In the name of his partner and himself, and as a token of his appreciation of our noonday service, he sent these beautiful cards with their envelopes, and requested me to sign them and give them out to the Wednesday congregation. He also told me in his liberality that more cards were at our service if we needed them, and that they intended to make this an annual custom at Easter and Christmas. I signed them and handed them out to the attendants on the 22nd. I desire, in the name of the noonday congregation, to thank the donor for this gift of Christian fellowship.

No one can enjoy Christmas so well as those who pass the anniversary with the young. Of course, I miss my family very much, but I think it is no disloyalty to say that there was a special charm about the Christmas in the Burd School. On the eve of the day, as we were going out to sing the carols at Mr. Van Dusen's home, one of the little girls pointed to the evening star. We had a magnificent view of the skies at the new Burd School, from which we have a glorious sunset, and on that evening you will recall, the evening star shone with rare effulgence. The little girl pointed to it, and said, "The Star of Bethlehem. I know all about it. How I wish I could see what that star sees!"

I must not close without speaking about the death of Mr. Charles Price. He was not a member of this congregation, but he placed us under a debt of gratitude by his generous service as an expert auditor, in auditing for us the accounts of St. Stephen's Club. The way in which our books were kept by Mr. Boyd and the expert auditing they received from Mr. Price undoubtedly played a large part in procuring for us the generous contribution of $12,000 from the War Chest for the conduct of the Club. Mr. Price was a Quaker by heritage and conviction, and in his last days had turned with renewed devotion to the Plymouth Meeting, but the beauty of our service and the friendships that he had formed in our church made the family invite me to conduct the funeral. It was most gratifying to be able to render this service and to show in this way our appreciation for all that Mr. Price had done for us.

I should be very much gratified if we were to have a successful supper for men and women on the third Wednesday of this month, January 19th. We would like to have the supper at 6 o'clock, and afterwards adjourn to see what a successful Social Hour we have. I think I had better reappoint the same committee who handled the last supper: Dr. Cooper and Mr. Ellis for the morning congregation, and Mr. Barton and Mr. Hasenpat for the evening. I will ask Mr. Klink to ascertain whether any attendants at the noonday service would like to join us. I think we can get a satisfactory supper for $1.50. We ought to begin promptly at 6 o'clock, in order to have a good time chatting and a little music. The names of subscribers can be handed in to the verger or to members of the committee, or to Mr. Keable and myself. I would be delighted to have a successful supper before Lent.

This letter is already long enough, and I cannot close better than with the words of St. Paul: "Now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of His grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them that are sanctified."

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

Another Gift from Miss Magee—The Roof.

On Sunday, December 19th, the Rector informed the congregation that Miss Magee was concerned to learn that the roof of the church was leaking, and needed extensive repairs. Although she had given $5,000 a year ago for sundry improvements to our exterior, the chief of which was the gift of new windows over the front doors, she had decided to give enough to restore this depleted fund to $5,000, and desired to have it expended on the roof. This generous intention was made known to the Vestry, and that body had resolved that in recognition of the large gifts of Miss Anna J. Magee to St. Stephen's Church, and her unfailing helpfulness, the Vestry does now set apart the westernmost window on the north side of the church, the only window on the ground floor that is not filled with memorial glass, and hereby reserves it for a memorial window in which shall be commemorated suitably after we shall lose her, the generosity of Miss Magee and the gratitude of this Parish.

Dr. Grammer also spoke of his own personal gratitude to Miss Magee, both for these wonderful gifts of a new chancel, a new interior, new lights and new ventilation, but also for the way in which the gifts were given.

He said that he could not wait to let stone or glass express these sentiments of gratitude, but felt constrained to utter them now, while Miss Magee was with us, and could know how her gifts were appreciated.

Christmas Baskets.

The Christmas baskets were the finest we ever sent out. The distribution was well managed and many homes were made happy by the generous gifts of the congregation. Special thanks are due to Mr. Atmore for the mincemeat, and to Mr. Clement Restein for his barrels of chickens. We reached our high water mark with the largest number of the largest baskets ever given. Mr. Van Dusen's report is excellent reading.

A New Hymnal.

We have begun with the new hymnal. For a while we shall select only hymns contained in both. We hope that the congregation will equip themselves as soon as possible with the new books. With the notes the price is one dollar—without the notes 40 cents. Some visitor asked by what authority St. Stephen's adopts a new hymnal? The question reveals ignorance that needs enlightenment. The General Convention adopted this new hymnal and recommended its use, but an option is left to the congregation. We are going to follow the recommendation of the Convention.

Let us be patient with the small inconveniences of the transition. In time I am sure, we shall find that we have changed for the better.

The Wednesday Evening Club.

The Wednesday Evening Club has now reached a membership of twenty-three enrolled members, and eight special members. The average attendance is about forty-five or fifty. The expenses are $15.00 a night. It will be necessary to raise $30.00 monthly, in addition to the amount paid in by members, to pay the orchestra and minor expenses.

A number of social clubs of this character ask people to become associate members at a dollar a month for seven months—associate members to have the privilege of sending some one they are interested in.

I hope that twenty-nine persons will join me in enrolling themselves as associate members. We need good music to conduct an up-to-date social club of this kind. Names may be sent to me—or to Miss Edna P. Marley, Cynwyd, Pa.

C. E. G.

The congregation will be interested to know that one of our members, Mr. Henry Johnson, the Reading Terminal foreman, has retired after thirty years' service with that corporation. In The Pilot for December there is a very pleasant sketch of Mr. Johnson from which I copy the following:

"Mr. Johnson was one of a family of twelve children, nine of whom are living at the present time. He and his three brothers served in the Civil War, being in the 107th New York Volunteers. He served with Sherman, being at the capture of Atlanta, and the famous March to the Sea. He was wounded in North Carolina. His mother, who died several years ago, lived to be 99 years and 6 months old. The traveling public regrets Mr. Johnson's retirement. He will be missed very much after having the smile, the kindness and unlimited amount of geniality around the Reading Terminal. He has no plans for the future, but believes he is entitled to rest. Mr. Johnson is a member of the Penna. R. R. Veterans' Association, and a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. At times when Mr. Baer was moving through the station he would recognize the Grand Army button, being a veteran himself, and would give Mr. Johnson the regulation salutation."

Mr. Johnson is a regular communicant and attendant at St. Stephen's. His hoary head is one of our crowns of glory.

A Pleasant Letter.

Rev. Carl E. Grammer,
St. Stephen's, Philadelphia.

DEAR DR. GRAMMER:

I feel constrained to send you a little good-by message and do this with a feeling of great regret. I am simply one of those who have found the noon-day service at St. Stephen's helpful and full of inspiration. Somehow, I just needed that quiet half-hour and the helpful message it brought.

I am now denied the privilege of further attending and keenly feel the loss of that which helped to straighten out some of the crooked lines in my life.

Pardon the liberty taken, but I wanted you to know this.

Sincerely,

From Mrs. Ramsaur.

Bendoo,
Territory G., Cape Mount,
Liberia, W. Africa.

My dear Friends:

Many, many thanks for those lovely spoons, it was a great and pleasant surprise to think you still remember me. We were married the second of June and came right up to Bendoo the same day to open new work. You remember sending the fifty dollars for a horse a few years ago. As there was not a horse to be had just at that time, I used the money to help build the "Bendoo," the boat which carried us up here and which we use for all our water trips. Bendoo, as you perhaps have heard before, is about fifteen miles from Cape Mount and right on the wide Pisu Lake. I must tell you a little of this wonderful lake —early in the morning it is so calm that it looks quite like a mirror, then about noon when the sea breeze comes up, it is rough like the sea. I have known very good sailors to get horribly seasick crossing. From our side, across to the other side is ten miles. There are huge alligators very near the shore.

Now we are having church and school right in our own home; later we will have a church by itself, as a few weeks ago one of the largest houses, unfurnished, in town was turned over to us. We have twelve children staying in the house with us, the other boys and young men come to day and night school. It is such interesting work to see how day by day we gain a little more with these native people. Mr. Ramsaur baptized five a few weeks ago and we have as many more ready again. Our last communion service was attended by ten communicants. We are trying once a month to get together all the old mission boys, who have settled in their native homes. So far we feel much encouraged.

What the Bishop wants us to do later we do not know. I should like to do pioneer work altogether if we had enough workers to fill the places opened. Again we thank you and would be indeed glad to hear from any one who can find the time and cares to. My kindest regards to Dr. Grammer and all those of the Sunday School.

Sincerely,
Sara Conway Ramsaur.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

Our reports at the December meeting were full of Christmas spirit. A splendid box valued at $150 has been sent through Miss Washington's Committee, to a colored missionary in Charlestown, W. Va. Miss Roberts has sent four boxes of toys, knives, gloves, mufflers, etc., to the Indian children at Cannon Ball, N. D., and Christmas stockings are being collected to send to St. John's Settlement.

Miss Magee has collected $293.50 for the United Offering.

Mrs. Charles R. Pancoast gave us an address on the Church Service League. The Parish organization of the League is called a unit, and consists of a federation of all the women's societies or departments of work in the Parish, with the understanding that during the year the activities of the unit shall include some definite service in the Parish, the community, the Diocese, the nation, and the world.

Our next meeting will be held January 20th.

B. E. HOLLAR,
Secretary.

An Echo of St. Stephen's Day.

In Kumamoto, South Japan, is the little hospital of the Resurrection of Hope, a hospital for lepers, of whom there are so many in that land. The hospital was founded by Miss Riddell, an English woman, whose sympathy was aroused in learning that little or nothing was done to ameliorate the condition of the poor outcasts, who travel from shrine to shrine as pilgrims, while their strength lasts, and finally lose their identity as human beings. The hospital is situated in the outskirts of Kumamoto, in seven acres of ground, and here sixty-seven men and women are happily sheltered, dependent for their support on voluntary contributions from friends of suffering humanity.

For a number of years ten members of St. Stephen's Woman's Auxiliary have made themselves responsible for the running expenses and work of the hospital for one day in the year, and the day chosen is St. Stephen's Day, when the inmates are told that these members of St. Stephen's Church in Philadelphia are remembering them in their prayers and are glad to do something for their relief.

Since the institution of this hospital some twenty-five years ago, the Japanese Government has established five asylums for the roadside leper beggars, and scientists are considering the subject more seriously than ever before.

President Woman's Auxiliary,

Each basket contained 23 articles, as follows:

Bread, corn flakes, Indian relish, canned corn, canned tomatoes, condensed milk, rice, tea, apples, onions, cabbage, white potatoes, sweet potatoes, celery, carrots, turnips, cranberries, sugar, chickens, oranges, candy, mince pies and a twig of holly.

One hundred and twenty baskets were distributed, each basket contained sufficient articles for a Christmas dinner for at least twelve persons, giving a Christmas dinner to about fourteen hundred and forty.

Through the usual Christmas kindness of Mr. Clement Restein the committee were able to add 200 pounds of chickens and through the kindness of Mr. Craig Atmore, 120 mince pies. The committee feels that all who received the baskets had a most generous and enjoyable Christmas dinner.

Average cost of each basket, with articles contributed, $6.02.

Yours respectfully,

HOWARD REIFSNYDER,
JOS. B. VAN DUSEN, JR.
JAMES CARRIGAN,
Dinner Committee.

The Sunday School.

Christmas is always the high peak in Sunday Schools. Ours, of course, was the best ever. Sunday, December 26th, our morning session was given over largely to the childhood of Jesus, as depicted by the great artists. Besides the slides, we had wonderful moving pictures appropriate to Christmas. Mr. Keable wisely suggested that the candies be distributed on Sunday, which allowed our Christmas Festival, Tuesday evening, December 28th, to be given over entirely to the addresses, carols and the play. The room was filled to overflowing with the mothers and friends. The little and big players—all of our school—did remarkably well, as per program herewith. We are grateful to our generous friends in the church who so kindly helped by their offerings.

Shoe Fund.

We always have something nice to say about Santa Claus, for the dear old gentleman did not forget the children this year. One would think he would, as shoes are so very high; but he did not. Last Monday, with the help of Master Coll (one of the Sunday School boys) Mrs. Vanderslice unpacked four large boxes of shoes and overshoes. And we are sure all wish Santa Claus a very Happy New Year!

Shoe Closet will be open Monday mornings from 10.30 until 12 o'clock.

Kings Daughters (Whatsoever Circle).

Interest received from estate of Mr. William Patton (through Mr. Edward Moore, Church Warden) $37.50

This Circle will have its next meetings January 5th and January 26th, in Guild Room of Parish House, at a quarter of 8 o'clock.

Come, and help sew for St. Christopher's Hospital.

Frederick B. Keable, Treasurer.

Rector's Letter.

My dear Parishioners:

When you receive this number Lent will be hard upon us. The list of speakers is published in detail elsewhere. Every one will be glad to know that Dr. Worcester will not only speak at the noon-day services from February 21st to 25th, inclusive; but will also preach at both services on Sunday, February 20th. His theme at the evening service will be "Psychical Research and Its Results." It is ten years since Dr. Worcester gave his remarkable noonday addresses on the healing power of faith in God. We shall all be interested to meet and hear him again.

The Bishop gave me a free hand in inviting ministers from other churches. The Lambeth Conference has advocated fraternal intercourse, and the Bishop is in sympathy with the deliverances of that great gathering. Consequently I have had a larger liberty than heretofore and have availed myself of it to invite the Rev. Dr. Charles R. Erdman, the widely-known professor in Princeton Theological Seminary, for five days one week, and the Rev. Dr. Carter Helm Jones, of the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia, for five days in another week. Dr. Jones will be the first Baptist minister to preach in our pulpit. The great services of Baptists to religious liberty, and missionary enterprise, have made the whole world their debtors, and it will be pleasant to have a minister of the church of Robert Hall, whom Lord Macaulay admired so greatly, and of Charles Haddon Spurgeon, who was so highly esteemed by Gladstone.

Dr. Cook, the Bishop of Delaware, has been heard with great enthusiasm in Philadelphia, on other occasions. He will certainly draw a large congregation as all of us are profoundly interested in a leader who has the difficult task of cheering and re-invigorating a diocese, after the crashing blow of the secession of Dr. Kinsman to Rome. Dr. Kinsman's influence must be reckoned with and counteracted. With the natural zeal of a proselyte he wishes to vindicate his action, and to bring some of his former associates to the same conclusion. Agreeing with him in so many of his first principles, prejudices, and estimates of value, they ought, he feels, to reach the same conclusion. Logically he has much the best of the argument, and one feels sorry for the ritualists as he shoots at them his keen arrows winged by feathers from their nest.

Fortunately, there are two sides to this old controversy with Rome, and the victory can readily be won, if the controversy is conducted on right lines. There are other gifts and graces besides submission to lofty claims of authority. A more manly, enterprising, and social type of Christianity, our Church, rightly interpreted, is fully calculated to produce and foster, and Dr. Cook is, from all we learn, admirably equipped to expound and illustrate it.

As Delaware is socially and industrially united with the closest ties to Pennsylvania, I thought it would be interesting to have the rector of the most prominent historic parish in Wilmington, Dr. Richard Trapnell, also take five days. He has had wonderful success in reviving old St. Andrew's, a church ever venerable for its good works, and the long rectorship of wise and saintly Bishop Alfred Lee.

My brethren in the city have most kindly helped us out on Saturday, and according to our use, we shall have the pleasure of inaugurating the season with Bishop Garland on Ash Wednesday, and Bishop Talbot on the following Thursday

Last spring Mr. Jordan of the Keith Theatre wrote me that he would be very glad to lend me that great auditorium for noon-day services in Lent, and asked me if I could use it. I feel that it would not be advisable to transfer our services since there are distinct advantages in the associations of a building set apart for sacred uses. Yet it seemed to me that such a fine offer ought not to be declined. Theatre services make a special appeal to many people. So I turned the offer over to the Inter-Church Federation which will have noon-day services from Tuesday to Friday, inclusive, throughout Lent. There is room for all. The more widely diffused the habit of Lenten observance and noon-day addresses, the better for our St. Stephen's service, and what is more important, the better for the cause.

On Sunday morning, March 6th, Bishop Rhinelander will administer the rite of Confirmation to all those ready and desirous to renew their baptismal vows and to enlist in the service of God in our branch of the Church.

The Confirmation Class will meet on Fridays at 8 o'clock, beginning with Friday, February 4th. The Rector will prepare the class as usual. Not for years have we had confirmation on such a favorable date, and we ought to have a fine ingathering of recruits. While attendance on the class is required, if possible, in the case of the young, it is only recommended with adults, and there is no fixed rule, each individual's special problems and conditions being considered.

I do not generally care to make this letter a record of the incidents of the month past. Our main purpose is to set out a program in this letter. Yet I must not omit some recognition of the fine work of those in charge of the church dinner, in the Sunday School room on Wednesday, January 19th. It was our first subscription dinner for women as well as men. The total attendance was 120, the largest we have yet reached at such a function. Miss Anna J. Magee was the guest of honor, and sat to the right of the rector who took advantage of the occasion to thank Miss Magee again for the new window in the front of the church, and also for the promise of a sum sufficient to put the roof of the church in first-class condition. The tributes of gratitude to Miss Magee were general. In January St. Stephen's completed its 98th year. Our centennial is only two years off. Every one felt grateful to all our benefactors and especially to our living benefactor, Miss Magee, that our church is in such fine condition. In the next two years it is hoped that some adequate task will be undertaken that the rounding out of a century may be commemorated by some suitable and, if possible, monumental achievement.

Mr. Keable, Dr. Herbert Old, Miss Laura Bell, Mrs. Lucas, Mr. Ewing and Mr. Reifsnyder were all called upon to make brief addresses, and Mrs. Heaton favored us with a couple of solos.

Pictures of historic Philadelphia were shown while the tables were being cleared away, and at 9 o'clock the Wednesday Evening Club began its usual week-day dance. Numbers of the diners remained to watch or participate in the dancing. The fellowship was enthusiastically hearty and fraternal. Everyone voted the occasion a great success and many thanks are due to the Committee and to our zealous Verger, who had so large a part in the arrangements.

During the month we had two bereavements: On January 8th died Mrs. Henry P. Taylor, after a long illness. The funeral was on Saturday morning in St. Stephen's; her coffin, covered by the richly embroidered purple pall in whose completion she took such a lively interest. The burial was beside her husband in the family cemetery in Pottsville. In fulfillment of my promise I went up to Pottsville and read the service at the grave. The notice of the funeral was too brief and the hour of the service at St. Stephen's too early to permit many of her friends to attend; so I preached on Sunday night, a sermon in memory of her as a Mother in Israel. I told of her great work in the affairs of the Civil War, of her benevolent despotism as the loved head of the Mothers' Meeting, and of her leading part in the foundation of the Home for Aged Couples. Staunch, prudent, administrative, loving, Mrs. Taylor was a friend to count on, and an influence for good both by her works and her character.

She left the bulk of her estate, as was expected, to the Home for Aged Couples, but she did not forget the Church, leaving $500 to the church at Pottsville, where she grew up and where her father was a pillar, and bequeathing $200 to St. Stephen's. Long will she be held in grateful remembrance.

The news that Mrs. Louise Suydam Austin had an incurable disease, only slowly gained credence. When I first saw her on my return from the summer holiday, she was half-sitting, half-reclining on a sofa in her upstairs sitting room, and was rejecting emphatically the suggestion that her sickness might prevent a journey westward of her brother. She had a wonderful gift of throwing herself into the topics of the day, ignoring her own condition. Like the sinking of the sun in the tropics, her earthly end came rapidly. She had no illusions and faced the inevitable change with Christian resignation and courage, sustained by an unfailing faith, by the wonderful support of her mother and sister, and by the return and ministrations of her daughter, son-in-law and grandson. She was not brought up in St. Stephen's, had been a great world-traveler, and was not able for many years to take much part in parochial activities; yet St. Stephen's was very dear to her. As far as her health permitted she served in the Benevolent, on the Missionary Box Committee, and on the Ladies' Aid. By her will she left us $5,000—enough to endow for all time two pews.

Never can I forget the rare distinction and charm she possessed when I first saw her. There was never anything haughty in her words or bearing, but she seemed fitted to fill and decorate some elevated sphere. On further acquaintance I discovered that she lived in a realm of high loyalties, of tender consideration and deeds of kindness to others, and of strong affection for relations and friends. In that stately form there was a wonderful spirit. She was a rare woman.

Our sympathy goes out to all her bereaved relations, and especially to her aged mother, who has the rare glory of comforting others, at an age when most people are the recipients and not the bestowers of consolation. She has shown in these sad days, that the promise, as the days so shall thy strength be, is true to those who claim it.

Helpful as are these additions to our endowments, we must not hide it from ourselves that our income has nothing like the purchasing power that it once possessed, and that it will be necessary for all of us to do our part to keep St. Stephen's up to the level of real efficiency. Greatly is our church needed in this conservative city, with its Quaker and evangelical traditions, inclining the churches to avoid any aggressive work for reform.

St. Stephen's has a unique position in the city. There are other churches, that are liberal in their theology, but they are in many cases, ethically Tory, or conservative, distrusting democratic institutions, and dreading the march of ethical ideals. They stand apart from civil life, and social problems. They have no use for prohibition or woman's suffrage. There are, on the other hand, many churches that take an active interest in public affairs, and reform movements, but linking themselves up with out-worn theories of Sabbath observance, or ecclesiastical authority, and opposing the introduction of scientific method into theological thought. For about a half century St. Stephen's has stood for a sane and progressive theology, subordinating the denominational features of the church to the fundamental truths of our faith, and accepting with cheeerful confidence the new light that God has caused to break upon the darkening world. I hope that I am not claiming too much when I profess that I have endeavored to take these liberal principles out of the realm of technical theology, or ecclesiastical reconstruction, and to apply them to the problems of life, personal and corporate. I believe that if we pray, "Thy kingdom come," it is our duty to point out the road by which the consummation may be reached. I believe in being ethically as well as theologically progressive. Everything that deeply effects the moral welfare of the race concerns the pulpit.

The church must be more than an oratory, it must also be a school of instruction. It must be more than a comforter and rescuer, it must also be a dynamo to energize and the exalter of ideals for society, as well as for the individual. May God make St. Stephen's such a church. May He forgive us where we have come short in rising to our opportunities, and may He bless the endeavors that have been made for the sake of His Cause.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

Miss Alice Wright was our speaker at the January meeting of the Auxiliary. She is a teacher in St. Mark's Mission at Nanana, Alaska, where they have a school of thirty boys and girls and minister to all the village of 300 Indians. They try to take the children into the school at the age of seven and keep them at least five years.

It was an interesting story Miss Wright told of the little Indian girls making their clothes and baking bread for the large family of thirty, and of the little boys raising a garden of fine vegetables. She is here trying to obtain scholarships, which are $200.00 each.

B. E. Hollar,
Secretary.

Mahan School.

There are still a few pledges to the Mahan School Fund, promised through the Woman's Auxiliary, that have not been paid.

I shall be very glad to receive them, that I may turn in a complete report at the end of our year of collecting.

Ella Headman,
Treasurer.

Golden Jubilee of the Woman's Auxiliary.

In order to commemorate this anniversary it was resolved at the last Triennial meeting, to raise a fund of $50,000, the revenue from which will be used for the benefit of missionaries while at home from service, for study, medical care or recreation. This fund will be known as the "Emery Fund," in recognition of the devoted services of three sisters who organized and conducted the work of the Auxiliary for over forty years.

It is hoped that every woman in the church will contribute at least 50 cents (one cent for each year), also that others connected in any way with St. Stephen's, both men and women, will respond liberally to the appeal.

Contributions may be sent to Mrs. William B. Campbell, Treasurer, 1711 Pine Street, Philadelphia.

St. Stephen's Aid Society.

The meetings of the Aid Society will be held as usual in the Parish House on Friday mornings, during Lent, at 10 o'clock. As the activities of this organization may not have been brought to the notice of the new members of our congregation it seems well to state that the object of this Society is to make baby garments, to be distributed by Miss Lewis, our Parish Worker, in her work among the poor of the Parish. It is hoped the attendance may be large as Miss Lewis tells me she has almost exhausted the supply with which we filled her closet in the spring. We are hoping for new members this year and will gladly give out work to be done at home for those who are unable to attend the meetings.

Emily K. Campbell,
President.

The Mission Study Class.

The Mission Study Class will be held on Friday mornings in Lent in the Parish House, beginning on Friday, February 11th, at 11 o'clock, with Mrs. W. Horner-Smith as leader. Mrs. Smith is the President of the Churchwomen's Club, and it is an especial privilege to have her conduct the class.

The text book to be used is the General Survey of the Needs and Activities of the Episcopal Church, and contains much information unknown to the average church member.

Those who were in the class last year are asked to come again, and it is hoped that new members will be interested enough to join. Books will be ordered for those members who signify their intention to attend the class.

Girls' Friendly Society.

Monday evening, February 14th, at 8:15 o'clock, the Rev. Phillips E. Osgood, of the Chapel of the Mediator, will address the members of St. Stephen's Branch of the Girls' Friendly Society. Members of the congregation will be cordially welcomed.

Grace V. D. Lucas,
Branch Secretary.

Church Periodical Club.

Our work has grown considerably during the past year. Beginning with 43 magazines sent by 23 donors, we now have 75 current periodicals mailed regularly by 40 persons.

There is much variety in all we do; much more than is generally supposed.

Besides sending to missionaries and shut-ins in far away, lonely places, we give bright, cheerful stories and pictures to the sick in hospitals and homes near at hand.

This is the month in which those interested in the work are asked to become Associate Members by the payment of 50 cents or more. The money is needed to help in paying the postage on the magazines and books mailed from our own Parish House..

Just at present we are interested in collecting books for seamen.

We all had experience in entertaining our young sailor boys during the war and can readily understand how lonely and homesick many of them often are.

Forty clergymen of the church, in as many different ports, have agreed to act as "Friends in Port" to the seamen of the particular towns and cities in which their parishes are situated.

We can also act as volunteer "Friends in Port." Our plan is to collect 25 good novels, pack them in a strong wooden box and send by freight to some seaboard town.

Book plates will be provided, if desired, and all will go as St. Stephen's Gift to the Seamen's Library.

Please look over your books at home (if you do not care to buy new ones) and send or bring to the Parish House any that you can spare.

Mary M. Roberts,
Librarian.

Shoe Fund.

We have given out one dozen pairs of shoes and half dozen pairs of overshoes in January.

Received from those securing shoes, $2.25.

King's Daughters.

The King's Daughters will have their next meetings February 9th and 23rd, in the Guild Room, Parish House, quarter of 8 o'clock.

EDWARD W. MOORE, Accounting Warden.

The Rector's Letter.

MY DEAR PARISHIONERS:

The physicians have informed me that I need entire rest from public speaking for six months. They have also strongly advised muteness for some weeks. St. Paul especially condemns whisperers; but my medical advisers wish me to belong to that class. I am glad to say that my general condition has been pronounced good; my trouble is local, in the larynx. I have a good hope that by complete rest I shall gain more vocal strength than I have had for years. This voice-box of mine, it seems, needs a vacation to readjust itself to its tasks. Already I feel improved, but I have been especially warned not to be deceived by such ameliorations, but to keep up my silence, and press on to the goal of a full recovery.

I am avoiding temptation by keeping away from the church, a line of conduct that I would not commend to others. My passage has been engaged for April 13th on the Fabre Line to Marseilles; but if I can get a berth by March 23rd, it will be expedient to embark then, as I am accomplishing nothing by waiting here.

I shall not slip away without coming down to St. Stephen's, and joining in our common worship. I had hoped to preach a farewell sermon, and say some words of admonition and gratitude; to stir you up to the task of making our church fulfil its function in the community, and to thank you for all your goodness to me, and for this holiday; but it is manifest that it would be wrong to attempt any such utterance, much as I yearn to express myself in this way.

I am turning over everything to Mr. Keable and the Vestry. I feel sure that they will keep the ship on an even keel. The great secret of prosperity in a church is mutual good-will and kindliness.

I am a great believer in passing through the Vestry the available members of the congregation, so as to bring home widely the relation of the Vestry to the congregation, and to acquaint as many members as possible with the affairs of the Church. But this year I hope that I shall not be asked to be too consistent. The circumstances are peculiar, and I should be very glad to have the Vestrymen of 1920-1921 all re-elected, and some former Vestrymen elected to fill up the vacancy. All these officials have worked together and know one another.

Mr. Keable will, I am sure, keep the services along the well-established lines. Much additional duty and responsibility will be thrown on him, and he has welcomed the plan of having special preachers invited to assist in the preaching. The Vestry has approved this scheme, and will make the necessary appropriations. I have asked the assistance of men of high standing as preachers and scholars.

We have, however, other attractions beside the preaching. One is a well-rendered service and fine music. We must make every effort to keep up that side. Then, too, there is the fellowship of the Church. I had hoped that this would have been increased by another supper; the last was such a success, and I had a secret hope that another supper might be held before I sailed, a farewell festivity.

But I knew that it would not be wise to run into such temptation. How could a person as vocal as I by disposition and talent, sit quiet, or content myself with whispers at such an entertainment? It must be given up, so far as I am concerned. But why should there not be another supper about June 1st before the summer partings?

Wouldn't it be a good idea to make such an occasion a time to introduce new members? Why not have a Visiting Committee to help Mr. Keable by looking up visitors, strangers and possible new members, and then bring all their recruits to this feast of ingathering? Of course, Mr. Keable will call as much as he can. But there is a special charm in a visit from a member of the congregation. The minister's visit is often considered official. The other is looked on as a peculiarly gracious act.

I intend to send a letter to THE PARISH NEWS for April and May. The physicians told me that there was nothing to prevent my using my pen, provided that I do not overdo it.

When I return I hope to see the Burd School grounds an ornament to the neighborhood and well equipped for sport; the problem of heating the church economically and thoroughly solved; the roof in number one condition, and the congregation invigorated by their efforts to help the church to fulfil its tasks, with the rector on a vacation, and the associate taxed to discharge the weekly routine and additional duties. May God grant it. I confidently hope that all things will so work together for good.

The sudden death of Mrs. Vanderslice on Friday, February 25th, was a great shock to all of us. On Wednesday she was at the regular weekly meeting of the King's Daughters, her health seemed normal, and on Friday she had passed to where beyond these voices there is peace. All of us feel the greatest sympathy with Dr. Vanderslice. Great indeed is his bereavement. St. Stephen's shares it. She was a faithful and loving Sunday School teacher and the animating spirit of our Whatsoever Chapter of the King's Daughters. The Country Week Association found in her a constant helper. She was also in charge of the Shoe Fund. Now that she has followed Mrs. H. P. Taylor we realize that greater responsibilities fall on the rest of us to keep up the works they inaugurated and sustained.

Another bereavement has befallen us in the sudden death of Col. Lewis J. Magill, of the U. S. Marine Corps. This distinguished officer was confirmed in St. Stephen's and kept his membership in the Parish in spite of the long distance between his home in the Navy Yard and the Church.

Dr. Worcester, who married him to Miss McKeehan, the daughter of Mrs. C. Watson McKeehan, and the sister of Mr. Charles L. McKeehan, assisted Mr. Keable in the service.

Wherever these departed friends may be in God's vast universe, we know that they are under the loving Creator's care and we pray that they may know of the love of those they have left behind.

Let me say a word concerning this talk about an amendment of the prohibition amendment to the Constitution before the latter has been fairly tried. Of course, there was a large number of people who were opposed to this prohibition amendment. It was carried in spite of their opposition. Now that we are meeting difficulties in putting the law into effective operation, difficulties that all wise people anticipated, these enemies of the scheme rush forward and cry, "See, the whole measure was crude, rash; let's modify it!" But it is a fundamental law in parliamentary procedure, that only those who voted in favor of a measure, can move a reconsideration. It means absolutely nothing when these enemies of the measure from the beginning, cry out for an amendment of an amendment.

As for these pleas, made by eminent lawyers, that the law is contrary to our Constitution, or State's rights, or individual rights. There is, of course, no weight to be attached to such unfee-ed opinions. Alcohol has been pronounced by the most eminent authorities an injury to the health and morals of mankind. The State has the same right to restrict its sale and use, that it has to control the sale and use of opium. The diminution in the number of the inmates in our reformatories and jails, and in the number of cases for trial in our criminal courts, is overwhelming evidence in favor of the new laws. Let any one study the report in The Survey, of November 6, 1920, on two years without drink in Grand Rapids, Michigan, and put that evidence against the opinions of traveling salesmen and the talk of the clubs and hotels, and he will be convinced that prohibition is a success, when it is loyally obeyed.

In Grand Rapids crime decreased 49 per cent. Here is one paragraph of "The Gist of the Grand Rapids Findings:"

"Witnesses almost unanimously said that the two most noticeable effects of prohibition were the change it had brought in family life and the fact that the younger generation was growing up without a taste for alcohol." Here is the testimony of a dealer in shoes:

"There used to be a saloon right back of my store here across the alley. Fathers used to come in with their children and say, 'I want a pair of shoes for the kid; try on a few while I get a drink.' The father would go out and in a few minutes he'd come back with a few drinks in him, and some of his spare change spent, and he'd buy the cheapest pair of shoes in the store for the child. Now that's all stopped. Fathers take pride in getting the best shoes they can afford for their children."

No one is qualified, in my judgment, to give an opinion on this great measure of public policy who has not read this interpretation of prohibition in Grand Rapids, an investigation begun at the suggestion of Mr. Justice Brandeis, as the basis for exhibiting, to quote his letter:

"First, What further gain may be expected from the elimination of these causes? And, second, What else must be done to make this a livable world?"

Certainly the answer to this last question is not to condone law-breaking or modify this great amendment.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

The New Windows.

Upon viewing the new windows just completed by The D'Ascenzo Studios of Philadelphia for the openings over the main entrance of St. Stephen's Church, one is immediately impressed by the sybolism that is woven into every portion of these great panes of leaded glass.

The windows were especially designed for night illumination and the great cross which is the central feature of the windows may be seen flaming as it were out upon the night like the cross of Constantine. From the base of the cross springs the vine, weaving in and out in ever ascending spirals to the upper portion of the window, typifying the Church of Christ, with its far-reaching activities, and its mounting optimism.

"I am the vine, ye are the branches." "Abide in me and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in me." This, then, is the theme of the central window. Our Lord represented by the Cross. "By whom we have now received atonement," and His church upon earth. In the branches of the vine may be seen white doves, symbols of the seven gifts of the Holy Spirit.

At the centre of the intersecting arms of the cross in medallion form and monogramed are the letters I. H. S., and immediately below upon six shields pendant from the vine are emblazoned Alpha and Omega, and the four symbols of the evangelists—the angel, the lion, the ox, and the eagle.

In the extreme upper portion of the window is seen a chalice and wafer typifying the blessed sacrament. The grape clusters of the vine are also suggestive of the same idea. At the base of the window upon a shield of antique form are seen the attributes of St. Stephen, the first Christian martyr; these are the book, the palm and five stones, the palm and stones being the symbols of martyrdom.

In the borders of the windows, used as a repeating pattern, may be seen the crown symbol which is sometimes used to suggest the crown of life, the crown of glory, the crown of righteousness. The two windows on either side of the central window contain the vine as the leading motif with the addition of two beautifully suggestive medallions, one of which shows a representation of the ark and rainbow, the other the Paschal Lamb, upon the book of the seven seals. Other emblems are the anchor, the table of the law, the sheaf of wheat, and the Pelican, plucking down from her breast in order that the young birds may rest in comfort, and symbolizing the care of the Church for her children.

The colors of these windows also have a special meaning; for instance, white is the symbol of light, and since Our Lord is the Light of the World, white is His color; hence, the white cross as the principal feature of the composition. White is also the symbol of purity; hence the seven white doves symbolizing the seven gifts of the Holy Spirit.

Blue, the color of the sky, introduced in the border of the windows, is a symbol of heaven, faith, truth and constancy.

Yellow is a symbol of the sun, God's greatest gift of nature, and is used in the field of the windows as a symbol of fruitfulness, plenty and joy.

Red is a symbol of martyrdom and of holy zeal, and is used on the shield of the four evangelists as a distinguishing mark of their commanding position among the disciples.

The Sunday School.

We have just mailed to the Diocesan Board of Religious Education the report of our Sunday School. It is cheering to record that we have a total enrollment of 175 scholars, teachers and officers, with an average attendance, both summer and winter, of about 100. During these recent winter months we have added ten new scholars, besides adding four new teachers. This gives us the hopeful view, particularly those of us who have been with the school many years, that though we teachers and officers may pass on, yet our loved school will continue in the same place with its good work.

This is deeply impressed upon us today as we older ones gather at the funeral services of our faithful fellow-worker and teacher, Mrs. Virginia Vanderslice. Few of us are left who can look back on all her years of loving service in the Vineyard of the Master. But many, many, by the hundreds, of little folk and young women, grown up now, will today think with affectionate memories of her loving Christian ministrations.

There will be a teacher's deepest joy felt the first Sunday in March when the Bishop holds Confirmation Services in our church, and Miss Eccles, Miss Lufbarry, Mrs. Roberts, Miss Kennedy and Miss Trussell, of our school, see fruition in their work, as their scholars kneel at the sacred altar. May God stir us all to a sweeter appreciation of Sunday School work, as we see these young people consecrating their lives, in the name of the Christ.

It is, indeed, stimulating to see a secular newspaper, like the North American, devoting several columns of the front page, daily for weeks, to the cause of the Sunday School, giving freely most excellent articles on the value to America and it's Republican Institutions, of this religious work, not only among the young but for the adult in Bible Classes of our American Sunday School. We are very grateful.

G. H. STREAKER,
Superintendent.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

There were twenty-three members present at the February meeting of the Auxiliary. As our time was limited our regular reports were set aside in order that we might have an address by Miss Riddell, who has established a leper hospital in Japan. It was a pathetic story she told of these poor creatures, who sometimes have the disease thirty years.

Miss Riddell bought four acres and has built small buildings in gardens, where they try to make the seventy inmates comfortable.

For several years the Auxiliary has given $10 a year to furnish food for one day. We chose St. Stephen's Day.

Miss Riddell is here now trying to raise an endowment fund. The interest on $250 will provide for the upkeep of the hospital one day.

Miss Magee has collected $324.50 for the United Offering.

The next meeting will be held March 17th.

FREDERICK B. KEABLE, Treasurer.

A Pastoral Letter.

March 20, 1921.

I had hoped that I might say a few parting words this morning. My throat has improved so much that I have expert advice that a few sentences would not injure me. But I am convinced that any prolonged vocal effort on my part would be unprofitable, affording more concern than pleasure to my auditors. I, therefore, forebear and avail myself of Mr. Keable's kindness.

My first thought was to write a sermon; and to this end I began to search for a suitable text. When I was a theological student the Bishop of Virginia used to insist that the divinity students must not preach sermons like full-fledged ministers. We had a number of mission stations in outlying rural districts, where we conducted services and exhorted the people, who called our crude efforts "sermons." We sought to make them sermons, for we were, of course, trying to learn to preach, as well as to help those people. Yet the Bishop insisted that laymen such as we still were, must not preach sermons. The difficulty was overcome by a subtle distinction. We were told by the professor in charge of the mission that a discourse on a text of Scripture was a sermon, while without a text a discourse was only an address.

I shall only make, according to this distinction, an address this morning, and it shall be brief.

Fifteen and a half years ago, October 1, 1905, I became the rector of this great city church, which possessed fine traditions and unique distinction; but had recently sustained a blow that struck it to its base in the sudden resignation of a discouraged rector, after a rectorship of a few weeks. His rectorship was so brief it has been almost entirely forgotten We must not judge any man by a single act. His career, as a whole, was helpful, and distinguished. He had fine gifts and he used them faithfully for the good of his fellowmen, and the extension of the Kingdom. But in his retreat from his task, before he had fairly grappled with it, he showed a lack of a due appreciation of the obligation of a contract. If the Vestry had treated him as he treated the Vestry we should have heard loud complaints in clerical circles. Not until I arrived on the ground did I realize how great an injury had been inflicted on the Church.

I shall not deny that the first years were very hard. I had, however, a staunch people. New organizations were created. New members came in, and gradually it became apparent that we were holding our own, and in some directions moving forward.

Nothing aided more than the envelope system. I want to thank especially those who helped me to inaugurate it. The old members proved staunch, and the new members brought us fresh zeal, and enthusiasm. When the great World War broke out, and our country drew her sword St. Stephen's Church did a work that was unparalleled. Only the other day in Baltimore a young man remarked that he would like to show me some attention to repay in some measure the wonderful kindness of Old St. Stephen's Club. There was nothing like it in the country, he said.

For whatever measure of success has marked these years, I have to thank, under God, many kind friends. It would be invidious to mention names.

I am quite aware that my rectorship will in the years to come be referred to as the rectorship in which Miss Anna J. Magee made the wonderful interior improvements, and the Burd School nearly doubled its endowment, and was put on a new basis. I believe that it will also be remembered as the time when the Wednesday noonday service throughout the year was inaugurated. And now, after fifteen and a half years of use, my throat requires a prolonged rest, and the Vestry has generously voted me a six months' holiday. In a few days I sail.

How can I part from you better than by following the example of the English host, of whom Dr. Leighton Parks tells us in his recent pleasant articles in the Atlantic Monthly? At family prayers at the close of the week, this gentleman used to ask his family, and servants to forgive him for any failure during the week in patience, consideration or kindness.

I have not been wittingly unjust to any one; but who can tell his sins of omissions? I fear I have often failed in patience. You must forgive me. If I have seemed harsh in any actions, I beg you to believe that it has always been a principle with me not to turn disagreeable decisions or actions over to others, but to assume that responsibility as one of the obligations of leadership.

As I look back over my life I thank God that He led me into the ministry. I have always claimed the liberty of the pulpit, and have always found the congregation cordially appreciative of outspokenness.

At one time I was an old-fashioned Evangelical in doctrine. In my studies as a professor at the Virginia Seminary, I became convinced that the evangelical view of the Bible was untenable, and I became an out-and-out broad churchman. My position at the great evangelical seminary became uncongenial and I was glad to resume a pastoral charge in Norfolk, from which city I came to Philadelphia. A profound theological reconstruction, such as I underwent is a very exhausting process, and the experience has given me great sympathy with people who feel the necessity of re-stating their faith in new terms. While I have abandoned most of the evangelical formulæ, I love the evangelical spirit. The older I grow the simpler seem the essential elements of religion. God is a spirit, and they that worship Him, must worship Him in spirit and in truth. He that loveth not his brother, whom he hath seen, how can he love God, whom he hath not seen? The origin of all things must be Love—seeking to create intelligent objects of affection. The source of our redemption is clearly stated to be the Love of God for a sinful world. The end toward which all things work is the Kingdom of Love. If we live for others, we are walking in the steps of Jesus Christ. We must turn to God for help. Not merely to escape the punishment of our sins, but that He may make us into helpers of others, so that the world may be better and happier for our lives.

I shall think of you often, and pray for you regularly, while I am gone, and I ask you to do the same for me. I hope that I may return to you strengthened in body, and in spirit. I feel confident that all will go well in my absence. Mr. Keable will be in charge of the services and parochial activities, and with my approval has been invited to sit with the Vestry. Additional preachers will be brought in to aid at the Sunday services, that Mr. Keable may not be overburdened.

For many reasons I have always liked a church with rented pews. I like to call the roll, so to speak, by looking over the pews. In my first parish the pews were supposed to be free, but they were really reserved for certain people by prescriptive use, so I knew some of the weaknesses of the free pews. Yet recently I have had brought home to me some of the weaknesses of the system of pew rents. More and more do people resent the renting of pews in a church. The current of opinion is running against this ancient custom. It is probable that we may have to abandon it. In the meantime I beg of the renters of pews and sittings, that they will be forbearing and patient. Ought I not to go further, and ask you to be given to hospitality? When I was looking into the Diocesan journals before I accepted the call to St. Stephen's, I noted that Dr. Worcester reported all pews as free after the Lord's Prayer. We must live up to that announcement. My instruction has been free to members after eleven—continuing the old custom.

When a pew is rented in a church, it is taken with the understanding that the occupant will conduct himself in a Christian way. Where a renter flagrantly offends, the Vestry is justified in refusing to continue to rent to such a person. We must be zealous for the honor of the Church. We must be loyal to the purposes for which the Church exists. I hope that these visiting preachers, all men with a message, may bring many new visitors to our church. I bespeak for them a hospitable reception.

A real step forward will be taken, if a committee of hospitality be organized, and strangers welcomed and looked up. Mr. Keable hopes to effect something of this kind. I shall be delighted to hear of his success. I want you to have the usual Parish meeting. All the reports will be sent to Mr. Keable, and read at the meeting. I hope that the meeting will nominate to the pew-renters for election the same vestrymen who now hold office, and will fill the vacancy with some former vestryman. It is wiser to avoid experiments at this time.

One of the responsibilities of a Christian minister is to point out the duties of Christian citizenship. The support of the churches was absolutely indispensable in securing the new charter, and in electing the present mayor and city council. The price of liberty and good government is unceasing vigilance. We must remember that the innumerable offices of government will certainly be used by ambitious politicians to build up a political machine, unless they are checked. Our protection against such domination is the Civil Service Law, which aims to bestow office upon merit, and to keep men in office, if faithful and efficient. I beg you not allow yourselves to be deceived by plausibilities. A civil service law, where large freedom of selection is allowed to the administration, fails of its purpose. The personal favor of the mayor becomes too influential and the merit of the candidate ceases to be the chief consideration.

My European address will be published in THE PARISH NEWS. I sail direct to Marseilles and will join my family in Grenoble. We shall not travel extensively; but will remain in the Southern part of France or Switzerland—possibly spending some weeks in Venice and Northern Italy. I shall write letters to THE PARISH NEWS for April and May, and will ask Mr. Keable to read messages from me from time to time from the chancel.

I want to thank you most heartily for all your kindnesses and co-operation. I feel like a father leaving a family. A church does not run itself. There is more management than appears on the surface. I believe in pointing out faults privately, and in praising merits publicly. Nothing brings more reproach on the religion of Jesus than a spirit of censoriousness and criticism in a church. Jesus hated Pharisaism, and warns against seeing the faults of others, and overlooking our own—seeing the mote in our brother's eye, and not realizing the beam in our own eye. Let us avoid this.

May God bless and keep you. I hate to say good-bye. No, it is only for six months. I love this city, and this church. My heart will often turn fondly to these narrow and badly cleaned streets, where live such a staunch and patient people; where I have such dear friends and parishioners; where so many good works are being done.

Let us try to lead the lives of sincere followers of Jesus Christ, who went about doing good; who fulfilled His Father's will; who is not ashamed to call us brethren.

"And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of His grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you." Amen.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

Immediately after the reading of the Pastoral letter Mr. Keable, on behalf of the Parishioners, presented to Dr. Grammer a purse of $1,700 as an expression of their good will and affection.

Some Lenten Reflections.

Now that the season of Lent is past it would be well to think over what these six weeks have done to strengthen one's spiritual life. It has been good to see the crowds assembled daily, eager to hear the message, and the solemnity of Maundy Thursday, the thrill of Good Friday, followed by the exhuberant joy of the Easter Sunday, makes the culmination of this season of meditation and penitence, but church attendance alone is as nothing if the soul has not really been quickened so that the spirit of unchristian coldness, hardness and lack of charity should disappear under the warming influence of the spirit of Christ.

The Convocation of North Philadelphia.

The Convocation of North Philadelphia will hold its May meeting at St. Stephen's, at 5 o'clock, on Tuesday, May 10th, preceded by a meeting of the Woman's Aid at 3.30. Supper will be served at 6.30, by invitation of the Parish, at which the Convocation meets, as is the custom, so St. Stephen's will have the opportunity to act as host on this occasion. Mr. Keable and Mr. Medary, the newly-elected Dean of the Convocation, will arrange for the speakers and the supper will be attended to by a committee formed for that date.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

The Woman's Auxiliary of St. Stephen's held a meeting on March 17th, when reports were given by the delegates covering two months in most cases, owing to having had the time at the previous meeting appropriated by a speaker. Interesting and encouraging reports they were, making one wish that every appeal could be answered at once. However, all pledges up to date have been paid and special contributions also made.

The announcement that future meetings of the Pennsylvania Branch of the Auxiliary would be held in the new Church House on Rittenhouse Square, was received with joy.

Letters of thanks for missionary boxes warmed the hearts of the givers, and a letter from a Chinese student at Mahan School, Yangchow, telling of his study of the Bible, was touching indeed.

An effort is being made to raise $250, the necessary amount to support the leper hospital at Kumamoto for one day in perpetuity, St. Stephen's Day, and Miss Washington and Miss Headman are being encouraged by donations received, and are hopeful that all who hear of this worthy object may feel like helping St. Stephen's Parish permanently to carry on this Christian work in the House of the Resurrection of Hope.

The next meeting of the Auxiliary will be in the Parish House on Thursday, April 21st, at 10.30 o'clock, when Mrs. John Thompson Spencer will give her deferred address about this hospital, as she and her husband visited it when in Japan.

After the meeting and during the afternoon of April 21st until 6 o'clock, there will be a sale of jellies, cakes, etc., for the benefit of the Supply Bureau of the Diocese, and the Guild Room will be temporarily called the Blue Post Shop, following the example of a similar sale in the parishes throughout the Diocese held on different days for the same purpose.

Members of the Parish are asked kindly to contribute desired articles and then, as is usually the case, to come and buy them! Tea and cake will be served for 25 cents.

LAURA BELL, President,
Woman's Auxiliary of St. Stephen's.

Report of the United Thank Offering.

Since my last report I have received $28.00 more, making a total received of $347.50. A recent communication from the Diocesan Treasurer, lays special emphasis on the importance of doubling this contribution by the next Triennial in 1922, and offers more encouragement in the fact that already we are 33 per cent. better than at the last Triennial. Hard, steady work by every one will bring the desired results. In conclusion, Mrs. Hollingsworth adds: "I want to tell you that as I come to get deeper into my work as Diocesan Treasurer, I am learning the value and power of praying for an offering." I hope all of you are learning this, too.

ANNA J. MAGEE,
Treasurer.

A Golden Jubilee! Fifty Years of Service.

The Woman's Auxiliary intend to mark the Fiftieth Anniversary of this organization by a contribution of $50,000 to the Presiding Bishop and Council. This money will form a trust fund to be known as the Emery Fund in grateful recognition and loving appreciation of the devoted labors of three sisters: Mrs. Irving, organizer of the Auxiliary; Miss Julia C. Emery, secretary for forty years, and Miss M. T. Emery, head of the box work for many years. The income from this fund will be used for missionaries at home on furlough, for board, medical care, study or recreation.

It is hoped that every woman in the church will contribute at least 50 cents (one cent for each year).

Contributions may be sent to Mrs. William B. Campbell, Treasurer, 1711 Pine Street, or may be enclosed in an envelope and marked "Emery Fund" and placed on the alms basins.

The Mission Study Class.

The Mission Study Class of St. Stephen's has held weekly meetings during Lent, with an average attendance of twelve, augmented by visitors on several occasions, notably Mr. Keable and Dr. Worcester. Under the leadership of Mrs. Horner Smith the class devoted the time to the aim of the course, "to see the task and realize the need of grace," by studying the General Survey of the Episcopal Church and becoming more familiar with its organization, what it stands for and its needs.

The Diocesan Session for all Mission Study Classes on "The Church's Task," will be held at Holy Trinity Parish House on Tuesday evening, April 19th, at 8 P. M. Members of all the classes and their friends are cordially invited. The offering brought by all the classes will be presented at this time. St. Stephen's offering of $35 will be given to the Bishop Rowe Foundation Fund for work in Alaska.

Urges Care for Youths.

The following is from a Philadelphia newspaper of March 31, 1921:

"Because business men do not take sufficient interest in the well-being of the boys and young men who make an initial misstep, they are largely responsible for the present crime wave, Charles Edwin Fox, Assistant District Attorney, told members of the Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon yesterday in the Bellevue-Stratford.

"The speaker urged the business men to interest themselves in the 'Big Brother' movement, take a personal interest in individuals, get them positions, stimulate their interest in athletics and generally keep a kindly supervising eye over them until better citizens are the result.

"He pointed out that the source of crime was with the young, as 75 per cent. of all crimes are committed by young men. Getting at the boys is a logical course of prevention of crime, he said."

The Young Men's Club.

The congregation will no doubt be pleased to know that the St. Stephen's Young Men's Club has just completed its plans, organizing a base ball team for the coming season; this team to be known as the St. Stephen's Base Ball Club.

In view of the fact that we have no grounds of our own, we will play all of our games on the opposing clubs' fields, and it seems only right that we should equip our team with uniforms.

As the funds of "The Work Among Our Boys" have been exhausted during the winter through expenditures towards the instruction and recreation of the younger boys of the Parish, we are forced to call upon the congregation for funds to equip the older boys' base ball team.

Contributions will gladly be received by Robert T. Boyd, Treasurer, Y. M. C.

The Sunday School.

This has been one of our happiest of Eastertides. Thirteen of our boys and girls, as a result of their recent confirmation, came to their sacred communion for the first time in the church. None but the teachers who have so hopefully led them and the clergy who minister to them, realize the sacredness of this scene as they see the care-free and often apparently thoughtless young people, consecrating themselves for the first time in the memorial service of the Lord's Supper.

On both Palm Sunday and Easter, we were able, with the most beautiful of lantern slides, to show the Christ story to the school. We were also fortunate in getting several reels of motion pictures to take us to the scenes of modern Jerusalem at Easter time. We were pleased to have our parents and church friends out on Wednesday during Holy Week to repeat this pictured story of the life of the Master. We hope more of our friends will visit us on our Sunday sessions and give us the cheer of their presence.

Our annual procession into the church on the Sunday following Easter, singing our carols of the Risen Christ, was indeed successful. Mr. Keable gave us a good address. We believe we sang our hymns and carols more heartily than ever. We are always pleased on this occasion with the kindly words and presence of our relatives and friends, but particularly with the sight of former scholars of the school. Let us always make this our big, happy, reunion day.

We are glad to say that our school is very much alive. It is taking in new scholars and we are very grateful to all who made possible the gift of a potted plant to each member present last Sunday, April 3rd, as well as the delicious egg of Easter.

King's Daughters of St. Stephen's Church.
Whatsoever Circle.

President—Miss Bertha T. Walshe.
Secretary—Mrs. George T. Townsley.
Treasurer—Miss Anna Taggart.

For the first time in many years the King's Daughters met this past month without their beloved President and leader. Attendance at our meetings was to Mrs. Vanderslice not only a duty but her greatest pleasure, and she allowed nothing to keep her away. She was indeed faithful until the end. We shall miss her leadership and her loving thought for each of us, but we shall strive earnestly to carry on our work and to accomplish even more than heretofore, in affectionate remembrance of one who always urged us to do everything "In His Name."

Meetings will be held April 6th and 20th, in the Guild Room.

From Amherst, Va.

March 1, 1921.

My dear Mr.

I do not know whether Miss Wagner wrote you of two purchases I have made out of the fund of $11. sent from St. Stephen's. You never could guess if you do not know. She has to cut the hair of many of the little boys. She asked me for clippers and scissors and so I got her a pair of each and she is ready for business; and gets through the job in less than one half the time.

I am finding every minute of my time filled. I have a Community Teachers' Training Class with 17 Ministers, and the Baptist, Methodist, Disciples, Lutheran and our own Church are represented. The fellowship is fine and the work a great joy. Then I teach Bible History in the High School twice a week to 34 boys and girls. That too is a great joy.

Hope you and yours are well.

Cordially yours,

Thomas D. Lewis.

Benedictus es Domine.

(May be sung in place of Te Deum.)

Blessed art thou, O Lord God of our fathers; praised and exalted above all for ever.

Blessed art thou for the Name of thy Majesty: praised and exalted above all for ever.

Blessed art thou in the temple of thy holiness: praised and exalted above all for ever:

Blessed art thou that beholdest the depths and dwellest between the Cherubim: praised and exalted above all for ever.

Blessed are thou on the Glorious throne of thy Kingdom: praised and exalted above all for ever.

Blessed art thou in the firmament of heaven: praised and exalted above all for ever.

Though I have read a great deal of modern inquiry I have found nothing to shake my childlike faith in the simple rescript of Christ and Him crucified * * * Never in the history of the world was Jesus of Nazareth so interesting and predominant * * * Can you discover another in word and deed, in luminous far-reaching power of speech, an example to walk by the side of this the Anointed One of your race and of my belief? * * * I would not inveigh against the Church or its ministry; I would not stigmatize temporal preaching; I would have ministers of religion as free to discuss the things of this world as the statesmen and the journalists; but with this difference: That the objective point with them shall be the regeneration of man through the grace of God.—From "Marse Henry," the Autobiography of Henry Watterson.

FREDERICK B. KEABLE, Treasurer.

The Rector's Letter.

Sunday, April 3, 1921,
In Sight of the Azores,
10.45 A. M.

MY DEAR MR. KEABLE:

The good steamship Patria is moving along so quietly over the dark blue seas under a beautiful sky of blue checkered with white fleecy clouds, and I withdraw awhile into the writing room to send you and the dear people of St. Stephen's an affectionate greeting. Our first ten days were stormy, and the veil of silence must be drawn over those experiences; but the last days have been delightful. Obeying the physician's instructions I have talked only at meals, and have been rigidly silent on deck. Fortunately I have some delightful books. Now I am deep in Wells' marvelous History of the World. Its style is delightful, its generalizations are entrancing and illuminating, and I find it more fascinating than any novel in my packet. There is a French marquis on board, and it is great fun to watch the judicious manner in which he derives the maximum of pleasure from his cup of coffee and his cigarette. Like Clemenceau he is always gloved. I cannot emulate his economy of pleasure, and simply revel in Wells.

Although five days late in starting, the Patria is not making up time. On the contrary it is taking two days longer than on the crossing in September, when my family was on it. Then from New York to Marseilles was 14 days; with us it will take 16. We arrive at Algiers on the 8th, Palermo the 10th, Naples the 11th, and Marseilles the 13th. Mrs. Grammer will meet me there.

I am now going to have a little quiet service of my own. As part of it I shall learn by heart the 120th hymn in the New Hymnal. I shall also read the 104th Psalm, that splendid description of nature as the handiwork of God. Then my thoughts will turn to St. Stephen's. I shall hear the choir, with my mental ears, sing "Eternal Father, Strong to Save." I shall see that much loved interior with its soft lights and exquisitely refined colors. I shall hear the chant, and how vividly I shall see the congregation—"my flock" (I love the word)—the company of which I am Captain, the Teacher, the spiritual leader—and then again, my kind friends, my co-workers, who have in many ways helped me as much as I can have helped them; who have so patiently accepted my limitations and so generously appraised my services to them. I do not think that I expressed sufficiently my appreciation of that wonderful purse, that will make my holiday as free from financial care as it will be from pastoral work. I could not express myself at the time. Indeed words fail me now. Mr. Barton wisely advised me not to see the list, since through some cause I might miss some names; but assured me that there was no personal solicitation, that the gifts were entirely spontaneous, and came from many members. So would I have it. After a while the money will be spent; but the memory that my congregation felt so warmly toward me and expressed their feeling spontaneously in such a generous way will be a life-long possession and inspiration.

I regret that I could not get a letter to you for the April PARISH NEWS. I spent Good Friday visiting the New York churches, and Easter morning I attended St. Bartholomew's. It was most instructive to observe how that great choir rendered the service, and to hear Dr. Leighton Parks. I was astonished to find that he administered the Lord's Supper in only one kind. Instead of handing around the cup, he simply held it up, and said, "The blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, which was shed for you, to preserve your body and soul unto everlasting life. Remember that Christ's blood was shed for you, and be thankful." It seems to me that individual cups have many advantages over this mutilation of the sacrament. Dr. Park's method shows an entire disregard of our historic contention that the church has no right to withdraw the cup from the laity.

Another feature of the service that displeased me was the singing of the Te Deum in Latin, in order to fit in with the music of Dvorak. The Latin of the age in which the Te Deum was written does not compare in richness with the Elizabethan English; linguistically it is an inferior tongue. A Protestant church ought not to subordinate thought to music in this fashion. On the other hand I was perfectly charmed with the exquisitely soft amens of the choir. On the whole I thought that our service surpassed theirs, for they did not have a single hymn for congregational singing—not one. The only hymns were the processional, recessional, and a hymn sung a verse at a time by the choir, between the tables at the celebration of the Lord's Supper. The Te Deum took twenty minutes, and the service did not close till 1.20.

Let me send as a greeting from mid-ocean these lines that I learned by heart yesterday. They are by the editor of a newspaper in Franklin, Pa., W. P. F. Ferguson:

For those who fly to seek the haven's shelter,
The coastwise shoals and sands hold peril dread.
Let such reef sail and sound the foaming welter,
And hold the anchor ready at the head.

But not so we. Outbound our course is headed,
Sea room waits yon; behind us all our fears.
Free ocean's space holds nothing to be dreaded,
Nor perils lie in God's eternal years.

Welcome, then, offshore wind! Each sail home-sheeted,
The charted course true held, to sea, to sea!
Whatever comes, it shall be bravely greeted,
And nothing feared in all that is to be.

Surely that is the spirit in which we ought to journey into the future. Forgetting the things which are behind—forgetting after repenting—and reaching forth unto the things which are before, and trusting that God will not suffer us to be tried above that which we are able to bear, but will sustain, deliver and guide us to the end.

Please remember me cordially to everyone. If you can make this serve for a letter to the PARISH NEWS for May, please do so, for I foresee that it will be difficult for me to get a letter to you in time. If I can, I will. I shall look forward with eagerness to letters. I have no doubt that later news from Philadelphia will be awaiting me when I arrive in Marseilles. The wise way will be to treat my absence as simply a longer summer holiday.

Remember me cordially to your household. Mrs. Keable is really one of the staff, as our Wednesday organist. Remember me to the night as well as the morning congregation, and give my greetings to the Wednesday worshippers.

Your friend and brother in the ministry,

CARL E. GRAMMER.

VILLA BELLE DONNE,
LA TRENCHE, ISERE, FRANCE.

April 24, 1921.

MY DEAR PARISHIONERS:

It is raining and the mountains have hidden their snowy summits. I had planned to spend this day attending in the morning mass and a Protestant service also, and a great socialist meeting in honor of Faures in the afternoon; but on going out, I found the train ran at such long intervals, and the walking was so poor that I went around the circle, for I cannot say around the corner, the streets curve so in La Trenche, and attended the Parish Church. I entered the church about 9.45 and found the curé ascending the pulpit. He first knelt and read a little litany. The soft, low, and general responses were like the rustling of the leaves of a wood. It shows that Protestantism has profoundly modified Roman Catholicism that these prayers were in French.

At the conclusion of the brief litany the members of the congregation, who were kneeling between the pulpit and the front door turned their chairs, on which they were kneeling, around, and used them for seats. The front part of the congregation sat in their chairs just as they were and turned their backs on the altar. The sermon was about twenty minutes long. The preacher was an exceedingly refined and intellectual-looking old man, small, ascetic in appearance, authoritative yet dramatic in manner. His elocution was fine, although at times he lowered his voice too much. Outside of the assisting ministers and the schoolboys, who sat inside of the chancel without vestments, there were about ten men present in a congregation of one hundred. Time does not count with these people. A little boy in a soiled surplice went around the whole church taking up the collection. The gifts were taken up in a copper receptacle with a hole in the top. Nothing but coins seemed to be inserted. After the sermon, while the preacher made his way to the chancel, the congregation stood. He was waylaid by a woman just as he was about to pass within the rails, and had quite a little talk, while all the congregation patiently waited. At the following mass I could not hear even the murmur of the celebrant's voice, he spoke so low. My feet became so cold from the stone floor that I decided to return to my pension and wait till some more propitious day for my round of vists to Grenoble's churches.

I like very much the lofty interiors of these French churches. Some of them are very old. One, St. Laurent, has in the crypt a tomb of the Merovingian era. Just think of such antiquity, of a Frenchman who lived under those kings who derived their title from Chlovis, the first French king, the convert of Bishop Remigues, to whom the Christian bishop gave the famous injunction, "Burn what thou hast adored, and adore what thou hast burnt." I sat the other day for fifteen minutes in this church and tried to realize the ages.

Of course, my most thrilling experience in the way of attending worship was in Algiers. Friday is the sacred day of the week with Musselmen, and I was fortunate enough to reach Algiers on that day. As I had never been in a Mohammedan country before and didn't care a snap for the French improvement in Algiers, compared to its monuments of Moorish civilization, I took a special guide and made my way back as quickly as possible to the Mohammedan quarter. I was fortunate to get into the mosque early enough to have a half hour of the service. Only men were allowed on the ground floor except a few venerable matrons who were permitted to crouch against the wall.

The mosque was full of worshippers who arrayed themselves in parallel lines, at right angles to the length of the mosque, and about ten feet apart. The portion of the mosque used by worshippers was covered with rugs, and before anyone stepped on a rug, he took off his shoes and washed his feet. There was a little lavatory for this purpose, behind screen-doors. The reader was intoning the Koran. The listeners at times rose, prostrated themselves, placed their faces against the rug, and then sat up again. Some performed these actions with remarkable fervor. Away back in the seventh century Mohammed began his religion with some great thoughts, viz., the oneness and sovereignty of God, and the brotherhood of all believers. He made these great truths immediately effective by announcing himself not as one of many prophets, but as the supreme prophet. "God is one and Mohammed is His prophet." This exclusive view has in the long run prevented his religion from growing. It is sad to think that the great purpose of the large congregation of devotees was not to gain knowledge of truth, or sweetness and purity of life, but to make themselves secure for the hereafter.

I attended two mosques, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon. The latter was very strict, indeed—no one was permitted to step on any portion of its floor unless shoeless, and no woman was permitted on its ground floor. Yet all this insistence on religious duties does not make itself felt in morals, for the guide-book informed the tourists that it was unsafe to go into the Kasba, the Moorish section of the city, without a guide. Mohammedanism is evidently a powerful religion, but it does not seem to confer peace or joy. The faces were sad; the old men looked centuries old. Never have I seen such aged looking people. Yet I doubt whether their longevity is really great. The children are set to work very early. In a rug factory I saw girls of 8 or 10 at work at the frames. The boys drive donkeys and help in manifold ways. It is sad to see the women with all their faces covered except their eyes. Never have I seen such nests of closely built houses, such narrow streets, often overarched completely, such tiny shops and such hungry humanity. I have seen something like it at Genoa and Naples, but nothing so oriental and so foreign to our civilization. Many of the doors had fine knockers and well carved archways or door-posts; often a hand would be painted above the door, with the forefinger pointing upward to ward off the evil eye. The French engineers have run water pipes most skillfully into these quarters and there are frequent hydrants, but there is a great scarcity of light and air. The windows, at least on the exterior, are few, and these iron-barred. The interior courts can only be little wells between the high walls, and I judge that disease must always be lurking in that section of the city.

Well, I must not spend this day of rest working at my desk, even if the occupation is as agreeable as writing to my dear friends at St. Stephen's. While I am here in France in the flesh, I am often back in Philadelphia in the spirit. Neither French Protestants with their restrained worship in which not even the Creed or the Lord's Prayer is said in unison, nor the Roman Catholics with their mere attendance at the mass know how delightful worship can be made with responsive readings, uplifting chants, heart-stirring hymns and prayers that make our requests and devotion known in simple and manly language to a Father whom we respect, and before whom we do not think it necessary to abase ourselves as slaves.

I have met an interesting Frenchman, who was formerly a Roman Catholic priest, a missionary in China. The system of Rome, both dogmatic and ecclesiastical, became intolerable and unbelievable, and he left his mission and abandoned the church. In time he married and became a professor of languages in Bulgaria. There the war found him. He made his way back to France and became a chaplain and useful interpreter in the French army. His knowledge of English qualified him to be an interpreter in our army also, where he met Bishop Brent and Bishop Perry, of Rhode Island, Dr. Freeman, Dr. McKim's successor in Washington, and others of our clergy. A prayer-book fell into his hands, and he has been marvelously attracted to the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States. It belongs to the United States and that means much. It signified to these people liberty, kindness, prosperity and progress. In Grenoble the Americans are far the most popular of all the foreigners. As Emerson said so well, America is another name for opportunity —especially to these people.

The French Protestants are cold, and I fear, proud. Their religion has in many cases become a matter of descent rather than of conviction. They look on themselves as the intellectual and moral aristocracy of France. They have not given a hearty welcome to such recruits from Rome. I took a long walk with this M. Thiebaud and his wife yesterday afternoon. Unlike many priests who lose faith, his opposition was not so much to the superstitions of Rome as to the blindness of that church. His old faith had been lost, not by the discoveries of the forgeries of the Isaderian Decietals and of the famous Donation of Constantine, nor by a critical examination of the errors of the Vulgate, nor by the study of the development of doctrine; the chief propulsive force was his grasp of the great doctrine of the Friends, that there is a Light that lighteneth every man that cometh into the world. He quotes over and over again the Latin of the great text, "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found." In the meditation of the required half hour of silence daily, he found God. He had a great illumination. In his experience neither priest nor sacrament nor the vast dogmatic system of Rome had part. Spirit met with spirit, and he felt, he knew, that he was a child of God, and that his Father was dealing with him. He has lent me a statement of another priest, a cultivated Alsatian, which shows that other priests are treading the same painful path of renunciation.

France seems to have no use for this cultivated man, and I wish that I could get a place for M. Thiebaud in some American school or college. He is a fine scholar in French, Latin and English. He is also wonderfully gifted with religious sensibility and moral courage.

I shall probably have more to say about him.

Your friend and rector,

CARL E. GRAMMER.

In the death of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Atmore, which occurred, after a very brief illness, on Wednesday evening, April 20th, the church lost one of its most faithful members. For over 35 years a Communicant of St. Stephen's, Mrs. Atmore was devoted to its services, zealous for its welfare, and generous in her response to its appeals. Of quiet activity and cheerful disposition she found much delight in her work in the Benevolent Society. Mrs. Atmore was greatly interested in the Home for the Homeless on Fitzwater Street, having been a manager of that home for twenty-four years, nineteen of which she acted as treasurer. Her highest qualities and those for which she will be most remembered sprang from a loving heart filled with a desire to "do good unto all." The Burial Service was read at the home of her son, Mr. Craig Atmore, and the interment took place at West Laurel Hill. Just as the body was about to be lowered into its last resting place the bells in the nearby tower chimed out the familiar strain:

"Lord through this hour
Be thou our Guide,
So by thy Power,
No foot shall slide."

And a brilliant shaft of light from the sinking sun broke through the cloudy sky as though to remind us of that "Golden Evening" which brightens in the West.

We shall think of her, as Robert Louis Stevenson wrote of "A Departed Friend:"

"She is not dead, this friend, not dead,
But in the path we mortals tread
Got some few trifling steps ahead,
And nearer to the end.
So that we, too, once past the bend
Shall meet again face to face,
This friend we fancy dead."

Report of the Benevolent Society.

The Benevolent Society opened the first Wednesday in November with a good attendance which continued during the winter. These women come in bad weather as well as good, and show the same earnest attention to their work that they have always done. We have finished in the last six months 5,252 articles.

Materials were so high and the hospitals are so in need of money they have sent us much less than usual, so we have bought materials and made bungalow dresses, children's dresses, aprons of all kinds, towels, and housecloths, selling them at almost the cost of the material, selling them as much as we could to people who needed to get them at a low rate, and our money coming back to us so that it is all spent in paying the women who do the sewing.

Two of our members have gone to their rest, Mrs. Samuel H. Austin, after a long illness, borne with great fortitude. When she was not well enough to come to us, she asked to have material sent to her and returned beautifully cut out garments.

Mrs. Robert E. Atmore left us we thought well. She had been in the Society many years, always showing the deepest interest, accomplishing so much in her quiet, peaceful way. Two of our most lovely members have gone from us and will be deeply missed.

As we grow older the other side seems very near, and we wonder whether we will be allowed to meet them again and all do better work together there.

Good accounts come from our President, Mrs. Grammer and we hope to have her with us when we open next November.

I was very much touched by a lovely little address being made to me at our last meeting, when I was presented by the Society with two beautiful garden aprons, and I am glad to express my gratitude in my report.

We are all happier if we have a hobby and mine is my garden.

Respectfully submitted,

CORNELIA L. EWING,
Vice-President.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

The usual seven meetings of St. Stephen's Auxiliary have been held, beginning with the communion service preceding the first meeting in October. Report was made of the acknowledgment of the gift of a motor boat to Rev. and Mrs. B. L. Ancell, of Yangchow, China, toward the purchase of which St. Stephen's Auxiliary had contributed twenty-five dollars.

Report was also made of the result of the garden party at Wyck in June last, at which fair St. Stephen's had a table in conjunction with other parishes, when the thousand dollars made were given in amounts of five hundred dollars respectively to the Free Church of St. John and All Souls' Church for the Deaf.

A former pupil of the Burd School, now married and living in Cuba, visited the Auxiliary at this meeting and made a contribution to the treasury, and the money was sent to Miss Ashhurst's School in Guantanamo, Cuba, thus being bread cast upon the waters.

Mention should be made of the stimulus given St. Stephen's branch of the Church Periodical Club through having heard Mrs. A. F. Kempton, President of that Club in the diocese, address the Auxiliary at the November meeting.

Mrs. Charles R. Pancoast, Secretary of the Church Service League, explained the workings of the League and how it extends beyond the parish to the community, diocese, nation and the world, embracing every opportunity for service.

Alaska was the subject discussed at the January meeting by Miss Alice Wright, who brought many native-made articles to illustrate her talk about work among the Indians and the Mission at Neuana, and the sum of twenty-five dollars was given toward its support.

Miss Riddell, of Kumamoto, Japan, was the speaker at the meeting in February, and enlisted the sympathy of all who heard her. Her suggestion that St. Stephen's Auxiliary should permanently support the Leper Hospital on St. Stephen's Day instead of providing for it annually on that date, is being acted upon, and the necessary amount of $250 lacks but $41 to complete the fund. This insures the payment of all expenses of the hospital on St. Stephen's Day in perpetuity, a pleasant thought to dwell upon in connection with the afflicted patients for whom the prayers of St. Stephen's Auxiliary are offered at the Christmas season, and the Auxiliary is remembered in the same way at that time in Japan.

In March the delegates gave full reports covering two months, showing that all pledges had been paid, and the announcement that future meetings of the Pennsylvania Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary would be held in the new Church House, 202 South Nineteenth Street, was received with great satisfaction.

On April 21st, Mrs. John Thompson Spencer, a former parishioner, added interest to the project of the Leper Hospital fund by telling of her visit to that hospital when recently in Japan, and emphasized the esteem with which Miss Riddell is regarded by the Japanese Government for her philanthropic work for the lepers. Following the meeting a sale of food and fancy articles was held for the benefit of the Supply Bureau of the Diocese, and the room never looked more attractive, set with tea tables under the care of Mrs. Lucas and Miss Van Dusen. Business was brisk at first in the morning, but only four members of the parish came for afternoon tea, a great disappointment to the committee who spent the day in the Parish House. However, the amount of sixty dollars was realized as the result of the sale and sent to the Supply Bureau, to represent St. Stephen's participation in the new system organized.

In addition to such active work the delegates have attended many meetings in the diocese, all day conferences at St. Stephen's and Holy Trinity, Educational Day, Bishop Brick's Fund presentation, United Thank Offering services and other devotional meetings. There has been an average attendance of twenty-four members with the addition of three new members and four lost by death.

A Mission Study Class was held during Lent with Mrs. W. Horner Smith as leader, the text-book used being the Survey, and at the Diocesan Session of all Mission Study Classes Mrs. Clemens presented the offering from St. Stephen's Class of thirty-five dollars for the Bishop Rowe Foundation for work in Alaska.

As soon as one phase of work is finished another is taken up, and next month interest and support by attendance are asked at the Garden Party to be given at Wyck, corner Germantown Avenue and Walnut Lane, on Thursday, June 9th, from 2 until 8 o'clock.

St. Stephen's will have a table for fancy and domestic articles at this fair in co-operation with several other parishes, and tickets are to be sold at 25 cents, which includes admission to the rose-garden. The object is to raise one thousand dollars as was done last year, and the beneficiary will be Emmanuel Church to help rebuild this, the oldest church in Kensington, now falling to pieces.

After this the members of the Auxiliary will probably separate for the summer, with the hope of a reunion in the autumn with renewed energy and interest in the work each one is called upon to do on earth for the extension of Christ's Kingdom.

May St. Stephen's continue constant in well-doing, dear old St. Stephen's, beautiful new St. Stephen's.

LAURA BELL,
President, Woman's Auxiliary,
of St. Stephen's.

The last meeting of the Auxiliary for this season was held on April 21st, with twenty-four members present.

Our Treasurer reported the endowment fund we are trying to raise for Miss Riddell's Leper Hospital has grown to $153.00.

Miss Farrell announced the receipt of a check for $250.00 for a day's endowment from a friend in Camden to whom Miss Farrell had told the story of Miss Riddell and her work.

Miss Magee has collected $352.00 for the United Offering. This came from eighty-eight contributors.

Mrs. Clemens reported over two thousand members enrolled this year in Mission Study Classes in the Diocese.

Miss Roberts received $5.00 from the Girls' Friendly for books for St. Paul's College, Tokio. She read a letter acknowledging books and magazines that she had sent to the Recreation Hut at Camp Dix.

Mrs. Higham reported having given $10.00 from St. Stephen's toward a fund to help clear the debt on an industrial school for colored students at Ford Valley, Georgia.

Miss Washington has collected among her friends, nine victrola records to send the American boy in the leper hospital.

Miss Campbell has received $43.50 towards the Emery Fund. So our work goes on in every field.

Mrs. John T. Spencer was our speaker for the day. She has visited Miss Riddell's hospital and came to tell us of the wonderful influence Miss Riddell has been, and is now, in Japan in changing the attitude of the country towards these afflicted lepers.

Our annual election was conducted by Mr. Keable. The incumbent officers were re-elected except our Vice-President. Mrs. McKeehan sent in her resignation on account of illness, and Mrs. Frank H. Whiting was elected to fill her place.

United Thank Offering.

The seventeenth annual service of the women of the Diocese of Pennsylvania and the presentation of the United Thank Offering was held on April 28th, at 10.30, in the Chapel of the Mediator. The Rev. Philip Endicott Osgood in his sermon briefly spoke upon the unitedness, the power of thankful giving, the sacramental offering of self, and the real value of each gift being represented only by the relatedness of the motive behind it.

Bishop Rhinelander was the celebrant at the communion service which followed. After the recessional hymn, the total of the second presentation of the United Thank Offering for this triennium was announced as being $11,-112.25.

Immediately after the service a meeting for the parish treasurers was held in the Parish House, with Mrs. John Hollingsworth, Diocesan Treasurer, in the chair. Mrs. Hollingsworth, in her brief address, stated that the total for the two years of this triennium was $32,516.45, but added that the presentation of last year was $21,404.20, which included a few large individual thank offerings. She further emphasized three points: First, the missionary ideal, the whole church for the love of God, working for the salvation of the whole world. Second, the goal of $125,000 for the total of this triennium, which has a large balance for Pennsylvania, to accomplish in this and next year. Third, more individual givers, and an honor roll parish, where every communicant would make some offering, large or small, and make it with prayerful heart.

St. Stephen's offering was $400 and represented 88 subscribers. Can we not in the year to come, put our beloved St. Stephen's on the honor roll Parish? Cannot every woman communicant be represented in this United Thank Offering?

Very truly yours,

ANNA J. MAGEE,
Treasurer.

Missionary Box.

The Missionary Box Committee was late in beginning its work this year on account of reorganization and the death of its much-beloved chairman, Mrs. Samuel H. Austin. A new chairman was appointed by Dr. Grammer, also new members on the committee. Interesting and grateful letters have been received from recipients of the boxes.

Kumamyto, Japan.

Through the interest aroused in Miss Riddell's Hospital for Lepers in Kumamyto, Japan, by a member of St. Stephen's Auxiliary Mrs. Caleb J. Brinton, Jr., has endowed a day, March 16th, in memory of her husband. The interest of this amount will feed the patients at the hospital on that date (yearly), when Miss Riddell reminds them of the donor and of the one in whose memory the gift has been made.

St. Stephen's hopes very soon to complete the amount needed to endow "St. Stephen's Day."

Altar Society.

The Altar Society presents its 27th Annual Report.

The Superintendent reports the usual routine work of the committees and that during the past year fifteen purificators and four stole collars were made for St. Stephen's.

The Misses Eisenbrey presented a gift of hand-made lace for the Altar and Credence Table, and Miss Swift presented a gift of fine linen, of which eight stole collars were made by Miss Maulsby.

St. Stephen's Aid Society.

It is delightful to be able to report a renewed interest in the activities of this organization and a regular attendance during this Lenten season exceeding that of previous years.

The death of Mrs. Austin and of Mrs. Atmore, two of the original members of the Society, will be deeply felt, as the success of our work in the past has been largely due to their active interest and generosity, their unsolicited gifts of money and garments being received each year long in advance of our working season.

Miss Lewis reports much distress among her people owing to the cessation of employment in factories and mills. It is, therefore, a satisfaction to know we have left a well filled closet to help her in comforting and alleviating many cases of want and distress.

Two pieces of outing flannel were presented to the Society; also gifts of money. One hundred and thirty garments and 50 miscellaneous articles were made.

The Sunday School.

The past year in the Sunday School has been very encouraging. While we have lost several teachers we have found others to take their places and thus kept our teaching force in good shape. These winter months have brought us in 19 new scholars and in our competitive plan for a "better and a bigger" school we hope, under the present cheerful outlook, to close the winter sessions July 1st with an enrollment of 200 scholars, teachers and officers.

Our school never closes but has a session every Sunday morning, summer and winter. In the summer we always had two sessions, the extra one being every Sunday afternoon at the farm, which we miss so much. Our winter session closes with an outing, which last year was at Willow Grove and more than successful. We are looking forward to an equally good time on our excursion the last of the coming June.

Our entertainments and social features have taken place with the accustomed joy. We have been represented always at the Sunday School institutes and conventions. We were made most happy at the recent missionary offering meeting of the Diocese at Holy Trinity by exceeding our last year's Lenten gifts to the Mission Cause.

Our Easter carol service and procession into the church, the Sunday morning after Easter, proved our continued interest, loyalty and activity; but the Confirmation service is the one that shows the fruition of Sunday School work at its best. This spring when the Bishop came our teachers were made most happy by having thirteen of those who were confirmed, from the school, thus again showing how the church should value this never-failing well-spring which brings into its communion and membership every year our boys and girls, keeping it ever young with their buoyant aspirations after the Christ ideals.

Our Mother's Day celebration of May 8th, should have had out every member of the church to have witnessed the talent and spontaneous co-operation of those who took part in the dialogue and tableaux. Not forgetting the rendering of those sweet hymns by Miss Grace Luffbarry, nor the delivery of the lines by the princes and young girls; none of us will soon forget the fine picture of "Mother and Child," their exquisite posing in the scene by Mrs. John Mearns and her little daughter Virginia. So with pageantry and play we are planning to develop the Christian character in our schools as well as by appropriate lessons from the Sacred Scriptures each Sunday.

On Sunday morning, June 12th, "Children's Day," the Primary Department, under the efficient leadership of Miss M. Corrigan, assisted by her faithful teachers, will occupy the main school platform, with songs, recitations and tableaux. So come all who will and be happy with us. We are very grateful to all our friends of the church for their financial assistance. But, besides a few new teachers, will you kindly assist us in adding new scholars to our membership? We can accommodate all ages, from babies on Miss Sinclair's Cradle Roll and the little ones in the Primary Department, to the adults in Mr. Klink's Bible Class.

So again we say, come join us or send some one and help make our school grow "Better and Bigger."

Faithfully,

GEORGE H. STREAKER,
Superintendent.

The Girls' Friendly Society.

Another year has passed in the history of St. Stephen's Branch of the Girls' Friendly Society, a year filled with both work and pleasure.

The Branch meetings are held every Monday evening from the first of October until the end of May.

Our speakers this season have been: Mrs. Edward Parker who, on the evening before the election when women first exercised the right of franchise, explained "The Marking of the Ballot;" Miss Betson, who told of the proposed G. F. S. Rest Room it is hoped to have in Washington in memory of our first national president, Mrs. Thomas Roberts; Miss Anne Earle, who gave a beautifully illustrated lecture on Norway.

At Christmas the Branch made and sent:

15 Hand knitted sweaters.
21 Hand knitted caps.
2 Hand knitted scarfs.

to the French orphans.

55 Large well filled stockings.
9 dressed dolls.
55 Children's books.
107 toys and games.

to the Philadelphia Hospital.

The Social Service Worker there tells us that nothing that comes to the hospital throughout the year gives such joy, not only to the children but also to the nurses and orderlies, as these stockings sent by St. Stephen's Branch.

In response to appeals received the Branch has sent:

$105.00 to the Herbert Hoover Child Feeding Fund.
5.00 to the Chinese Famine Fund.
75.00 for repairs to the G. F. S. Lodge.
5.00 to St. Andrews, Porto Rico.
10.00 to The Church Hill Setterlee Settlement Hospital at Columbia, S. C.
60 Partly worn garments.
10 Pairs partly worn shoes.
27 New garments.
10 Hats.

to the P. E. City Mission.

On February 14th the Rev. Phillips E. Osgood conducted our Lenten service and gave a very interesting and helpful address.

The Lenten sewing (57 garments) was sent this year to the West Blue Ridge Mission, Jancey, Va., and The House of the Holy Child, Philadelphia.

The Married Branch Helpers met on Thursday afternoons during Lent and made 42 garments for The Home for the Homeless.

It was a very real help to the Branch Secretary to have these garments cut and parceled by the Pennsylvania Diocesan Supply Bureau.

Successful classes have been carried on throughout the season in millinery, elocution and knitting, and the ever popular suppers have been prepared and served by some of our faithful members.

Our "Special Effort," that is the money worked for by the members to carry on the mission and charitable work of the Branch, amounted this year to $388.10 and has been given to the following objects:

Episcopal Hospital (for sheets and pillow cases)	$25 00
Sister Elizabeth's Work in England	25 00
Serbian Educational Work	25 00
St. Paul's College Library, Tokyo	5 00
Little House of Saint Panteleon for support of a French orphan	36 50
Christ School—Arden North Carolina	25 00
Seaman's Church Institute (Emergency Fund)	25 00
Church Mission of Help	15 00
Children's Country Week Association	10 00
Cape May Holiday House	10 00
Memorial Flowers (Miss Wilkins)	2 00
Materials for Lenten Sewing	60 00
Beneficial Fund	50 00
Held for Missions for next year	25 00
Mr. Keable—to be used at his discretion...	34 60
Birthday present for children of a former member	5 00
Holy Comforter, Girls' Friendly Branch	10 00
	$388 10

The Branch is an annual contributor to the Travelers' Aid Society and this year has become a member of the Consumers' League.

During the war our social evenings were almost entirely given up, but this past winter we have had a number of delightful parties of various kinds.

A children's party, when the members and associates came dressed as little girls and boys, will long be remembered as an evening of almost continuous laughter and pure fun, while moving pictures (given for the first time in the history of the Branch), charades, and one-act plays with some really beautiful aesthetic dancing by the children from the Southwark Neighborhood house, furnished entertainment and pleasure on other evenings.

Our own excellent elocution class provided the Christmas, and will provide the closing night entertainment.

The G. F. S. as a society, stands for high ideals of womanhood, it believes that life should be clean and joyous, reflecting our recognition of God our Father and certainly there never was a time when Christian girls and women were more needed to help emphasize Christian standards.

GRACE V. D. LUCAS,
Branch Secretary.

Members of the Girls' Friendly Elocution Class, assisted by a few of the boys, will give two plays, "Jack O'Hearts" and "Tickets, Please," on Thursday evening, May 26th, at 8.15. Burd School.

The event of paramount interest during the past year and in fact the greatest event in the history of the Burd School since its foundation in 1856 has been the sale of the old property and the removal of the school to its new premises, 4226 Baltimore Avenue. This removal was accomplished at a minimum inconvenience owing to the admirable management of our Superintendent and a formal opening of the new home was held on Saturday, December 11th. It is natural there should have been much sentimental regret and reluctance felt in leaving the old home, but when the comfort of the beautiful new premises with its modern appliances is contrasted with the remembered discomfort and often very cold rooms of the old house and generally lukewarm food during the winter months, the change is altogether a delightful one for the inmates of the school. Within a week of the removal two cases of diphtheria developed, due, without doubt, to the general overhauling and inspection of old dolls and toys. As our new premises are within city limits these cases were sent immediately to the Municipal Hospital, thus rendering a general quarantine of the school unnecessary. The children received excellent care, one child being held at the hospital for four months before a negative culture could be obtained. The only other case of serious illness was one of pneumonia. Through the kindness of Dr. Lewis the child was sent to the Woman's West Philadelphia Hospital, where she secured exceptional attention, being assigned a private room during the first two weeks of her illness and afterwards transferred to the ward for two weeks' convalescence, for which the hospital refused to make any charge.

As all dolls and toys were destroyed owing to the fear of further contagion, Dr. Grammer made an appeal to the congregation to supply the want which this destruction entailed and within a short time our little girls were once again happily mothering their dollies. Apart from these three serious cases of illness, the health of the children has been excellent and the doctor in charge considers there has been a decided improvement in their general condition during the past year.

On Saturday, April 30th, Miss Tappan extended an invitation to "Tea" to the teachers of the various schools attended by the Burd girls. It was gratifying to find these teachers so interested and the many flattering allusions to the general deportment of our girls was an indirect tribute to the influence maintained by our Superintendent.

Our Board of Visitors find their duties of inspection very pleasant as the standard of work demanded and maintained is of high excellence.

During the past year four girls have left the school and four have been admitted; at present the school has forty members.

The Burd School is a real home in every sense of the word as the happy faces and merry voices which meet one at all times amply testify.

Respectfully submitted,
EMILY K. CAMPBELL,
Chairman.

Report of the Mothers' Meeting.

The Mothers' Meeting of St. Stephen's Church for the season of 1920-21 opened on Thursday, November 4, 1920, and closed on April 28, 1921.

The average attendance has been 55. We have lost five members by death and added 13 new names to our roll.

Though the Mothers' Meeting suffered a serious loss in the death of Mrs. Taylor on January 6th, the members have continued to show their loyalty to the organization by their interested attendance at the meetings.

The usual fair was held on December 2nd, netting $114, which the members have voted to go towards a rug for the vestry room.

Kind friends have furnished entertainment of various descriptions for many evenings.

The season ended with a delightful program of music and readings, with ice cream and cake instead of the tea and cake served at the other meetings.

The increased attendance and the addition to the roll of a number of young women encourages us to believe that the Mothers' Meeting has a real place in the activities of St. Stephen's Church.

Respectfully submitted,
B. M. HARPER,
President.

Parish Visitor's Report.

On account of the mild winter we have had there has been less suffering from lack of heat, and less insistent begging for coal. But as a balance, there has been much sickness and more deprivations, more enforced idleness and more discontent.

Little babies come uninvited into such homes where there is no work for the fathers and many children, too young to do anything toward the support of the family except selling the evening papers; yet the babies come. Other mouths to feed, other little feet to be shod. In a dismal court without sunshine, without much light, two little babies arrived, and demanded everything babies should have as their right. Yet there was almost nothing for either. But through the goodness of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Stephen's whose members made layettes for newcomers through the Lenten season, we have been able to have these little ones fully clothed and made comfortable.

Our Garment Society is helpful, and Miss Lammot, the treasurer, is always ready to buy new garments that are very much needed and that we could not get otherwise.

Mrs. Addinell Hewson made us a present of two tons of coal and some bundles of extra good clothing for which there was great need. Mrs. Brunner sent us a check, part of which bought a ton of coal, and the rest was used for a person in great need.

The Misses McAllister and Mrs. Joseph Clayton gave some warm clothing which was thankfully received.

Miss Gebhart's annual memorial has been given to us regularly for years. We spent it for the families where the fathers were out of work. On Thanksgiving Day seven families were remembered by receiving groceries or some other necessity.

On Sunday before Thanksgiving Mr. Carrigan brought to me a gentleman, a stranger, who asked for the name of a family to whom I would like a Thanksgiving dinner sent. The woman I selected for the gift received it and wrote me as follows:

"I am writing to tell you that I received the box you gave my name for, and I just tell you it was the most wonderful box I ever received in all my life. It certainly was up to date in every way; nothing lacking, even to a turkey. Just imagine, a great big one at that, and a lot of odd things. I can't think of them all. I am so thankful I don't know how to say it, only this, I am sure that God put it in both your hearts to think of me. Please do thank the Gentleman that gave it to me."

This woman has one daughter subject to epilepsy and now although grown she is not able to work. Another daughter, twenty-six years old, works very well for a while, then stops and won't work until she takes a notion again. Of course, she is not well balanced. The mother is obliged to take care of them. This she does by scrubbing offices.

Many, many letters of thanks have been received for the bountiful baskets that were sent out on Christmas. A woman writes: "Christmas week I suffered more than I can tell with asthma. Well, one afternoon I felt worse than ever, so in desperation I brought out the Christmas box of candy which was in the basket. A few pieces of candy remained and I gave it to my little boy to keep him quiet. The paper was in the box and after a while he was saying to himself, 'Good-bye, old Christmas, here you go in the fire, but we can be thankful, Christmas, you will come again.'"

Last summer St. Stephen's Farm was very much missed; nevertheless, we had a very happy time with several picnics which all enjoyed, for we included the mothers, sisters and brothers of the children. A number of our older women were sent to the Mercer House, Atlantic City, for two weeks. They all had, as one of them expressed it, "an ideal time."

One of our women has been fortunate enough to get in the "Indigent Widows and Single Women's Home," 3615 Chestnut Street. She had saved a good part of the money necessary, and Dr. Grammer made up the balance. Another of our women who has just been received in the same home, is a trained nurse. She fell and broke her hip many years ago and has had to go on crutches ever since. Some of her wealthy patients and some friends in St. Stephen's made up the $400 needed to get in the home.

Some time ago we placed three little brothers in the Lincoln Home. The mother, a young widow, without means of support, except what she earned, was thus left with but one child to look after. The boys had been in the home only a few months when the mother took it into her head she could support them herself. Notwithstanding all Dr. Grammer and the rest of us could say to the contrary, she persisted in taking the boys home. I have always taken a deep interest in the mother, as I taught her in the Parish School. After a time she found she had made a mistake in trying to support and look after the boys. I certainly thought they would go to destruction, but we often find that what we think is the worst thing that could happen turns out for the very best, as in this case. The boys names were put on the list for admission to Girard College. When their turn came around they passed the examination and were admitted. One of their teachers, Miss Dare, is a member of St. Stephen's Church and reports they are doing well. The third little boy will be admitted to Girard College, we hope, when old enough.

As I look back over the past year I am grateful to Mr. Keable for the great interest he has always taken in the work. We have had problems which it was really necessary for him to decide—one court case, and several where the fathers were out of work, rent overdue and the constable expected if some help was not forthcoming.

On Wednesday morning, just before the service, a letter was handed to Mr. Keable from one of our poor families, all the members out of work, asking for the loan of money to pay rent as the constable was expected in less than a half hour. We hardly knew what to do, as we do not make a practice of doing this, but in this case, we took the chance. About three weeks ago on Sunday morning, Mr. Keable had an envelope handed to him with the whole of the rent, gratefully returned. That made us both very happy, as we felt we had not been deceived.

Each week brings its round of duties; visiting the hospitals, the well and the sick at home, distributing clothing and other necessities to those in need.

Respectfully submitted,
KATE H. LEWIS.

The garments which we took to St. Christopher's Hospital last spring were so much appreciated that it has been a pleasure to work again for the same cause, and during the past winter we have made and hope to take to the hospital early in June the following articles:

10 petticoats.
11 bibs.
5 dresses.
12 napkins.
3 kimonos.
2 washrags.
2 large postal card albums, filled.

Church Periodical Club.

The past year has been a busy one and the work has grown steadily, but surely, all the time. More of our people are coming to know the purpose and aim of the work. It is seldom that a week passes without an offer to help along the good cause.

Besides the large number of current periodicals now being sent regularly by our faithful members, many books and magazines have gone out from the Parish House.

Money was collected and packages of Christmas cheer sent to those who otherwise might have had nothing to brighten their holiday season.

Four boxes, three of them filled with new and fresh toys and games for children, and one with warm, knitted articles for the grown folks, were sent to St. James' Indian Mission, at Cannon Ball, North Dakota.

Another package of toys and games went to the Rev. Mr. Beer, at Santo Domingo. All were most gratefully received.

Miss Elliott, in charge of the Mission at Cannon Ball, said in her letter to us: "Just imagine my joy when I found that we were to receive these gifts from St. Stephen's. It means that our children will have the happiest Christmas they have ever had and I can hardly wait for Christmas to come."

Fourteen bright and clean children's story books, contributed by a generous church member, were mailed to St. Agnes Settlement House in Kensington.

Deaconess Morris, in acknowledging the gift said: "We have, indeed, cause to be grateful to you. They are precisely the kind of books of which we are in such great need."

Books and magazines have been sent for the use of the soldiers at Camp Dix, N. J.

A letter of thanks from Chaplain Hill, Headquarters 26th Infantry, says that "the Regimental Recreation Hut serves over 1,500 men. They especially enjoy story magazines, and, on account of the long distance from communities large enough to look after the 11,000 men of our camp, the huts are a very important and necessary part of our work. I hope you will find it possible to interest others in this good work."

Bundles of magazines are being sent through Captain B. B. Dorry, Room 427, Post Office Building, to the seamen employed on lightships and in lighthouses along our coast.

Packages of bright, cheery magazines are taken to the sick and convalescent in the hospitals and homes throughout the city.

Ten dollars was contributed towards the purchase of books for the library of St. Paul's College, Tokyo, Japan.

Half of this amount was very generously given by the members of our Girls' Friendly Society.

Quite recently a box containing 37 good novels was sent as St. Stephen's gift to a branch of the Seamen's Institute Library, conducted by St. Andrew's Church, at Tampa, Florida.

Mr. Cavanaugh, on receiving it, wrote: "Yours is one of the most complete libraries sent here."

Thus through its reading matter the Church Periodical Club offers an opportunity to reduce ignorance, to lighten suffering and to express Christian friendliness, touching the lives of many thousands every year and reaching to all parts of the world.

The Vacation Bible School held at St. Stephen's Church in the summer of 1920, was the eighth consecutive successful season.

The school opened Monday, June 28th, with a good attendance. It was in session six weeks, closing August 6th. Total enrollment 115; daily average attendance, 55.

Of the children enrolled, 39 were Protestants, 48 Catholics and 28 were Jewish. They were between 1 and 14 years of age. Americans, Greeks, Hebrews, Hungarians, Lithuanians, Polish, Italians and Russians were the nationalities represented.

The usual staff of teachers, which were the manual training and kindergarten teachers, together with the principal, were in charge of the school.

Interest was added to the school when the boys and girls tried to see who could bring in the greatest number of new children. The spirit of rivalry was quite keen.

During the early years of the history of the Bible School held here, it was necessary to resort to unique ways of introducing the school to the children, who were found to be numerous in our nearby courts and narrow streets. Announcements were made in a nearby public school. Moving picture places advertised the school. Cards were printed and given to children as they were passing on the streets. Every summer it was also necessary for the principal to spend a few hours each day after the school closed, looking along the "highways and byways" for children, so as to tell them about the school. Now in recent years these tactics do not need to be resorted to. The children in this vicinity know of the school and dearly love it. They eagerly tell other children about it. Announcements are sent out to the children a few days before the school opens and upon opening day, one wonders if the school has ever been closed, owing to the number present. The children never forget the school, and the good the school has done for them. Every summer a child or two returns as a visitor. They return as visitors as now they are unable to attend the school because they have either moved out of the city or else are working.

A daily order of exercises has been outlined, to avoid confusion, as well as to secure the proper amount of change and variety for the children. The order of exercises in the Bible School was as follows: Nine-fifteen to 9.30, doors open and registration. Devotional exercises were then held, after which a few minutes were given to "Habit Talks." Just before these "Habit Talks" are given the kindergarten children go out to their room where they remain until closing time. The music period followed the "Habit Talks." The moral and spiritual purpose of the school is kept in view through the music activity. The Bible period came next in order. The supreme purpose of the school is to develop clean Christlike characters in boys and girls. Thus the daily Bible lesson is not to furnish dogmatic or sectarian teaching, but elementary Christian instruction that can be applied to the daily life of the young, who are exposed to the temptations of the streets.

At the end of six weeks one is quite impressed with the number of Bible stories the children remembered and also the number of Bible verses they memorized. The number of songs and hymns that they remembered is also amazing. The manual period followed the Bible period. In this time, the object is not only to make things but to build character. Slurring over mistakes in basket or bead work, in fact any work at all that they are engaged in, is steadily discouraged. The children are trained to respect material that does not belong to them. Unselfishness is developed in them by inducing them to work for the pleasure and comfort of the sick and crippled.

At 11.25 and 11.30 closing exercises are conducted. These consist of the salute to the flag, the singing of "America" and the children's benediction being said or sung.

Owing to the advance in prices the total cost of the school, including salaries and materials, was $150.

There is no doubt that the Vacation Bible School has been proven a success. Not long ago, at a mass meeting of Sunday Schools conducted at the Academy of Music, it there was pointed out the value of a Vacation Bible School. It is needless to say that our school at St. Stephen's has made a deep impression upon the children.

Preparations for the coming season have already been started. The children also are eagerly looking forward to the re-opening of the school and have already been inquiring about it.

The school will open this year on Monday, June 27th, and will close on Friday, August 5th.

FREDERICK B. KEABLE, Treasurer.

The Convocation of North Philadelphia.

Tuesday, May 10th, was a busy day at St. Stephen's, as the Woman's Aid of the Convocation held a meeting at 3.30 o'clock in the Parish House. The Convocation assembled at 5.00 in the church, at 6.30 dinner was served in the Sunday School building to 117 clergy and delegates, and as the Psalmist says, "Great was the company of the preachers."

The newly-elected Dean, Rev. Henry M. Medary, presided, and addresses were made by Bishop Hulse, of Cuba; Rev. Gilbert Pember, Rev. Dr. Ferrant, Rev. Frederick B. Keable and Miss Laura Bell, President of the Woman's Aid. A feeling of good fellowship prevailed.

The "Amen."

One of the most beautiful and inspiring parts of the musical service at St. Stephen's Church on Sunday mornings is the choir's rendering of Stainer's "Seven Fold Amen." It is given at the close of the morning prayers before the sermon.

The first chords are in slow reverent tone as of the congregation in unison with the voice of the clergyman in the closing prayer.

Then as minister and people remain on bended knees the organ notes swell in force and grandeur, and, in the words of Revelation, as "The voice of a great multitude saying 'Amen, blessing and glory and wisdom and power be unto our God for ever and ever.'"

It seems as if the whole world must be assembled in worship—one vast congregation united in prayer and praise and the "Amen" ascending from earth to the Everlasting Gates. The repeated notes in lower, tender cadence reverberate as an echo that enters the heart of each listener.

To one as the seven "Amens" of Revelations and to another as the "Amens" to the Seven Words of the Cross.

CARL E. GRAMMER, Treasurer, Pro-tem.

Rector's Letter.

MY DEAR PARISHIONERS:

I cannot tell you how pleasant it is to take my pen in hand and write these words. I feel as if I had, indeed, come back to health when I resume my old tasks. The preparation of a sermon in such a means of grace that it was as if I had been deprived of one of the chief aids to a religious life in my exclusion from the pulpit for so many months. It is good to be back; it is good to take up the old responsibilities; it is good to become vocal once more and deliver the message that God has taught me; it is good to meet once more my dear friends and parishioners, to be back at my post; it was good to visit Europe, but it is better to be home.

I have spoken at a Sunday morning sermon in the church of my appreciation of Mr. Keable's work at St. Stephen's, and of my affection for him. We were friends as well as coworkers, and I shall always be grateful for the affectionate welcome that he gave me not long before he died. It was my privilege to remain beside him till he had ceased to recognize anyone. All of us deeply sympathize with Mrs. Keable in her great loss, and with Mr. Keable's aged mother who, in spite of her 86 years, came on to his funeral. May God support and comfort them. I print below a memorial notice of Mr. Keable, and also a letter from Mrs. Keable. I have asked Mrs. Keable to continue to be our organist on Wednesdays and at the Lenten Services. I shall be content to rely on temporary aid for a season. Mr. Boyd has kindly consented to take care of the envelope system till January first.

Our parish is surely in need of a larger building for its parochial activities. During the summer the question was under consideration of building, or renting, a Community House under the care of St. Stephen's. A promising plan is now under consideration. Any announcement would be premature at this time, but matters have gone so far that the committee is at work distributing bags to hold pennies, and a bazaar or fair will be held on December 8th at the Bellevue-Stratford. An official announcement and list of the heads of the committees is published elsewhere in this issue. Mrs. Howard Reifsnyder is the chairman.

Our church can only prosper and render useful service by planning large things. There is no great need for the usual style of church and parish house on Tenth Street near Market. What is needed is a church that addresses itself not merely to parochial problems, but that concerns itself with the problems of the city and nation (urbi et orbi); that renders a large service to the community, and seeks to meet men's needs, irrespective of their creeds. We want a parish house that will also be a community house, that will not only shelter and provide room for our parish activities, but also enable us to reach the boys in the streets, the girls in the shops, and if possible the students, medical and pharmaceutical, the clerks and toilers of all sorts who are all around us in their boarding-houses. It is a great task, but it is also a great opportunity.

I am obliged to ask for the annual contributions to the Church Work Fund. This fund provides me with the services of a secretary, with stationery for the office, and finances the PARISH NEWS, which has become much more expensive, with the increased cost of printing, but is none the less an essential medium of communication. It also enables me to move freely in many ways in helping in parish activities. Some faithful and most generous subscribers have passed away, and I hope that the members of the church will not overlook this appeal. I have already received $100 from Mr. Reifsnyder, $50 from Mr. Barton, and $10 from Mrs. Lucas. These acknowledgments are printed in the PARISH NEWS, as the only businesslike way of acknowledging such gifts. A mere private note is nothing. No one could check up my accounts and show that all my receipts are properly accounted for, unless there was some method of proving that all contributions were duly recorded. We accomplish this by publishing an acknowledgment of all such contributions.

I have laid down the following rules for the Verger, which will be posted on the Parish House door: This Parish House will be open from 9.30 to 1, and from 3 to 5. It will also be open in the evenings for the regular meetings.

It is useless to 'phone to the church before 9.30 or between 1 and 3. The doors of the church will be opened fifteen minutes before all services. Arrangements for special services should be made with the Rector, who will be in the vestry from 11 to 12.30. The telephone has been set up again at the rectory. The number is Filbert 3939.

I must not close without a tribute of affection and gratitude to the members who have gone to their rest since I left. Mrs. Atmore was a wonderful woman, so quiet, so wise and so helpful. She will be greatly missed in the Benevolent. A generous helper of good causes and a truly Christian character. Mrs. Vanderslice was the head of our King's Daughters, and for many years a teacher in the Sunday School. She also gave much time to the Shoe Fund. We shall feel the loss of her sympathetic spirit. She was the centre of quite a band. Mrs. O'Donnel was a brave and staunch mother who brought up successfully a large family. Her infirmities had long prevented her from attending church.

In some cases death is unmistakably a good angel. This was true in the case of Mrs. Rosanna Lemley, one of the oldest members of our Mothers' Meeting, and Mr. Samuel Moore, Jr. Mr. Moore was one of my first friends in the parish; a man of unusual gifts for friendship and social fellowship. He suffered much, but he was never embittered by his pains, and only grew ever more and more trustful and resigned to tread his painful way to his Father's house. Mr. Trinkle was a helper of our church, who for years contributed most generously in memory of his wife. Miss Dutilh was one of the oldest of our members. She has left St. Stephen's $1,000. She was another example of the refining and uplifting power of suffering rightly endured.

We are the poorer for the loss of these friends; but we are the richer for the example of their lives, of their patience under pain, of their resignation to God's will. I can only trust that others will come in to take their places and carry on the good work.

It has been good to see the fine attendance at Mrs. Patterson's class in the practice of the presence of God. Her message of the privilege and blessedness of walking with God, communing with God, and drawing help constantly from an unseen, but ever present Friend is a lesson that we sorely need in this bustling age. Let us keep an outward calm, a sanctity in our hearts. Our tasks are too great for haste, too high for rivalry and God is with us to direct our steps.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

Church Work Fund Appeal

MY DEAR PARISHIONERS:

I must appeal to you for your annual contribution to the Church Work Fund. Through this fund I conduct my office, and help on many of the activities of the church. A rector is in a very hopeless position unless he has an official purse that he can use in this way.

Only this week I have had occasion to fall back on this fund. An unusually gifted missioner was willing to give a mission at St. Stephen's. She exacted no stipulated fee, but is dependent on her work for her support. I promised her what I ascertained to be the usual amount; relying on this fund I was able to go ahead promptly with the class, which is successful and growing. If the class contributes the full amount, I will be repaid.

Out of this fund I started a dancing class of young people last year that proved a great success. The young are entitled to social pleasures, and the church should provide them.

The older members are very loyal in their steady contributions to this fund. I make these specifications for the newer acquisitions to the parish. You have always been very generous in the past, and I am going to ask you to be as generous as possible with me this fall, for until I get another minister to work beside me, I shall require additional secretarial assistance. Moreover, the expense of printing has increased very much. Please draw your checks to the order of Carl E. Grammer, Rector.

Cordially yours,
CARL E. GRAMMER.

The death of Mr. Keable on Monday, October 10th, came as a great shock to the parish and Mr. Keable's many friends. It was the general hope that God would grant the prayers for the recovery of this useful worker in His vineyard. But though prayer is potent, it is not omnipotent. God has use for His faithful servant elsewhere, and he was taken from us.

Frederick Brymer Keable was born May 28th, 1872, in Wimbledon, England, of English stock on both sides. Left fatherless at fourteen, he worked for a time in the Bank of England, where he doubtless acquired his remarkable accuracy with figures. At the age of seventeen he emigrated to America. His musical voice early gained him reputation as a chorister. He always expressed a desire to enter the ministry. This wish came to the knowledge of Bishop Frederic Dan Huntington, of Central New York, who had him trained in his diocesan divinity school at Syracuse. In 1874 he was ordained deacon.

After charges in New York at Manlius, Norwich and Jordan, he accepted a call to be vicar of St. Timothy's, South Philadelphia, a chapel of St. James' Church. Here he met and married Miss Rose Ethel Whidden. In 1909 he became rector of St. Luke's, Bustleton, where his civic zeal made him a leading spirit in obtaining a new public school building, and a better water supply for the town.

In 1916 he accepted a call to be the Associate in St. Stephen's Church. By this new title he was given a more dignified position than is usually accorded to an assistant minister. The Sunday School and the work among young men and boys were especially committed to his care. When the rector left for a six months' absence in Europe, he turned over the entire administration of the parish to Mr. Keable, who presided at the vestry meetings and participated in the discussions. The work prospered under his care, especially the Wednesday noonday service, and he was looking forward to a well-earned holiday, when he was taken ill on September 16th.

During his illness he received many tokens of the warm regard of the congregation of St. Stephen's, and of the attendants at the services of the church.

During the World War he did an extraordinary work in Old St. Stephen's Club, where he was a leading spirit and indefatigable worker. Thousands of boys came under his influence, and knew something of his pastoral care. He was also the inaugurator and first director of St. Stephen's Club for newsboys and other little merchants of the street.

The funeral service was conducted in St. Stephen's Church by the rector, the Bishop of Pennsylvania and the Coadjutor Bishop attending, with many clergy of the diocese. The Vestry of St. Stephen's were the honorary pall bearers. Young men of the Church's Club were the active pall bearers. The burial was beside Dr. Rutter in St. Stephen's lot at Laurel Hill Cemetery.

A remarkable son, a devoted husband, a sincere Christian, a helpful and loyal friend, a faithful and useful minister, he has left behind an example that is a blessing and an inspiration.

At a meeting of the Young Men's Club, held Tuesday evening, October 11th, the following resolution was adopted:

Whereas, Our beloved President and Friend, has been called from his labours here by the Master whom he so faithfully served, we desire fittingly to express our love and gratitude for his unfailing devotion to his work with us, and his constant efforts in our behalf, and

Whereas, His Christian character and honorable and upright life, will ever serve as an inspiration to us, to emulate him in our future lives and conduct;

Therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of the Young Men's Club of Old St. Stephen's Church, do hereby tender to his Wife and Family, our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement.

WALTER R. MCGOWAN, Secretary.
ROBERT T. BOYD, Treasurer.
FRANK G. COOPER, Vice-President.

DEAR DOCTOR GRAMMER:

I want to thank you for your many kindnesses to me in my great sorrow, and for the happy years my dear husband spent as your associate.

I know quite well that they were the happiest of his career, and his joy through your placing such confidence and trust in him during your absence was unbounded. The loyalty of St. Stephen's congregation and your own commendatory letters from abroad made for him the happiest summer of his ministry.

He seemed in the best of health all summer, eagerly looking forward to the first Sunday in October when he would again assist you at the Lord's table, and then return to you the trust unbroken.

May I ask you to express my appreciation to the congregation for their loving sympathy and kindness during my husband's sickness and since my bereavement?

I know God is giving me strength to bear this great trial, and I hope that I will soon be able to return to St. Stephen's and find comfort in the church and with the people Mr. Keable loved.

Ever so cordially yours,

ROSE ETHEL KEABLE.

Oct. 19, 1921.

On Armistice Day, November 11th, the church will be open all day. A service will be held, beginning at 11.45 and closing at 12.30. The moments of silence will commence at 12 o'clock. A chorus of eighty male voices from the Fortnightly Club will render a special anthem.

The Annual Memorial Service of the 103d Engineers, Companies B and E, will be held this year on Sunday, November 13th, the nearest Sunday to the Armistice, according to precedent, at 8 P. M. The Rector has been requested to preach the sermon.

Rev. Frederic P. Houghton, former Chaplain of the 103d Engineers, will take part in the service. A special musical program has been arranged by Henry Gordon Thunder, organist of St. Stephen's.

A Bazaar for the benefit of St. Stephen's Community House will be held on the afternoon and evening of Thursday, December 8th, at the Bellevue-Stratford. Mrs. Howard Reifsnyder, Chairman, has secured the use of the Clover Room and the Red Room.

Committees for the Bazaar. The following assignments have been made:

Cake.—Mrs. Whiting.
Infant's Wear.—Mrs. E. W. Moore.
Hot Dogs, etc.—Mrs. Howard Reifsnyder, Jr.
Christmas Cards, Books, Stationery, etc.—Mrs. Wm. L. Baily.
Fortune Teller.—Miss Crawford.
Supper.—Mrs. Robert Boyd.
Tea.—Mrs. Donald Torrey.
Miscellaneous Articles, (Mother's Table)—Mrs. Harper and Mrs. Higham.
Fancy and Practical Articles, (Benevolent Society)—Mrs. Grammer and Miss Ewing.
Sweaters, Stockings, etc., (Woman's Auxiliary)—Miss Laura Bell.
Girls' Friendly Society.—Mrs. Lucas, Miss Van Dusen.
Children's Table.—Mrs. Calwell.

Donations for the Bazaar are earnestly requested, and may be brought or sent to the Parish House. All packages should be marked "For the Bazaar." Books in good condition will be most acceptable.

Mrs. Howard Reifsnyder invites the ladies of St. Stephen's congregation and their friends to meet at her home, 3914 Walnut Street, on the Thursdays of November, to sew for the Bazaar. Will not everyone who is able plan to devote the day or a part of the day, to this work? Guests are asked to bring scissors, thimbles, needles, etc., and a box luncheon. Coffee will be provided. The house will be open from 9 A. M. Materials to be made up may be sent to the house if desired.

The Sunday School.

Our Sunday School is open the year around. We wind up our winter and spring sessions with an annual picnic. This year we were most fortunate in being able to take the school in auto cars to Valley Forge. About 100 went. It was a glorious ride with a delicious luncheon on the picnic grounds of the Washington Memorial Chapel. Besides visiting this beautiful church we had an open-air meeting after dinner, when the Rev. Dr. Burke gave us the thrilling story of Valley Forge. We are particularly indebted to Mr. Keable and our good kind friends of St. Stephen's, who made financially possible this delightful outing.

During July, August and September there was an average attendance of about fifty to eighty scholars. The school is run during this part of the year as one big class under the leadership of the superintendent. The study this summer was the missionary work of the church. A week was arranged for some of the boys for an outing under Captain Heritage up on the Perkiomen, the older girls getting a like outing with Mrs. Nissen in charge.

Our fall session began with a "Rally" on Sunday, October 2nd, the teachers being in their classes. We had a good attendance of about 150. The Rector arrived back in time to give us a stirring address. It was a happy re-union, only marred by the serious illness of Mr. Keable; then to be later saddened by the unexpected but higher call of God for the loved Associate to his eternal home. We miss and shall continue to miss him very much.

But we can best honor his memory by pushing on hopefully for a "bigger and better" Sunday School. Our prospects are good for the winter; though one teacher has resigned, we have three new ones to take up this most important work of our church. We have important plans for bettering the coming activities of our school and will gladly welcome visitors or those who would care to assist in this part of church work.

We are indebted to Mr. Carrigan for his faithfulness each Sunday morning in helping us illustrate with the lantern and to Miss Lewis in looking after scholars and to the teachers who so kindly took leadership on several Sundays of the Summer.

The attendance of the officers, teachers and scholars of all departments of the school at the memorial service to the memory of Mr. Keable, proves their loyalty and their appreciation of his sincere, earnest and loving pastoral care and interest in the Sunday School.

Faithfully,
G. H. STREAKER,
Superintendent.

King's Daughters of St. Stephen's Church.
Whatsoever Circle.

President—Miss Bertha T. Walshe.
Secretary—Mrs. George T. Townsley.
Treasurer—Miss Anna Taggart.

The Circle has held two meetings this season, and we are again working on garments for the little folks at St. Christopher's Hospital. We would like to increase our membership, and will welcome any who would care to meet and sew with us. Meetings are held on the first and third Wednesday evenings of each month, from 7.30 until 9.30.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

On Sunday, October 16th, a Corporate Communion was celebrated by members of the Woman's Auxiliary all over the United States. It was well attended in St. Stephen's by our Branch.

Our first regular monthly meeting was held October 20th, in the Parish House. Dr. Grammer conducted our short service and made a few remarks of high tribute to Mr. Keable, after which we sang Mr. Keable's favorite hymn, "O Lamb of God, Still Keep Me."

The following resolution was offered by Mrs. Hewson, and adopted by the Auxiliary:

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove Rev. Frederick B. Keable from the scene of his earthly labor and pilgrimage, and to take him to that heavenly home of those who fulfill His will, Therefore, be it Resolved, That the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Stephen's Church should express its appreciation of the beautiful character of Mr. Keable, who won the respect and esteem of all who knew him and were privileged to come within the sphere of his influence.

The many friends who mourn his loss will always remember him as a loyal minister of Christ, a helpful spiritual leader, an untiring and conscientious worker, and a typical example of a true Christian who has gone to his reward.

A wreath of pink roses was sent as a last tribute by the members of the Auxiliary.

The speaker at the first meeting was Mrs. Ramsaur, who was our own Miss Conway. She told us of her little hospital building in Liberia, which she had built for five hundred dollars, since she was here five years ago, in which she has given medical treatment to between eight and ten thousand patients. The Auxiliary voted twenty-five dollars to her work.

The reports of our own delegates show there is much active work to be done this year.

Miss Magee has collected $79.00 from 25 donors, as her beginning of the United Offering Fund.

During the summer the Auxiliary has lost two members by death—Miss Dutilh; and Mrs. Thomas Lee.

BEULAH E. HOLLAR,
Secretary.

Church Visitor's Letter.

The past summer has been an unusual one, as there was much suffering among the working people, due to lack of work, labor strikes, and the continued rise in house rents.

Many cases have been brought to our attention, some of whom have never applied before for help in any way, and conditions at times were most alarming.

One family in particular included eight children, with not one old enough to help in their support. The father worked about seven weeks in six months, and in fact was not able to do even that, as he was suffering from a severe case of diseased mastoids. We took him to Jefferson Hospital for treatment, and as his was a serious case, an immediate operation was necessary. It is good to record that the operation was successful.

During the summer we housed and fed the family with the assistance of Mrs. John Coats Browne who has been very generous, and has taken a great deal of interest in this special case, as the mother of the family is well known to us, having been working for the Benevolent Society for fourteen years.

Mrs. Moore has also been very kind in sending groceries and provisions to them, and has interested some of her friends in their behalf. Each of the children had the pleasure of a two weeks' stay in the country through her kindness.

The father at present is working on a small building operation, which will help them out for a short time. Yet assistance is greatly needed for them and a number of others equally in want of assistance.

At present the outlook for the coming winter is not very encouraging, and I want to make a plea for the Garment Society (especially for children's undergarments). Will not some of the members of our congregation kindly remember us in these needs, now that the winter is advancing? I assure you that any wearing apparel will be most gratefully received.

Sincerely yours,

KATE H. LEWIS.

Garden Party at Wych.

Acknowledgments of gifts and thanks to the members of St. Stephen's who kindly took an interest in the garden party and fair at Wych in Germantown last summer are here tendered. Those who attended the bazaar on that ideal day in June will be interested to learn that after paying expenses, one thousand dollars were given to Emmanuel Church in Kensington, the cornerstone of the new building having been recently laid, and one hundred dollars went toward the furnishing of a room in the Seamen's Institute, as a testimonial to Rev. Dr. Caley, the former dean of the Northern Convocation.

The proceeds from the sale at St. Stephen's table and tickets sold through the parish amounted to one hundred and seventy-five dollars. The table was in charge of Miss Louise B. Bell, Mrs. John Coats Browne and Mrs. T. B. Clemens.

As is probably known, an annual entertainment is arranged by the twenty-three parishes of the Convocation of North Philadelphia, to help one of the missions in that district, and St. Stephen's is glad to do her part through the Woman's Aid.

LAURA BELL,
President of the Woman's Aid of the Convocation of North Phila.

Church Periodical Club.

The magazines from our St. Stephen's go to Alaska, to the South and West, to remote areas in all parts of the world, and bring cheer to many homes. We have now 42 contributors sending regularly 90 periodicals. It's a little trouble to mail them always on time, but I am sure it pays, for we are constantly receiving most interesting letters of thanks and appreciation.

Special requests this month are for the Atlantic Monthly and The Pilgrim, Harper's and Century. Then, too, Christmas is coming, and, as at this time last year, we are collecting toys, games (or money to buy the new ones) to be sent to the little children of the Sioux Indians, at St. James Mission, Cannon Ball, North Dakota. Last year we were able to give them "the happiest Christmas they ever had." Will you not help to do the same this year?

Contributions will be gladly received at the Parish House by the Librarian.

MARY M. ROBERTS.

Basket Ball.

Mr. Keable, having answered his summons to that mysterious realm, by the Master Architect, has not entirely left us. His charming personality and untiring energy has consecrated a memory in the hearts of the younger folk that will not soon be lost.

It is not given to all of us to be able to capture the hearts of our future citizens, as our dear Pastor and President succeeded in doing. If no other worldly credit be given him this success will carry his memory through the coming years.

With this thought in mind Old St. Stephen's Club has started what is hoped will be a very successful Basket Ball season. They secured the services of some of the best players in the city. The management hopes that by filling in the weak spots of last year's team, he will be able to defeat some of the leading teams of this vicinity.

St. Stephen's has an unusual situation as far as Basket Ball is concerned. The fact that there are not many young men in the congregation who take any active part in the social organization of the Church, makes it necessary for these organizations to draw on strangers for their membership. The Manager of the Basket Ball team is trying to overcome this difficulty by making St. Stephen's prominent among the leading teams, thus making it interesting to every one, male and female, young and old, who take any interest in sports.

It is to be hoped that the members of the Parish will take notice of this and come out and give the boys a little encouragement.

"The Hospital of the Resurrection of Hope."

It has been our habit for some years past to provide the food for one day for the patients of the Leper Hospital of Kumamoto, Japan, St. Stephen's being the day chosen and $10.00 the amount required. When Miss Riddell, the wonderful English woman who started and for years has carried on this work, addressed our Auxiliary meeting last spring, she inspired us with so much enthusiasm that we decided to endow St. Stephen's Day, and so have this permanent link between our church and this appealing work. We now have $230 of the $250 required in hand. Will not one or several of our congregation complete this sum, that it may be forwarded to Miss Riddell before St. Stephen's Day draws near?

It has been the custom at the service at the Hospital on that day to remember our parish in their prayers. Let us not forget them in our prayers on St. Stephen's Day. It was Miss Riddell's idea to change the name of "Leper Hospital," to the beautiful one of the "Resurrection of Hope."

Announcements for the PARISH NEWS should be sent until further notice to Mrs. George Donehower, 106 North Fiftieth St. Changes in address or in the personnel of committees should be forwarded to the same address.

The members find a great deal of pleasure in sewing on the little garments for the children in St. Christopher's Hospital, and our meetings have been very interesting. We do need more members, though, in order to do a larger work. We are also working for the coming Bazaar, and hope to give the committee in charge a generous contribution of fancy articles. We meet December 7th and 21st.

Rector's Letter.

My dear Parishioners:

Of course, the greatest interest in the parish just at this time is the Bazaar. I have been presenting the cause before the various Societies, and the response is so hearty that I feel sure we will make a great success of it. All the committees have been formed and one member has sold a hundred tickets. If one member can sell a hundred tickets, how many tickets could four hundred members sell if they were all animated by the same spirit? I have just heard of another who has sold fifty. This is very encouraging.

But we must remember that it is not enough to sell tickets and to collect novelties and attractive Christmas gifts. No fair can succeed without buyers.. Now, of course, this bazaar is to be conducted on the highest and most ethical principles. There will be no raffles, and there will be no bulldozing. Still people must not be too sensitive. We have not got an attractive committee to sell without hope that they will be able to commend their wares and make numerous sales. My advice to a person going to a fair is Iago's, to quote a rather unsavory personage:

"Put money in thy purse."

I am afraid the intimation that refreshment is given with tickets may mislead people. That only means, I believe, that you get a plate of ice cream, to cheer you at that critical moment when you cross the Rubicon. The supper will be 80 cents, not including ice cream and cake, which will bring it up to a dollar. It is hoped that many people will take their evening meal with us. A collective enterprise of this kind is certain to bring us all closer together if we enter into it heartily.

The cordial support that this effort is receiving is shown in the response that Mr. Harry T. Jordan made to a request, that he allow a slide to be exhibited in Keith's Theatre, with a notice of the Bazaar, if it would not break any of his rules. He replied, "We have no rules that cannot be broken for St. Stephen's, so send on your slide." What a fine spirit of co-operation is here seen between stage and church, between the givers of pleasure and the teachers of duty.

During this month we will give out the new envelopes. This system is essential to the maintenance of the church, and to the discharge of our duty as Christian stewards. It is unnecessary to defend the envelope system. It has come into use in all the churches, and is a recognized and approved plan of systematic giving. If we could all only bring ourselves to set aside a certain portion of our income, definitely asking ourselves how much do I think I can afford to give, and then devote so much for general causes and so much to the Church, the financial problem of the church would be solved. The unsystematic giver would be perfectly astonished to find out how little he really does give. Here is a man who attends church occasionally, and thinks himself generous because when he goes, he deposits a dollar in the plate. He would probably discover, if he kept an account of his gifts, that he was not giving more than thirty dollars a year. When the decision is once made to give a certain proportion, the carrying out of it becomes a pleasure. One's conscience is at ease. He knows that he has studied the matter, and that he is doing what wisdom indicates as his duty. I think it is a great mistake for the wealthier people in the congregation to think that the poor are lying back on them. My observation is that the poor give much more generously in proportion to their means. For example, a concert is given in behalf of some benevolent object. The tickets cost as much to the poor as to the rich, but the purchase of a ticket is a much more generous act on the part of a poor person The rich people remember the occasions when they come to the rescue. We appreciate this help, and are profoundly grateful to these members who help us out; I was going to say the more generous members, but it may be that the most generous members are those whose gifts amount to little in pecuniary value, for surely the Church has not so far departed from the teachings of Jesus, who praised the widow who gave the two mites, as to forget that the spiritual value of the gift depends upon the sacrifice at which it is made. We must not forget the numerous occasions when the poor give more in proportion than the rich. Let us all dismiss from our minds the idea that the poorer members of the congregation are expecting the rich to do more than their share. Let each man do his best. That is all that God asks of us—to do our best.

The Vestry is endeavoring to regulate our expenses according to our income. Some economies, I am sure, we can make. I think I can see my way to a saving of fifteen hundred dollars, and still further economies may be made. But we ought also to endeavor to increase our gifts. There is danger if too much emphasis is laid upon economy that we may lessen the efficiency of the church. No institution can be successfully administered unless room is given for initiative and experiment.

I want to call the attention of the congregation to the extraordinary instance that has been afforded in Lancaster of the power of the Christian pulpit. That city has long been dominated by a political boss. A boss is distinguished from a leader by the fact that the leader enlists public support by the wisdom of his policies; his instrument of persuasion is reason. The boss is a man who gains a following by the distribution of favors; the instruments of his power are intimidation, special favors, protection and special privileges. By these instrumentalities he makes friends with great pubiic utility corporations, and places his henchmen in office in the jails, on the police force, and in public bureaus. Of course, he soundly berates civil service, or any other barrier that keeps him from rewarding his followers. By his successful manipulation of people and appeals to low motives, he lowers the whole moral tone of the community. As Chief Justice Taft has said, "You cannot have private morality and public immorality." In the long run public immoralities will eat into the whole social system.

Now in Lancaster the rector of the Episcopal Church found this bossism keeping back moral progress in every sphere. If the Law and Order Society wished to put down vice and showed that a certain policeman was protecting vice, they found the mayor frankly admitting that he could not discharge that policeman because the boss was behind him. The county jail was discovered to be in a miserable condition. This fact was brought to light by the escape of a dangerous prisoner who went home and committed murder. It was shown that prisoners got out for little excursions by the permission of the jailor, who was protected by the boss. Even the judiciary was under the same malign influence. At last the tyranny became so heavy that a reform movement was begun. This clergyman was particularly asked to keep out of it. The reform was to be advocated on purely financial grounds. The inefficiency of the boss rule was to be indicated, but the root of the evil was not touched. When at last it became manifest that the campaign would not be successful unless the true issues were brought out, this clergyman preached three sermons stating the real moral issue. To show the forces that he had to oppose, I will say that some corporations and the street car people used all their influence in behalf of the boss. Many employees were told that they would lose their places if they voted for the reform candidate. Yet he was elected by an overwhelming majority. One brave man awoke the conscience of the community.

Some people have an idea that the chief instrumentality in bringing about reform must be an organization, and they deprecate any pointing out of evils until the organization is established. But reformers cannot work on those lines. On what grounds can they get together an organization? They have no right to appeal to the base motives that are so harmful—place, privilege, protection—plunder, in brief. The only point on which they can unite their followers is the spiritual bond of patriotism, zeal for public welfare, devotion to righteousness. These emotions are not stirred up in secret committee meetings. They are best aroused by public appeals, by earnest argument, by exposures of the evil under which society labors. What Philadelphia needs is ministers of the type of this Lancaster clergyman, whom I have the privilege to call my friend. I need not say that I am speaking of the Rev. Dr. Twombly. He was called to a chair in the Cambridge Divinity School, where he would receive two and a half times as great a salary as he is receiving in Lancaster, and where he would be surrounded by friends of his youth, for he is a New England man. But he refused that he might fight this fight to a finish in Lancaster. He is surely to be congratulated that he is privileged to win this victory, and to reap the fruits of his self-sacrifice.

I am very fortunate in securing helpers in the manifold additional tasks that have fallen to me, through the loss of Mr. Keable's loyal assistance.

The treasurership of the Mid-Week Noonday Service has been accepted by Mr. W. Gardner Crowell. The boxes bring in enough, without special appeal, to finance this service without additional expense to the Church except the extra cleaning required. I treat this service as a community service, rather than a parish service, and am gratified that it can be financed without any additional expense to our parish. It has gained a solid body of adherents, and evidently meets a real need. The average attendance this autumn has been about 160.

The task of collecting the material for the PARISH NEWS, reading the proofs, and managing our little monthly paper has been most kindly taken by Mrs. Daniel Roberts Harper. For a number of years she was the efficient editor of a very interesting bulletin published by her school mates to enable them to keep in touch with one another after their graduation. She has, therefore, had experience in such work. I will furnish the regular monthly letter, but Mrs. Harper will be the editor. We are going to imitate the vigorous methods of that great financier, Mr. Ford, who met the high prices after the war by a vigorous reduction of expenses. The cost of paper and printing is so high that on the first of January the PARISH NEWS will doubtless appear in a cheaper form. Mrs. Harper is addressing herself with energy and wisdom to this task of reconstruction.

It would be premature to announce the method whereby I plan to take care of the envelope system, without imposing any longer upon the kindness of Mr. Boyd, and also without placing this responsibility in the hands of a clergyman, whose special training was never given him that he should give up as much time as these envelopes require, to what the New Testament calls "serving tables." It is sufficient to announce here that if the Vestry approves of the method I shall recommend, this problem will, I believe, be most satisfactorily solved.

The whole congregation was shocked to learn on Sunday morning, November 20th, that Mr. Charles N. Van Dusen had died that very morning at 2 o'clock, after six hours of illness. He had been in his usual health and spirits on Saturday. Gaining no assent to his suggestion of attending the Swarthmore-Haverford football game, he had gone down to the Union League where, as one of the attendants told me with tears in his eyes, he abounded in pleasant raillery. After dinner he went to his room. The sound of a fall brought his brothers and Mr. Boyd to his side. He explained that he must have fainted and soon passed into a state of coma. A physician was immediately summoned. He was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital near by. All the resources of medical skill were exhausted, but he never regained consciousness.

By his death a wide circle was bereaved. The attendance at the funeral showed that an unusually large number of people shared in the sorrow of his family.

At St. Stephen's he will be greatly missed. He was a regular attendant, for many years acting as chief usher at the Lenten services. In conjunction with his brother, Mr. Joseph B. Van Dusen, and Mr. Robert T. Boyd, he took care of the envelope system during the first years of its introduction. During the World War he acted for six months as the Executive Manager of Old St. Stephen's Club for enlisted men, not missing a single night during that period. On appointing him to this responsible post, I told him that he would have to keep a menagerie of two bears—Bear and Forbear. On resigning the office into my hands, he told me with a characteristic combination of raillery and earnestness, that he had had frequent use for those two bears. Every one in the Club respected him for his staunchness, and appreciated our indebtedness to him. He was a man to be depended upon. I always felt a special friendship for him. Brave, contented, cheerful, dependable, he was a source of happiness in the home. He took his civic responsibilities seriously and was the kind of citizen Philadelphia needs. So youthful was his spirit and so vigorous was his bearing that we were astonished to learn that he was in his 58th year. At such times we thank God anew for the revelation of life and immortality in Christ Jesus. We hear again, by faith, the comforting assurance of Jesus to Martha, Thy brother shall rise again.

I must not close this letter without reminding the congregation of the duty of doing the Christmas shopping as early as possible in order to lighten the burdens of the clerks, that grow to crushing weight in the last week before our great holiday of joy.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

There was no speaker at the November meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary, but plans for the Bazaar were discussed.

The Auxiliary is to have the booth for sweaters, hosiery and other useful articles. Each member is asked to contribute two articles and help raise a working fund as most of the sweaters and hosiery will have to be bought.

Miss Magee has $225.00 collected from sixty-seven contributors toward the United Offering.

The sum of eleven dollars is still needed to complete the endowment fund of $250.00 for St. Stephen's Day at Miss Riddell's leper hospital.

The Sunday School.

The Christmas season is always the high peak of our year of activity. New scholars are coming in and we are fortunate in this December having to report and welcome four teachers, Miss Farrell, Miss Shade, Miss Mary P. Grammer and Miss Dorothy Grammer; not forgetting Mr. Burroughs with his flute.

We have been able this fall to have the finest type of motion pictures with which to interest the children and get them present at 9.30 A. M. Thus we have largely overcome lateness. Appropriate Christmas pictures will be used with the carols on Sunday, December 25th. Come and enjoy a session with our school. We are particularly cordial in inviting all our church people and the children's friends to our Christmas festival, Tuesday evening, December 27th, at 8 o'clock, in the Sunday School Room (in rear of church), when we present "Christmas in an Old Castle," by the scholars, after eight weeks of preparation. Come and be happy with us.

Rector's Letter.

MY DEAR PARISHIONERS:

I wish you all a Happy New Year. Many signs of hope are in the sky. The Washington Conference is drawing to a successful close. Many battleships will be scrapped, and the competitive race in ships of war has been halted. The vexed question of the Island of Yap has been peacefully settled, and Japan is withdrawing from Shantung. The alliance between England and Japan has been succeeded by a four-power alliance in which we are included. A long step has been taken towards the ultimate goal, the Federation of the world. The great burden of militarism is being lightened, and mankind will soon be able to re-establish itself economically now that it has thrown off this old man of the mountain, that has so long ridden Europe. Moreover, Prohibition is steadily doing its great work. What the prohibition of opium was to China the prohibition of alcohol will be to America—the inauguration of a new era. We feel like singing with Matthew Arnold:

> "The world's great era dawns in sheen
> After long ages rude,
> Divinelier imaged, clearer seen,
> With happier zeal pursued."

There is much, too, to encourage us at St. Stephen's. I have before me the report of the executive office of the diocese, showing the amounts credited to the parishes and missions during the first eleven months of 1921 and 1920. I place beside ours the reports of some churches of the same Protestant character or of similar location:

	11 mos. of 1921	11 mos. of 1920
St. Stephen's	$5,545.27	$2,370.90
St. Luke's and the Epiphany	5,505.72	3,728.19
St. Andrew's	1,210.07	1,030.35
Holy Trinity	22,029.66	13,816.66
St. James'	7,497.28	9,837.58
Church of the Saviour, West Philadelphia	3,626.00	4,524.00

I ought to point out that in 1920 we gave more than the figures indicate, but that our February offering that year was credited back to 1919, as there was a change in the fiscal year. The comparison shows that we are increasing in liberality to diocesan objects, and so far as comparison can be any guide in such matters, doing our part. Moreover, in the course of the year the congregation gave me a most generous purse of $1,743.00. This autumn a purse of over $2,900.00 has been raised as a tribute of affection and to provide for the expenses of Mr. Keable's illness and funeral. With a congregation of such generosity and such ability, there is no reason for discouragement.

We have, moreover, received in the course of the year for the Endowment Fund $1,000.00 from the estate of Miss Rynard, $1,000.00 from the estate of Mrs. H. P. Taylor, and there will come to us in the course of the year $4,700.00 from the estate of Miss Dutilh. Mrs. Samuel H. Austin left a bequest of $5,000.00 to St. Stephen's. This codicil was added to her will within a month of her decease, and is, therefore, invalid in law. Her daughter, Mrs. Isaac Jones, of Los Angeles, California, has generously directed that her mother's intention be carried out, and the money will in due time be paid to St. Stephen's. Mrs. Mary E. Atmore also left us the sum of $500, the income to provide flowers for the Atmore window at Christmas and Easter. Her heirs have added another $100 to this bequest as they learned from her papers that their mother had this addition in mind. By such additions our Endowment Fund is steadily increasing, and the time will certainly arrive when the income from the Endowment will be sufficient to enable us to make St. Stephen's a free church, if we so desire, or will make us strong enough to support adequately the Community House we are planning.

I hope that the envelope system may be universally accepted, and that our gifts for parochial purposes may be increased so that our deficit of $6,000.00, which has been accumulated in the last two and a half years, may be wiped out. To that end I am studying every possible economy of operation. While I should like to blot this deficit out at Easter, I shall be satisfied if we live within our income and pay off most of it then. What is needed is courage, patience and generosity. No church brings out the best in its members that makes no appeal to them for self-denial on its behalf. The days when St. Stephen's met all its expenses by its pew rental and only took up an offering on Sunday morning of about seventy-five dollars, were not glorious strenuous days, but times of Capuan ease. We are in a much more wholesome condition to-day, and regrets for those lazy times are unworthy and weakening.

The most encouraging of all the features of our corporate life is the steady popularity of the midweek noonday service. We have a regular attendance of a little over 160. Some of our attendants are more than listeners; they are fellow-workers who bring in their friends and help to knit the worshippers into a band of brothers. At our monthly communion after the last midweek service of the month there were sixty communicants. On the Wednesday before Christmas we had an attendance of 200. Christmas cards were given them by two generous fellow worshippers.

Elsewhere will appear a report from the Bazaar, which was a wonderful success. Mrs. Reifsnyder showed herself a born organizer and director and was supported by an able and charming staff. A generous friend donated those rooms in the Bellevue-Stratford, and never have I seen a church fair in such a charming setting. As I looked at the brilliant scene the lines of Byron came to my mind—slightly altered:

"There was a sound of revelry by night,
And (the Bellevue-Stratford) had gathered then
Her beauty and her chivalry, and bright
The lamps shone o'er fair women and brave men.
A thousand hearts beat happily—"

I did not omit the words "chivalry" and "brave," for it takes the qualities these words denote to embark on a fair and to make it a success. I hear that the net profits will be over three thousand dollars. Many friends outside the church came to our aid with generous gifts and friendly services. Mr. Dooner's kindness and generosity in helping out with the cuisine demand special acknowledgment. Dooner's Hotel and St. Stephen's church have long been good friends and coworkers. The whole endeavor in its working and in its results was helpful to the church and to the future Community House.

As to this last the committee in charge of that enterprise has nothing yet to report. Progress is being made in the plans, but the stage of publication has not yet been reached. Since the cause of the delay does not lie in us, and it does not indicate any impediment, we do not regret it, as it would not suit us to give up the use of our Sunday School building this winter. Moreover, the longer the construction is deferred the less will probably be the cost.

With the assistance of Mrs. Donehower I am endeavoring to bring up to date our card list of members and attendants. We have an addressing machine that will greatly facilitate the work of the office if we can get the addresses correct. Please let me know of any change of address.

Beginning with this number THE PARISH NEWS will be under the editorship of Mrs. Daniel Roberts Harper. The price of paper and printing has increased greatly, and we are trying to reduce the cost of this monthly. To this end we are limiting ourselves to twelve pages, and are going to place the material in the printers' hands by the Tuesday before the last Sunday in the month—i. e., twelve days before its distribution. Will the secretaries of the societies, and those who desire notices published please take notice?

Upon my nomination the Vestry elected Miss Ella Headman to be the treasurer of the Envelope System. She will be assisted by her sister, Miss Marian Headman. Miss Ella Headman is the treasurer of the Woman's Auxiliary, and her accuracy and businesslike methods are well known. We are greatly indebted to these ladies for undertaking this responsible duty.

Our parish sustained a great loss in the death on December 7th, of Mr. H. H. Barton, Jr. About twelve years ago Mr. and Mrs. Barton began a custom that they continued ever after, of leaving their home near Holmesburg in November and taking rooms until the middle of the spring at the Hotel Stenton. They early selected St. Stephen's as their church home for this period. Mr. Barton was confirmed and became one of the most zealous of our members in a modest fashion that was peculiarly his own. To him we owe the tuning of our bells and an increase in their number. He loved to think that their music brought a message to the sick in the hospital near-by, and to the workers in the business houses all around us. He also gave the reflectors that illuminate the windows of the reredos at night. He loved the Sunday night service, and used to aid in ushering the attendants to their seats. His contribution in gifts and personal service in Old St. Stephen's Club was most generous.

His nature was refined and gentle. He inherited a large business from his father and bore many responsibilities from his youth with dignity and reticence. These cares made him decline the seat in the Vestry to which he was elected, but he was constantly working for the church in his quiet way, and a score of new members are traceable to his influence. More valuable even than his attendance or his frequent gifts was the influence of his gentle loving spirit. The depth and Christian tone of his feeling are revealed in this memorandum which he carried about in his purse:

Enemies must be expected in life; how shall they be met? Jesus showed how. First: He was fearless. He never retreated from the truth or proved disloyal to His duty. Second: He was firm. He continued to call hypocrites, hypocrites, and false leaders, false. There was no weak silence or compromise on His part. Third: He was measurably indifferent. He did not let the presence of enemies interrupt His mission, but He went right on with His work. Much opposition dies by inattention. And then, He kept a soft heart toward all His foes. The worst injury an enemy can do one, is to incite him to hatred.

Jesus loved His enemies—loved them too well to cease opposing their errors—and to the end His spirit was, "Father, forgive them."

Greatly will he be missed at St. Stephen's. Our tenderest sympathy goes out to his wife. May she be sustained and comforted by a hope full of immortality.

I feel that I owe it to her memory and to the congregation's friendship to tell you something of my mother, who died on December 15th, after a long illness, in her 88th year. When I brought her to my home from Baltimore in the autumn of 1912, nine years ago, she had long been so deaf that we communicated with her entirely by writing. It was impossible at her great age, and with her failing sight, to establish new methods of communication. She was, therefore, largely shut out from outside influences and friendships. She was, however, greatly blessed in the companionship and loving attention of Miss Margaret Muller, who for the last eight years was like a daughter to her.

My mother was born in August, 1834, in Gambier, Ohio, where her father, Dr. William Sparrow, of English-Irish stock, was Vice-President of the College and professor of Theology in the Seminary of both of which his brother-in-law, Bishop Philander Chase was the founder and president. She loved to recall that among her father's pupils in that church college were President Rutherford B. Hayes, Henry Winter Davis, the gifted Maryland radical, and Secretary Stanton. The latter was a wayward lad until Dr. Sparrow awoke his conscience and ambition. The friendship between them continued through life. When all the trees around Alexandria were cut down for Union fortifications, Secretary Stanton had the grove of Dr. Sparrow's seminary preserved and when the great war secretary lay on his deathbed in Washington, he had his old professor summoned to his side.

In 1841 Dr. Sparrow went to the Theological Seminary of Virginia, where he was Dean and Professor of Theology for thirty-three years. Though of evangelical training, his uncle, the Rev. Peter Roe, having been one of the evangelical fathers of the Church of Ireland, Dr. Sparrow was much influenced by the teachings of Whately and Arnold and the Oriel School. In those days there were only two theological seminaries of any importance in our Church, New York and Alexandria, and the latter drew the Protestant-minded students from the whole Church. Among his pupils were Bishop Potter of New York, Bishop Dudley of Kentucky, Bishops Whittle, Randolph and Peterkin of Virginia and Bishop Phillips Brooks of Massachusetts. In the life of Phillips Brooks, it is recorded that our Church's greatest preacher testified that Dr. Sparrow was one of three men who had made him what he was. The spirit of Dr. Sparrow's teaching is indicated by his own saying that is cut on his tombstone and has become a classical quotation with the alumni of the Virginia Seminary: "Seek the truth, come whence it may, cost what it will."

My grandmother was Frances Greenleaf Ingraham, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., through whom my mother was related to the Ingrahams and Kips, of New York, Bishop William Ingraham Kip being her first cousin, to Bishop Burgess, of Maine, to Noah Webster, the lexicographer, to Christopher Cranch, the poet, and to the Greenleafs, of Massachusetts.

When the Civil War broke out, Dr. Sparrow was a Northern sympathizer. Though he refugeed in Staunton, Virginia, he never attended any services of prayer for the success of the Confederacy. His three sons, however, went with their college mates into the Southern army, and his brother, Edward Sparrow, who married the niece of Jefferson Davis, was a senator from Louisiana in the Confederate Senate, and the chairman of the Committee on the War. Part of the first draft of the constitution of the Confederacy is in his handwriting. Another brother, Thomas Sparrow, was in the Federal Congress from Ohio. These political differences never produced any alienations in the family circle. Some of the daughters married in the South and some in the North, all to Episcopal ministers, but their religious feelings were too strong to allow such secular affairs to break the ties of blood and affection.

Before that great civil contest arose my mother, who was the fifth daughter and child in a family of ten, married the Rev. Julius Eckhardt Grammer, son of G. C. Grammer, a banker of Washington, D. C., who emigrated to America from Wurtenberg in the first decade of the 19th century, to avoid conscription into the armies of Napoleon Bonaparte. In 1864 my father moved from Columbus, Ohio, where he was rector of Trinity Church, to be for twenty-eight years the rector of St. Peter's Church, Baltimore, one of the oldest and most prominent churches of the Monumental City. My parents had seven sons and one daughter. Three of the boys died in infancy, and I grew up as the eldest son in a family of one girl and four boys.

My father was a man who delighted in meeting people, a public character, a popular speaker for occasions of all sorts, as well as the rector of a large church. The life of our home centered in my mother, who had a great help in her eldest child, a singularly consecrated and unselfish daughter. I can never be sufficiently grateful for the religious atmosphere of our home. Whenever I read many Bible stories, particularly in the Old Testament, I recall vividly my father's reading them at family prayers in his singularly natural, and yet exquisitely musical voice. My sister Maud was a wonderful help to us boys. She was a heroic soul, filled with a hunger and thirst after righteousness, and as entirely consecrated to duty as any person I ever knew.

The two great passions of my mother's life were a love of good literature and a love of righteousness. By reason of her deafness she was excluded from general conversation. She, therefore, took refuge in reading, always seeking to know the best books. She taught herself to real German fluently, though she was never partial to German life. Her memory was a storehouse of fine poetry. My father greatly admired her literary gifts, and used to call her playfully "Accuracy." She loved to talk about the books she was reading and was a great educational influence. The literary passion of her life was George Eliot. Rarely have I known a mother who so dominated her children by her lofty and inflexible standards, and the serene dignity of her character. She was like a higher conscience to all of us.

My sister died suddenly in 1894, and my mother was never the same woman after her loss. She said at the time that she felt as if she had been cut in two, and half of her had been buried in my sister's grave. My father's sudden death in 1901 was another shattering blow, and her last years were full of sorrows and growing limitations. It was sad to see her suffer, and though the breaking of such a tie is inexpressibly painful, I am thankful that she is at rest.

I am confident that there is a life beyond the grave, but I have little faith in any descriptions of it. Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. I am content with the truth expressed so tenderly by our Quaker poet:

> "I know not where His islands lift
> Their fronded palms in air;
> I only know I cannot drift
> Beyond His love and care."

I am grateful to God for a Christian mother of high idealism. I am also grateful to my friends and congregation for their messages and words of sympathy.

The funeral was from Grace and St. Peter's, in Baltimore, on Saturday, December 17th, at 2 P. M., where many of my father's old parishioners and family friends, as well as relations, paid her the last tribute of respect. The burial was in our family lot in Loudon Park, beside her husband's grave. She has left seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

As I have spoken of my mother's ancestry it seems due to my father to say something about the Grammers. There are Grammers in England and France as well as in Germany—all spelling their names alike. This wide dispersion has made me conjecture that they were originally French Huguenots. Now that the Germans have behaved so badly, I am the more inclined to this view; but I cannot prove it. There was in Virginia an Episcopal minister by the name of Grammer of French descent, who would confuse the genealogist in years to come, if we were people of sufficient prominence to figure on the page of history. He was Dr. Grammer, the son of Dr. Grammer, an Episcopal minister; his wife was a Page, and he was connected with the Virginia Seminary, as a trustee. All of which held true of me except that I was connected with the seminary as a professor. And we were no relation!

My name, Carl, was given me after a first cousin of my father, who won a scholarship in a German University, that gave him the privilege of traveling in America. His visit occurred at the time of my birth. He was a Lutheran minister and was called to a church in Philadelphia, but returned to Wurtemberg to become, in course of time, the Court Chaplain. I am afraid he carried back a poor idea of American scholarship; he was astounded to learn that our Doctors of Divinity could not converse in Latin. My name Eckhardt is derived from my father's grandmother, who was the daughter of an Alsatian, a surgeon in the French Army. My ancestors the Greenleafs were originally French. So I have in my veins English, Irish, German and French blood.

Let me again wish you all a Happy New Year. We have lost many loyal members, but the Head of the Church is with us to guide us.

Yours cordially,

CARL ECKHARDT GRAMMER.

The Sunday School.

The month of December has been most encouraging. Besides the addition to our teaching force we have secured a number of new scholars. The Rector has been in regularly, questioning the boys and girls, keying them up to the lesson standard. Our motion pictures have been of an unusually high excellence being unique and of high value in holding interest. The Christmas story will be illustrated with the finest art slides by the Superintendent. For eight weeks our play, "Christmas in an Old Castle," has been in rehearsal and should prove the usual success. We trust that many of our church friends will enjoy the occasion with us on December 27th.

George H. Streaker,
Superintendent.

The Bazaar.

The Bazaar held at the Bellevue-Stratford on December 8th, from 3 until 11 P. M., for the benefit of the New Community House, was a success, made possible by hard work and hearty co-operation and good feeling among the members of the committee.

Over $3,000 clear of expenses was realized. A complete report will be ready in a few days.

The chairman of the committee extends to each of her co-workers and to the many others who assisted, her earnest appreciation and thanks.

HANNAH G. REIFSNYDER,
Chairman.

This official report is most satisfactory, but I can but regard it as too modestly brief to satisfy the curiosity of the congregation and the friends of the Community House outside of our Parish.

The following were the tables:

The Benevolent Society—Mrs. Grammer and Miss Ewing.

The Woman's Auxiliary—Miss Laura Bell and Mrs. Hewson.

The Girls' Friendly—Presided over by Miss McAllister and the Misses Fitzpatrick, in the absence of Mrs. Lucas.

The Mothers—Mrs. Harper and Mrs. Higham.

Children's Table—Mrs. Calwell and Mrs. Raspin.

Dolls—Mrs. Bacon.

Baby Table—Miss Swift.

Hot Dogs and Ice Cream—Mrs. Howard Reifsnyder, Jr.

Flowers—Mrs. M. Brantley Ellis.

Cake—Mrs. Frank Whiting.

King's Daughters—Miss Walshe.

Dancing—Mrs. Charles Campbell and Miss Edna Marley.

Tea—Miss Tappen.

Fortune Telling—Miss Frances Crawford.

Supper—Presided over by Mrs. Harper, but all arrangements made by Mrs. Boyd. Mrs. Clemens in charge of the kitchen.

Our quarters in the Bellevue-Stratford were beautiful, but were not spacious enough to enable us to display our wares. Toward the close of the evening the rooms were too crowded for free access to the booths of would-be purchasers. So much material was left on hand that on Thursday and Friday afternoon and evening a sale of the residue was held at the Parish House with excellent results.

C. E. G.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

There were many letters and full reports read at the December meeting held the 15th.

The Missionary Box Committee has sent a large box to a clergyman's family in Arkansas. The Church Periodical Club has sent out six packages of toys and mittens, gloves and mufflers, amounting to $33.00. Three of the packages went to Indian children at Cannon Ball, N. D.

The Endowment Fund of $250.00 for the leper hospital, The Resurrection of Hope, has been completed. This fund maintains the hospital one day—St. Stephen's Day.

Ten pairs of Christmas stockings were promised to be filled for St. John's House. Miss Magee has collected $283.00 from eighty-two subscribers for the United Offering.

The Accounting Warden writes that owing to the confusion existing in December, due to the vacancy in this wardenship, it has been necessary to make the books balance properly by carrying accounts receivable and payable. This of course was not done in previous years. For this same reason the Treasurers of some of the societies may be unable to check out with him. He thinks that this ought to be stated for their enlightenment, when the account is published in the Parish News.

The Rector's Letter.

MY DEAR PARISHIONERS:

Bishop Garland has most considerately postponed his visit till some time after Easter, the exact date to be arranged later, so that I shall have larger opportunity to gather together a confirmation class. I am greatly indebted to the members of the congregation who have given me the names of candidates. I shall be glad to know of anyone who is considering this helpful profession of allegiance to God.

The latest returns from the Bazaar for the Community House show that the net proceeds are a little over $4,400.00—a magnificant result. I hear that Mrs. Reifsnyder gave a luncheon to the heads of the various tables, and that a far-reaching campaign is being inaugurated for a still greater effort. If it attains anything like an equal success, we shall have taken a long stride toward a community building. The overcrowded condition of our Sunday School room at the Christmas entertainment of the Sunday School showed our need of a larger assembly room.

By the resignations of Mr. E. W. Moore and Dr. Addinell Hewson, two vacancies were created in the Vestry. At the January meeting the Vestry elected I. Smith Raspin, Esq., of the Philadelphia Bar, and Mr. M. Brantley Ellis, of the firm of Cadbury, Ellis and Haines, both pew renters and communicants of our church. They are young and enthusiastic men, and can be counted on to render helpful service. At the same meeting Mr. Craig Atmore was elected to the Accounting Wardenship. The son of a father who is commemorated in one of the most original of our memorial windows, and of a mother whose faithful service and gentle wisdom are gratefully remembered in the Benevolent Society, he has grown up in St. Stephen's and has numerous and strong ties with the church. As the head of a large business he has unusual facilities and training for handling our finances.

It is important that the winter residents who come in to Philadelphia from the suburbs should be made to realize that there is both a cordial welcome and a field of work for them in St. Stephen's. The Woman's Auxiliary is especially eager for their visits. It meets on the third Thursday of the month at 11.00 A. M., in the Parish House. The Benevolent Society meets every Wednesday, from 10 to 12.

Greatly are we interested in the fight to support the Prohibition Law that is now part of the Constitution of the United States. There is no argument in favor of the prohibition of opium in China that is not applicable to the prohibition of alcohol in the United States. Sir Victor Horsley, one of the greatest surgeons of England, pronounced alcohol a poison that only differs from other poisons in its delayed effects. Chemists and physicians now unite in showing its deleterious consequences. Governor Allen, of Kansas, testifies that they had in Kansas for a season the same trouble with bootleggers that we are having in Pennsylvania, and that in the end the beneficial effects of the law were so manifest that no one in Kansas would now think of going back to the old condition. Experience, science, the Church, the State, have all agreed in approving prohibition. As for this wave of reaction against this beneficent law, I can only quote Athanasius, "It will pass, it will pass."

Dr. Empringham showed conclusively in his convincing sermon that the Congress that passed the Eighteenth Amendment was elected before our soldiers went abroad, and, therefore that no advantage was taken of their absence to "slip one over on them." It is cause for great dissatisfaction and vigorous protest that aid was withdrawn from the Church Temperance Society by the Nation-Wide Campaign just at this crisis, when its testimony is so helpful. What better aid could we give the missionary than the support of a civilization which chiefly through the Christian Churches had been purged of a beverage that is so productive of crime, insanity, misery and disease?

The eminent Hugh Price Hughes, of London, used to fill a great hall on Sunday afternoons by discussing public questions from the Christian point of view. There is great need for such discussions here in Philadelphia. I heard an eminent philosopher report on China and its problems the other day, who brought to my mind the blunt saying of John Bright, when John Stuart Mill voted against the secrecy of the ballot on the visionary ground that no man worthy of the vote would desire to conceal his vote; a high-sounding reason, indeed, but somewhat overstrained when so stout a leader as William Cullen Bryant refused to declare how he voted at a crisis in New York, and particularly in view of the necessity of secrecy to protect both the purity and the freedom of the ballot box: "The trouble with these great thinkers," said plain-spoken John Bright, "is that they so often thing wrong." Great logical gifts are often a real obstacle to the collecting of information. Rarely is the great reasoner a gifted observer. Some brilliant generalization often closes the thinker's mind to all facts that do not fit into it. The philosophic Burke for all his profundity judged the French Revolution less justly than that keen observer Arthur Young. Professor Dewey's recent scholarly address in this city on China was a shining example of this kind of observation. He could see no hope in the fact that America refused to acquiesce in Japan's aggressions in Shantung nor in the limitation of naval armaments, nor in proclamation of the open door in China. In spite of her supineness and selfish individualism, he portrayed China as Christian in spirit because she was unwarlike, and so-called Christian lands as unchristian because of their militarism, regardless of the conditions that created it, or of their numerous charities, philanthropies and moralities. A great missionary who had spent many years in China, said that nothing impressed him more on his return to America than the wide prevalence of sympathy and help in a Christian land. An automobile accident in New York brings to the scene scores of helpers, while a junk could sink in the Yangtse Kiang River, and the people on the bank and on passing boats would pay no heed to the distress of the drowning.

Yet, reports Prof. Dewey, China is Christian in spirit. Undoubtedly a great logician, is he a great observer? One recalls the saying of Jowett to George William Ward, "What is logic but a dodge?" This reasoner was so occupied in leading up to his paradox, that he could not even see that America is acting the part of the Good Samaritan toward China in this conference at Washington.

One of the great needs of our Church is a fully equipped set of chimes. Some years ago our old bells, which were only sufficient for peals, were retuned and several additional bells were added. But today the tuning has lost its correctness, and our sweet bells are now jangled and out of tune. The following quotation from Andrew Carnegie will show what a spell the music of a church bell can cast upon a powerful nature:

"As we drove down the Pends I was standing on the front seat of the coach with Provost Walls, when I heard the first toll of the Abbey bell, tolled in honor of my mother and myself. My knees sank down under me, the tears came rushing before I knew it, and I turned around to tell the Provost that I must give in. For a moment I felt as if I were about to faint. Fortunately, I saw there was no crowd before us for a little distance. I had time to regain control, and biting my lips till they actually bled, I murmured, "No matter, keep cool, you must go on." But never can there come to my ears on earth, nor enter so deep into my soul, a sound that shall haunt and subdue me with its sweet, melting, gracious power as that did.

By that curfew I had been laid in my little couch to sleep the sleep of childish innocence. Father and mother, sometimes one and sometimes the other, had told me as they bent lovingly over me night after night, what that bell said as it tolled. Many good words has that bell spoken to me through their translations. No wrong thing did I do through the day, which that voice from all I knew of heaven and the great Father there, did not tell me kindly about ere I sank to sleep, speaking the words so plainly that I knew that the power that moved it had seen all, and was not angry, never angry, never, but so very very sorry. Nor is that bell dumb to me today, when I hear its voice. It still has the message, and how it sounded to welcome back the exiled mother and son under its precious care.

Rousseau wished to die to the strains of sweet music. Could I choose my accompaniment, I could wish to pass into the dim beyond with the tolling of the Abbey bell sounding in my ears, telling me of the race that had been run, and calling me, as it had called the little white-haired lad for the last time to sleep."

What more beautiful memorial could be added to the rich memorials of St. Stephen's than a fine chime of sweet bells whose music would soothe the sufferers as they lie in bed in the hospital, would summon to the Wednesday noonday service the clerk at his desk, and would on Sunday send the message of its hymns to the dwellers all around, to the wayfarer on the street, to the traveler waiting wearily for his train in the railroad station, to the thoughtless, the tempted, the lonely and the sad?

The Lenten list of speakers is about ready to print. Everyone will be gratified to learn that we have secured Bishop Cook, of Delaware; Dr. Melish, of Brooklyn, and Dr. Empringham, of New York.

The Lenten cards will be issued shortly.

Mrs. Grammer is anxious to meet the members of the congregation after her long absence in Europe, and has resumed her custom of being at home on Monday afternoon. I can always be found in the Vestry from 10 to 1 on Tuesday, and from 11 to 12 on Wednesday morning.

I am anxious to get a correct mailing list for THE PARISH NEWS, and to avoid sending more than one copy to one address. Will those who wish to have the paper mailed to them, please send their names and addresses to Mrs. D. R. Harper, 211 West Chelten Avenue, Germantown?

I reopen my letter to write a brief addition about the meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary on Thursday, the 19th. It was a great success. The reports of the committees were brief and full of interest, and the address of Mrs. Roland S. Morris on Japanese characteristics, which portrayed the Japanese from an original point of view, was much appreciated. It was pleasant to know how Japan appeared when viewed from the windows of the American embassy. Her display of exquisite Japanese articles of apparel revealed to all the artistic refinement of that Oriental civilization. The President of the Auxiliary, Miss Laura Bell, showed true generalship, as well as a most generous hospitality, in combining with this address an afternoon tea, to which leading church women were invited from outside, as well as the Bishops and Dean of the Convocation and members of our Vestry. The attendance was most gratifying, especially in view of the important diocesan meetings on that day. Among our guests were Mrs. Garland, Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Roberts, the President of the New Century Club, Dean Medary and Messrs. Van Dusen, Atmore, Reifsnyder, Raspin and Dr. Old, of the Vestry. The Rector embraced the opportunity to present in their new dignities, the wife of the new Accounting Warden, Mrs. Craig Atmore, and Mrs. I. Smith Raspin and Mrs. M. Brantley Ellis, the wives of the two new Vestrymen.

A meeting of this kind in which the extension of the Kingdom of God into the uttermost parts of the earth is first considered, prayed for and aided, and then good will and fellowship in the parish are furthered by social converse, is the best kind of missionary meeting. I am sure more men will come next time.

I am glad to report that Mr. Ellis has kindly taken off my hands the care of the church's advertising. Mr. James Burns has kindly accepted the position of Business Manager of this paper. This is a great help, for I anticipate that he will be able to put us on a good basis. I am declining all invitations to preach elsewhere, or to make addresses, except one address that I am to make to railroad employees in February, and am giving as an explanation of my declinations my desire to give myself, after my holiday of six months and previous sickness for two months, entirely to the preaching and pastoral care of St. Stephen's Church. I believe that God is blessing our work, and feel confident that all are working loyally and bravely. We can do a large and worthy work for the cause of God and the service of man.

Sincerely yours

Carl E Grammer.

A cablegram from Monrovia has just been received, announcing the death of Mrs. Ramsaur, best known to our congregation as Miss Conway. Mrs. Ramsaur made an address at our woman's Auxiliary meeting last Autumn, and had just returned to Liberia, when she died. She was a brave pioneer of the church, and fell in the front rank. Further details will be eagerly looked for by her friends in the Parish.

On Thursday, February 16th, at 7 P. M., we will have our Annual Winter Subscription Dinner. Last year we had this dinner in the Sunday School building, and followed it by a dance. This year it will be held in the large dining room of the Burd School, 4226 Baltimore Avenue.

In the Bazaar there was wonderful co-operation in work. In this dinner let us have the same spirit of co-operation in fellowship. The men now have a chance to take hold. I hope that not one of them will fail to subscribe and to attend. We will have no caterer, the dinner will be provided by the ladies of the congregation. There will be special attractions—music, short speeches and a delightful evening. Let us then talk together of the proper way to celebrate the centennial of the church, which will be in January, 1923.

Subsrriptions may be given to the Verger, a dollar a plate.

Extract from a Letter from Miss Cleaver.

Our congregation is very much gratified by the attendance upon our services of so many of the students at the Training School for Deaconesses. Miss Fannie E. Cleaver attended St. Stephen's through her whole course, and we give below some extracts from a letter she wrote to Mr. Reifsnyder on Thanksgiving Day. He received it only a few days ago. Let us not forget her up under the Arctic Circle, when we pray for the laborers in the vineyard.

ST. STEPHEN'S HOSPITAL
Fort Yukon, Alaska.

Thanksgiving Day,
November 24, 1921.

My dear Mr. Reifsnyder:

Your wonderful letter of September 15th received in the last mail; also yours of September 21st. The date of the mail was November 10th, and this was our first trail mail. By this we mean that every letter and package we received came via dog-team. We did not have a letter from the last of September until then, and how many do you think I received? None less than thirty-five, so you see how busy I have been kept answering them. You know I have considerable work to do, besides answering letters, but I am gradually getting them caught up.

I do so love to receive letters, as you can readily understand away up here, and also delight as much in answering them, so it is no task. Some people do not enjoy writing, but I am one who does, and always have had a huge correspondence. I am so happy to think that you have been added to my list, and did certainly have a very pleasant time reading your entertaining letter, really I could term it an epistle, for it was so helpful, as well as interesting and entertaining. It did me almost as much good as talking right to you, although it was not quite the same, for we always do have such a good time chatting.

Everyone speaks of the hot, rather unpleasant summer, but I can only say that it was perfect up here. The only disagreeable day I experienced was the one in Chicago, about the Fourth of July, and since then it could not have been nicer. The mails have been very slow, as seems to be the custom in Alaska, and after you are here for awhile, they tell me you get quite used to it. You see it was six weeks between deliveries and the last time, owing to the change in route from the steam boat to the dog team. From now on, we shall receive mail every two weeks, until spring, then when the change comes again from dog team back to steam boat, there will be that long wait again.

Since I wrote you last time, we have enjoyed watching the weather and the change of days. I shall try to give you an idea of what it is like, although it is rather difficult. Ever since we came in July the days have been getting shorter and shorter, the entire day being June 22, when the sun never ceases to shine. From then until now, and until December 22nd, the sun rises fifteen minutes later and sets fifteen minutes earlier, so that to-day the sunrise was about nine to ten o'clock, and it set about two. In December it will be light for about two hours, from eleven to one. Now it is exactly three our time, and for quite a while I have been writing with gaslight. From December 22 until June 22 the days increase accordingly as they decrease until we have all day again. This is the way the sun treats this country, because we are about three miles north of the Arctic Circle; consequently, within the Arctic region. It is a very interesting and wonderful country, and I know you would enjoy it for at least one winter.

The temperature has dropped in proportion to the shortness of the days. In July it was quite warm. I think I told you as hot as 80, and now it is as cold as thirty-five below, and will increase to 65 and 70, as we approach Christmas time. September 14th we had our first snow, and up until now we have still had a nice white covering on our ground. At present, we have had about three feet of snow, but it is so dry and soft that we do not mind it at all. It soon gets packed down, and the Indians make trails which are very easy to follow. Everywhere you want to go are their trails, which are no less than little paths about 18 inches wide.

The river is beautiful, frozen solidly for about three feet, and entirely across its width and throughout its length. The Yukon is three miles wide in front of the hospital, and directly across is the Arctic Circle line. This river does not freeze like the Delaware or Schuylkill would, but freezes in great masses, heaped up on top of the other. The entire surface is points and slabs of ice which is very interesting to see. Before it freezes, the ice "runs" in the river, as they call it. The pieces are as large as fifteen feet square, and as small as one foot square. They race down seemingly trying to get ahead of each other, then there comes a jam. The ice seems to back up from everywhere all around, from the mountains, the Porcupine, the Yukon itself, and everywhere. The jam causes a great creekling, and finally it runs very slowly and then stops for the entire winter, never moving until next Spring. There is a smooth place right in front of the hospital now, and this has been used for skating, and it will remain there until the "break-up," as they call the melting.

The main trails are cut on the river, and the mail man goes right down the river from Fort Yukon to Circle to get our mail. He has taken me out in his sled with his six beautiful dogs, and we had such a good time. I have walked over the Yukon and stood in the middle, surrounded with this wonderful ice, even sat on the huge slabs in the prettiest part. One Sunday afternoon, we walked a mile and a half straight across, and then came back, for we thought to walk six miles in one afternoon, and it was quite cold, was a little too far.

We still go hunting for rabbits, but I never seem to want to kill the pretty things; however, I do like to eat them, better than I do the moose. The moose is very much like beef, but so often has gristle in it, and this is what I do not like. In September the rabbits were the color of the woods, a beautiful brown, but now they are handsome, all white and as pretty as can be. When you walk through the woods, you can see their little ears pointing at you. I love to watch them come out to eat, and carry home the spruce for their families.

The work is as interesting as ever, and as in all hospitals, the patients come and go. At present we have three men, two natives and one white man; also three children, for one of our little girls went home yesterday. She happened to be the daughter of the chief. I wish you could see him. I am going to take his picture some day. The only trouble is, he is very normal looking. I wish they would not wear so many American clothes, they lose all of their originality, but they all still wear parkees, booties, beaver caps, etc., for the winter weather.

As to-day was Thanksgiving, everyone went to church, taking an offering. It was very impressive to see them going with their arms filled. The amount was about $170.00 in provisions and orders in the stores to be filled. I think that was a very good contribution for a chapel full of people, and I can truthfully say a chapel full, for it is seldom empty. You should see them go in, women, babies, men, boys, girls, even dogs come, but they make the dogs stay outside. They are all anxious to come to service and love it. It is really very impressive. Now they are getting ready for Christmas, learning carols. They love to sing, and are indeed very reverent.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

Letters of thanks acknowledging receipt of missionary boxes, Christmas stockings for settlement houses, contributions to Camp Dix, etc., were read at the meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary on Thursday afternoon, January 19th, and reports were made by the delegates to the various committees, showing much activity in all directions.

The endowment fund of two hundred and fifty dollars for the permanent support of the Hospital of the Resurrection of Hope at Kumamoto, Japan, for one day annually, namely, St. Stephen's day, is now completed, and it was eminently fitting to hear of this accomplished fact at the same meeting at which Mrs. Roland S. Morris gave an interesting talk of her impressions of the Japanese people, impressions formed during her sojourn in that land as the youngest American ambassadress ever resident there.

Mrs. Morris dwelt upon special characteristics of the Japanese as noted by her, honesty, cleanliness, politeness and modesty and gave several illustrations of these virtues. She brought various articles of Japanese clothing, silks and brocades, rich in color and design, showing artistic taste, and all who heard her and met her at the tea and reception following her address were proud that it was she who had the opportunity to represent our country as a typical American woman in the land of cherry blossoms.

LAURA BELL.

King's Daughter's Whatsoever Circle.

The attendance this season is good and we are making progress with our sewing. Meetings in February will be on the 8th and 15th.

Mrs. J. Willis Martin, Chairman of the Diocesan Committee, asks that the following notice be printed in THE PARISH NEWS:

Mrs. Cox, Chairman of the Wool Department of the Supply Bureau, told of the need of the Diocese for 2,000 knitted garments, and suggested that each parish has a knitting committee made up of members who would be willing to knit garments, the wool being supplied either by a sum raised by the parish or, where this is not possible, by applying to the Supply Bureau itself. The wool can be bought at less than cost price at the Church House Shop, and the description of the garment needed can be got at the same time. Any parish desiring to hear further in this matter, by applying to Spruce 8360, can be put in touch with Mrs. Isaac Davis, of the Church of the Messiah, Gwynedd, who is very glad to go to the parish to start such a Wool Committee.

Your Dance Club has had a series of pleasant Friday evening dances, unhampered (as might be supposed) and plans to open February with a special dance on the third—one more generally heralded than the regular routine—in hope of increasing the attendance throughout the month. The music for the special dance, as well as for every Friday evening during the month (please note), will be furnished by the Old St. Stephen's Club Orchestra, whose playing at the alternate dances during the past months has met with general approval. The growing demand for their music has led to the trial discontinuance of the alterating orchestras, and you now have a full month to prove, by means of your own attendance and the interesting of your friends, that you really wanted what you have so insistently asked for.

Respectfully,

HARRY J. HAUGER,
Secretary.

The Sunday School.

January in the Sunday School has been most encouraging. We have had an average attendance of about one hundred. Books were awarded to five scholars in the main school and to three in the primary department, for making the greatest number of points in punctuality, attendance on both church and the school, besides, of course, attention to lesson study. We are planning in the next few months to develop the class spirit by awarding a banner to the class which, as a whole, has the best attendance and punctuality in regard to its numbers. We will gladly welcome visitors and new scholars.

After eight weeks of hard rehearsal we can happily say that our Christmas musical play was a success. It was a fine evening, Tuesday, December 27th. Our building with its gallery was crowded to the door, "Standing room only." After the Rector's happy opening address and the carols, the story is best told by the program herewith:

United Thank Offering

As usual at this season I call attention of the Congregation to the Women's United Thank Offering, of which I am the Treasurer for St. Stephen's. I am most anxious to increase the number of subscribers, and the interest in this great work, the only one in our Church carried on by women for women, given in gratitude for blessings received by them, the money going to the support of the women in the Missionary Field. Those using the Missionary calendar will be interested in noticing the number of workers with a star after their names, showing that they are supported by the W. U. T. O. Some of my faithful subscribers have already sent me their contributions; I hope that many others will be renewed, and look forward to the hope of new interest in this great work. Kindly send subscriptions to (Miss) Elizabeth C. Washington, 2101 Spruce Street, Philadelphia.

The Rector's Letter

Well, we didn't reach the $7000, which the generous Vestry thought we could give in 1926. I phoned the Church House to-day and learnt that the books had been closed and St. Stephen's was credited with $6217.-13. Last year we gave $6500, so we are $282.78 short of last year's contribution. Well, I wish we had reached the $6500, anyhow; but there is no reason for discouragement. After the wonderful showing of the parish in the great Campaign it was impossible to canvass the congregation again after such a short interval. Moreover the $6500 is the best that the parish has ever done in all its history, so far as the records show. Then, too, we only reached that sum by a regular canvass of the congregation last January; as I have said this was impossible in January, 1927.

On the other hand Miss Headman reports that the total contributed for the Expectation through the envelope system was $5230.73—the largest annual contribution that has ever gone through that channel, and there was an increase in every item over last year except for Colored Missions and the Church Farm School. I do not greatly regret the decrease for Colored Missions for I never have understood why the colored people in the Episcopal Church were not more self-helpful. The colored Baptists and Methodists finance themselves without any aid from the white people. What we give to the colored people ought to go to schools. But I am sorry about the Church Farm School and hope that we can do more for it in 1927. But don't let us have any more drives about Christmas-tide and the first of January. Let us bear the General Church Work in mind, and remember that the money in the pocket marked outside of the Parish is divided between three fields: 1. the Missions and Institutions of the Diocese of Pennsylvania; 2. our Domestic work in the States and in our dependences; and, 3. the work in the Foreign field. Hearty thanks go to all who responded so generously to the Vestry's appeal.

I must not omit a tribute to Mrs. Brunner, who was one of the faithful sustainers of the Parish's benevolent activities. Her check for twenty-five dollars could be confidently relied on in answer to any appeal of merit. In her last years her flame of vitality only flickered feebly. Months had to be passed in bed, and a nurse had to be ever at her side; but in her feebleness the sweetness and serenity of her nature was never overcast. There was always about her the radiance of a loving, unselfish heart. She was, indeed, one of the salt of the Earth.

As I so often lament in these columns the last of some parishioner, it is pleasant to record some accessions to our members. The Forbeses and Stephensons had for years been attendants on our services and one of our societies, and now they have officially connected themselves with us and brought in their letters of transfer.

This is cheering. I wish that more would follow their example. Again and again do I meet people who tell me that they are in thorough sympathy with what St. Stephen's stands for; that they agree with me that the Church ought to welcome truth from all quarters, that it ought to be willing to have the old truths expressed in new forms, that the Christian teacher ought not to restrict himself to literary questions about the Bible, or to Ecclesiastical discussions about the organization and worship of the Church, or to doctrinal subjects, or devotional topics, but should point to the application of Christian principles to political questions, national and international, and to economic questions; that there is no real breadth in a pulpit that professing to be broad is really narrow in its interest, and avoids such vital questions as the right attitude toward Sunday observance, Prohibition, and organizing the world for Peace. "We are with you in spirit," such people say, "we believe in a Broad Churchmanship, that is ethically strenuous and does not keep Christianity away from the real problems of Life." But when I inquire what Church they attend they confess with shame, that they give their bodily presence and influence to some Church that stands aloof from all these vital questions and is entirely occupied either with calling on people to stand in the old paths and pronounce the old Shibboleths, or is giving all its vitality to ecclesiasticism and ritual developments. Truly consistency is a jewel that is only worn by the brave—as in the Arthurian legend, there was a dress that could only be worn by the pure. It is not proper that I should seek to draw people away from other Churches, so I say nothing. But I hold that St. Stephen's has a claim upon the attendance, and support of the people who believe that it stands for the right ideals. No parishioner is expected to agree with every opinion or policy of a Rector, but surely a general agreement with the spirit of a Church is essential, if the services are to be really helpful. I cannot understand how a pulpit that never speaks out till the issue has been decided can be of much value as a stimulator and guide of the spiritual life of a congregation. Such preachers are, in my judgment, like pilots who stay in the safe shelter of the harbor, when the storm is raging without and their services may be most needed, and only go abroad, when there is a calm or the zephyrs are gently blowing and the need of their guidance is reduced to a minimum. But, of course, the mariners who want to wait till the storm is passed, before they venture out upon the high seas, don't care for the pilots, who call upon them to fulfill their schedule and set upon their voyage in defiance of the weather. Mariners who want to play safe and cling to the safe shelter, like the timid pilots. "Birds of a feather," but the proverb is stale and the metaphor inapt.

There is an interesting correspondence in The Chronicle in which the Rev. Frederick Lynch, the well-known writer for the Christian Century, claims that there is really no Romeward tendency in the Ritualists who assembled at Milwaukee. According to Dr. Lynch the test of Roman Catholicism is obedience to the Pope. He observes no tendency on the part of the Ritualists to bow their neck to that yoke. Therefore, they have no Rome-ward proclivities. Surely this is a very shallow view of Roman Catholicism. The vast authority that belongs to the Pope since the Vatican Council of 1870 and its declaration of the infallibility of the Pope is not the only objectionable feature of Roman Catholicism. The doctrine of Transubstantiation and the Medieval view of the Sacraments are, in the judgment of Protestants, hurtful to the spiritual life, making people rely upon magical rites instead of the faithful performance of duty as the chief developers of character. Spiritual directors in the Confessional box do not train up people with consciences rightly exercised through use to discern good and evil. The exaltation of the Church as the sole channel of grace interferes with reliance on the spirit of God. How well Bernard Shaw shows in his Joan of Arc that this theory of the Church as the sole authorized channel of grace brought about the burning of the inspired Maid. It is this exclusive theory that led to the rejection of the prophets that protested against the evils that a supine Church condoned. The essence of Romanism is not the Pope, its essence is the belief that God committed His truth and grace to a definite corporation, and that "none is genuine without its signature."

This error Anglo-Catholicism shares with Roman Catholicism. It is the bond that unites them. It is their common premise. But the advantage of consistency is with Rome, for it holds that the corporation of which the Pope is the head is the sole properly authorized agency for the dispensing of grace and that all other agencies are schismatic and defective. Whereas Anglo-Catholicism teaches that this exclusive corporation exists in three branches, Roman Catholic, Orthodox, and Anglo-Catholic. We can understand a corporation functioning through branches, but in such cases the branches always acknowledge each other's validity and respect one another's rights. But such is not the relation between Roman Catholic, Orthodox, and Anglo-Catholic. Unfortunately for Anglo-Catholicism the smallest and most recent of the three, the Orthodox Church has shown much uncertainty about its regularity, and the Roman Catholic Church, the largest of the three, and the one about whose regularity there is no doubt in the minds of the Anglo-Catholics, absolutely refuses to acknowledge the validity of the Anglo-Catholic branch; flatly denies this theory of valid branches, that do not recognize one another, and asserts that the unity of the Church exists in its union in one organization under one head. This is indeed a staggering blow to Anglo-Catholicism, since on its own theory Rome is a valid Church, a Church with whose teachings Anglo-Catholics agree in the main, in almost everything except the divine right of the Pope. What a dilemma!

Anglo-Catholicism lauds and copies Rome, but Rome disowns Anglo-Catholicism. The more that Anglo-Catholicism conforms to the Roman model and accepts the Roman theology, the harder it becomes to bear that condemnation by the Church so admired and copied. No wonder that Anglo-Catholics are constantly slipping away to Rome. The attraction of the See is both logical and aesthetic. People who stand on a slippery declivity are almost certain to slide down hill and Anglo-Catholics stand in such places.

Cardinal Newman, and hundreds of others would never have left the romantic towers of Oxford for the social ostracism of Roman Catholicism if their logical minds had not compelled them to follow their premise to its conclusion. Anglo-Catholicism holds to this close corporation theory of the Church. That theory exalting the Church into the Mediatorship that belongs to Christ is the seed from which this great tree of Roman Catholicism has grown. This is the explanation of the steady progress of the Ritualists to Roman Catholic usages, devotions, practices, and of the constant drift from that section of our Church to the fold of Peter.

I do not write this because I wish to hurry them on to that logical goal. There are other forces in the world beside logic, and there are more doctrines than one in a theology. Many Anglo-Catholics are really Gallicans, and as between the Gallicans and Ultramontanes my sympathies are with the Gallicans. As long as they are outside of the fence of Roman Catholicism our ritualistic brethren come in contact through other schools in our Church with modern and progressive ideas. Let us hope that the winds that blow in through these open windows may avail to blow away some of the mists that obscure their vision of reality. There are people who are perfectly fascinated by the pomp and beauty of Romish ritual, who are kept from falling under the dominion of its priesthood, by the satisfaction that the Anglo-Catholic ritual, much more refined and elaborate than in most Roman Churches, affords their aesthetic yearnings. Better our Ritualistic confessors, than Jesuit casuistry.

I am not pointing to Roman Catholic Ultramontanism as a goal, which I hope that the Ritualists may soon reach—long may they avoid the despotism of the Roman Curia. My point is that they stand in slippery places, and while I would by no means push them down the hill, nevertheless I do not feel it incumbent on us to abstain from calling out loudly to incautious walkers to avoid their slippery paths for fear of hastening their descent. In my judgment, pace Dr. Lynch, The Chronicle is quite justified in pointing out the Romanizing tendency of the Anglo-Catholic beliefs and practices. No man is a New Testament Christian who does not appreciate that God's Spirit deals directly with each of us and that, however much other agencies may contribute, the chief channel of Divine influence runs direct from the Creator to the Creature. The exaltation of the Church to the position of the sole Trustee of God's grace has proven obstructive to progress, injurious to the characters of those who regard themselves as the authorized channels of grace and hurtful to the manliness of those who are taught to call priests their spiritual masters. Surely Protestantism with its assertion of the right of individual judgment and its confidence that God pardons freely His children who turn to Him in repentance and faith is an advance on the legalism and spiritual domination of Medieval Theology. It is not merely the Pope that Protestantism objects to; it is both Medieval Legalism and Medieval trust in magic. Dr. Lynch seems to us to have an inadequate grasp on the principles at issue.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

Mrs. Grammer will be at home, 1008 Clinton Street, after 3 o'clock on Tuesday afternoons in February.

Edward James Moore, Jr.

Grief was brought to many hearts by the news of the death of Mr. E. J. Moore, Jr., on January 14th. Though he retired from active business some years ago, and was for nearly a decade a great invalid, Mr. Moore possessed such personal charm, and was so widely helpful by his thoughtful generosities, that he will be greatly missed in the City and in the Church.

A Philadelphian by birth and training he has left to his native City a fine example of Christian courtesy and unostentatious liberality. His life was remarkable for its singular consistency. Just when he was ready for College he gave up that privilege in order that his elder brother, Frank, who wished to leave business and enter the ministry, might have that advantage. Frank's claim was superior to his, he urged, since his studies would be for self-culture and not like his brother's a qualification for service. In this act he struck the characteristic note of his whole life. He had his reward in the unstinted admiration and love of all his brothers. Samuel the eldest, eventually became associated with him in the firm of E. J. Moore and Co., and his admiration and affection for his younger brother Edward was one of his outstanding characteristics. These two brothers shared a pew in St. Stephen's when I became the Rector, and were most generous helpers of all good causes, as Dr. Worcester told me they had been in his day. When in my second year we got up the reserve fund to provide against the annual deficit that had been occurring for many years, the first subscriptions outside of the Vestry came from Edward and Samuel Moore, two hundred and fifty dollars each, annually for three years. At service one Sunday morning a poor man fainted in a front pew and had to be carried out to the Vestry-room. On inquiry it was ascertained that he had had no breakfast that morning. Mr. Samuel Moore was at the service, and was so much concerned over the scanty and thread-bare clothing of the man, that he commissioned me to fit him out thoroughly, regardless of expense. I began at rubber shoes, and went up—shoes, socks, underclothing, shirts, a suit of clothes, overcoat, and finished with a hat. The bill was considerably over a hundred dollars. But Mr. Moore was dissatisfied; he noticed that gloves had been omitted, and asked me to procure them also.

Mr. E. J. Moore had a pew in St. Peter's Church, Germantown, as well as in St. Stephen's and attended the Sunday morning service there. When I learnt this, I felt somewhat embarrassed, as I did not care to compete with my friend, the Rector of St. Peter's for Mr. Moore's support. So I wrote Mr. Moore frankly that I had no desire to lessen his loyalty to St. Peter's, and that I well understood how it was more convenient for him to attend the morning service at that Church; but I was glad to see that he often attended our afternoon service, and took special pleasure in the music of Dr. Wood. For my part I did not see why he should not belong to two Churches, as men often belong to two clubs, and are directors in several banks. While St. Peter's, Germantown, might be more convenient for worship, and had the claim of a neighborhood Church, I thought that through St. Stephen's he could render larger social service, and that it had the claim of being near his place of business. He replied that he agreed entirely with the sentiments of my letter, and could be counted on to aid St. Stephen's as long as it had a Rector of my liberal and protestant convictions. (The importance of a protestant Rector was even more strongly emphasized by Mr. Samuel Moore.)

Most loyally did E. J. Moore make good these words. To St. Stephen's Farm, near Warminster in Bucks County, he contributed $500 annually, as long as we maintained that summer resort. After his great illness had crippled him so sorely, and the death of his son concentrated his interests more in Germantown, he gave up his pew in St. Stephen's, but to the end he continued a benefaction, that was, I believe, originally begun by his brother Samuel, and annually sent us in the Autumn boxes of new shoes to be distributed to the needy by Miss Lewis.

Never can I forget his wonderful kindness to me when I was ill in the American hospital at Neuilly. He was himself ill at Aix-les-Bains, with a trained nurse, and with many anxieties and problems pressing upon him; yet he at once wrote Mrs. Grammer offering pecuniary aid, and asking permission to provide a private nurse. The generous purse which the Congregation had presented me at my departure for Europe made such help unnecessary, and we could not accept his kind offer. But his friendly solicitude was not satisfied, and at his special request his brother Frank came out to see me in Neuilly to bring his brother's greetings, and ascertain personally my progress. Lovely and beautiful in their lives, in death these devoted brothers were not long divided.

Never can I forget or cease to cherish the pleasant memories of our friendship. When he was still strong, we had many pleasant games of golf together, a delightful trip in Florida one winter, and a charming visit to the White Mountains in their October beauty. Over in Europe I went with Mrs. Grammer from Grenoble to Aix-les-Bains for a week to be near him and Mrs. Moore as well as to have the benefit of the baths, and I saw with admiration that in adversity he was the same man as in prosperity, the victor over circumstances and not their slave. He was indeed a delightful companion and possessed a singular gift of turning the conversation upon topics that were interesting to the other person. His own range of interest was wide, including politics, public affairs, music, theology, ecclesiastical activities of all kind, and especially the history and usages of the Episcopal Church. Greatly will he be missed in the Germantown Hospital of which he was such a munificent benefactor; in St. Peter's Church where he eventually became a Vestryman; in the philanthropies of the City; and by a wide circle of friends.

Many hearts go out in sympathy to his bereaved wife, to whom he was such a devoted and chivalrous husband. He has left to his little grandson the heritage of a wonderful example.

As I write I recall a dramatic incident that brought into high relief his rare union of courage, and humanity. One night he and Mrs. Moore were awakened by a sound as of boring at their bedroom door. The call "Who's there," brought the terrifying reply, "Never you mind; you will soon find out who's here!" This was followed by a determined effort, evidently by more than one person, to burst in the door. Mr. Moore immediately snatched a pistol from his dresser, and fired two shots; one through the door, which he aimed high, with the deliberate purpose of sparing the lives of the burglars, while he frightened them off; the other out of the open window to arouse the neighbors. The rest he saved to protect his wife, if the burglars' repeated efforts to break in should prove successful. They fired two shots in reply through the door. The shots alarmed the neighbors and the baffled burglars quickly slunk away. As Mr. Moore stood pistol in hand at the open window watching the bed-room door and answering the neighbors' calls, he saw his chauffeur come running from the garage toward the house, and warned him to take care lest he run into the burglars in their retreat!

Such was E. J. Moore—aliorum memor, immemor sui (of others thoughtful—thoughtless of self), a follower of the Master, who had the Master's characteristic union of courage and gentleness.

We are confident that a nature so pure, loyal, believing and loving has not been lost to the Universe. Wherever he is in the God's great cosmos, we feel that a heart so loyal and loving must be blessed. Having served and suffered here, he has been translated into other realms.

The Christmas Play

The Play, "Why the Chimes Rang," by the Girls' Friendly was a wonderful success. By special request it was repeated for "the Mothers" on January 13th, with a larger house than on the first performance. No one can tell what may be the future of these gifted players, artists and musicians. So we print below the full programme that it may be of record. Perhaps the days may come when St. Stephenites will point with pride to this play as having afforded some celebrity the first opportunity for spreading her wings.

Poetical in its conception, artistic in its setting, uplifting in its influence, thrilling in its climax, the play was a real contribution to our Christmas festivities. It would be insidious to select any one for special praise. But every one will feel, I am sure, that Mr. Kevin's initiative, resource and perseverance were chiefly responsible for the success.

THE FEMALE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY OF PENNSYLVANIA

MISS ELIZABETH WASHINGTON, Representative of St. Stephen's

With the hope of increasing its membership, I send a brief explanation of the object of the Society and of the kind of good which it accomplishes. Miss Cleemann had for many years represented St. Stephen's Parish, and at her death I was asked to replace her. This I have done with great interest and enthusiasm but recently with some discouragement as many of the former contributors have died or have moved away so that, in spite of the faithful interest of those who are left, the number is so small that St. Stephen's does not rank as we would like her to do with the other churches.

This Society differs from the "Bishop White Prayer Book Society" in being composed entirely of women, and in supplying the books absolutely free of any charge. In 1921 Prayer Books, some small and some large for chancel use and several of the latter for individuals with poor eyesight, small hymnals as well as music hymnals for choir use, to the number of 1,928, have been sent to the struggling missions and churches in every part of the U. S. Could the members of our congregation hear the touching and grateful letters of acknowledgment which they call forth, they would, I feel sure, be glad to take part in keeping up this valuable work.

The subscriptions range from $1.00 per year, and may be sent to me—Elizabeth C. Washington, 2008 Walnut Street.

Representative of St. Stephen's of the Bishop White Parish Library Association—Miss Emily Bell.

FORMS OF BEQUEST

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Endowment Fund of St. Stephen's Church, the sum of

FOR THE ENDOWMENT OF A PEW.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Fund for the Endowment of Pews in St. Stephen's Church, the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, for the Endowment of a Pew, to be called the Pew.

NOTE.—The Act of April 26, 1855, requires that a will containing a bequest to Religious and Charitable uses must be executed at least one month before decease, and be attested by two disinterested witnesses. Otherwise the bequest is void.

THE RECTOR'S LETTER

My dear Parishioners:

We shall have a Confirmation on some date after Easter which will be most convenient to Bishop Garland. The Confirmation class will meet from now on until further notice, on Friday evenings at 8 o'clock sharp, in the Vestry room. Candidates and visitors will be most heartily welcomed. Whenever I begin this work of enlisting and drilling recruits, I am forced to ask myself just what kind of environment have we for them in St. Stephen's. Now as I understand our Church, it stands for certain definite conceptions. Some one once asked me where my Church was situated. I replied its position is not so much geographical as theological. Let me see if I can define clearly our theological position, using the term theological very loosely, making it cover both our ecclesiastical and religious positions. First of all then St. Stephen's began as a Church that had no quarrel with culture. The old Evangelicals were wonderfully fervent and devout people and rendered an invaluable service to our Church; but they distrusted culture, and had little use for beauty. St. Stephen's endeavored to keep religion and culture together. Its music was of a high order, and its beautiful monuments were the finest of their kind in America.

Secondly. Under Dr. McConnell, St. Stephen's showed itself hospitable to new truths. Dean Stanley once remarked that no theologian had influenced theological thought in the 19th century, as profoundly as the great scientist, Charles Darwin. During Dr. McConnell's rectorship St. Stephen's was recognized as possessing a pulpit where religion looked upon science with a friendly eye. Its pulpit was distinctly broad church in its message.

Thirdly. Under Dr. Worcester the value of comparative religion was emphasized and the results of the Higher Criticism of the Old Testament were brought home to the congregation.

I have endeavored to preserve these splendid traditions. The music of the Church is under the charge of a musician of distinguished gifts and is of a high order. Through the generous gifts of many parishioners and especially through the wonderful re-decoration of Miss Magee, the Church has attained one of the most exquisite interiors in the country. The theological breadth has been preserved. Scriptures, Church, and Reason are all proclaimed as roads by which men find God. Church organization, the Scriptures and Christian dogma are all treated as products of a long process of education and development.

I have also endeavored to extend the Church's zeal into new fields and to broaden its sympathies. When I came to St. Stephen's, it possessed no Woman's Auxiliary, and seemed to have small interest either in the life of the diocese or of the city. I organized the Auxiliary, and sought to make the influence of the Church felt in civic reforms. There is such a thing as being theologically progressive, but ethically reactionary, nominally broad, but in spirit narrow, exclusive, unprogressive, Philistine. There are some liberal Churches that like to cultivate aloofness from other Christians. Such Churches condemn in superior tones the crudeness of the theology of their less cultured brethren. Of course they themselves are essentially illiberal, in this attitude.

It is our bounden duty to work as far as possible with other Christians, to minimize differences and exalt agreements. I have sought to make St. Stephen's stand for ecclesiastical as well as theological liberality; for zeal, for righteousness, as well as for zeal for new conceptions of truth. I am also persuaded that a Church is meant to be a fellowship. Such are some of the goals for which I have striven.

More and more does it become plain to me that the great need is fervor of spirit. A belief that doesn't warm, animate, persuade, and control, is not a belief that will mould us, or win others. Let us ask God to make us fervent in spirit. Only in such a spirit can we serve the Lord with gladness, and with efficiency.

THE young men of the Church are going to give a play at the Little Theatre on De Lancey Street for the benefit of the proposed Community House. The dates are May 18th, 19th and 20th. The play is Booth Tarkington's "Clarence". I hope that there will be a liberal purchase of tickets, which are $1.00 apiece. There will be dancing afterwards.

I have been asked to enlist the interest of the congregation in the release of four Philadelphians, who are now serving long terms in Leavenworth prison. They were convicted under war-time legislation. The two counts under which conviction stand were conspiracy against the Draft Act and the Espionage Act. Our Allies have long since released all their political prisoners; but here are still in our Federal prisons more than one hundred political prisoners, all of whom were convicted solely for alleged expression of opinion under war time legislation. now repealed. The four Philadelphians, Edward F. Doree, Benjamin H. Fletcher, Walter F. Nef and John J. Walsh were convicted with ninety-four others by a jury after a deliberation of twenty-five minutes. Captain Alexander Sidney Lanier, a lawyer, detailed by the Military Intelligence Division, General Staff of the United States Army, to watch the trial, stated publicly that "the verdict rendered was a foregone conclusion from the beginning in obedience to a public hysteria and popular demand." A committee of public spirited Philadelphians has since examined the evidence and states that these four Philadelphians are innocent of the charges against them. The war has been won, the nations are preparing for peace; what possible benefit can it be for the State to punish these men further? Let us unite in asking President Harding to pardon them. Why not advocate the immediate release of all political prisoners? Ought we to fall behind our allies in clemency? Ought not our Nation, after its great victory, to say, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me to preach deliverance to the captive and to set at liberty them that are bruised." Further information can be procured from the Philadelphia Civil Liberties Committee, 1400 Morris Building. All appeals for the release of these men should be addressed to President Harding.

It has been a real pleasure to me to give myself up entirely to parish work, as I have done for the past six months. Through the co-operation of the new treasurers of special funds, and of the new staff of the Parish News, it has been possible to meet the requirements of the parish, with assistance only in the Sunday services. With Lent, however, some further aid was indispensable, and the Rev. Mr. Stork, who has been helping us so acceptably on Sunday, has now agreed to give us his full time for a season. With his assistance we are able to celebrate, according to our custom, the Holy Communion every Sunday in Lent, at 11.00 o'clock on the first Sunday, and at 10.15 on other Sundays. Mr. Stork is a graduate of Dickinson College, and also of the Philadelphia Divinity School.

Dr. Carter Helm Jones was, as you know, unable to deliver those promised addresses. I took his place here for the week after the fourth Sunday in Lent. I count myself very fortunate in having secured Bishop Paul Jones, sometime Missionary Bishop of Utah, to deliver the addresses that I was scheduled to make in Holy Week. Bishop Jones' earnestness, depth of conviction and moving eloquence are too well known in the Church to require any extended advertisement. We are very fortunate to have secured him.

On February 28th, at her brother's house on the corner of Forty-second Street and Baltimore Avenue, I had the funeral service of Miss Elizabeth Williamson, the last member in our Church of a family long associated with St. Stephen's. When I came to St. Stephen's, she and her sister, Mrs. Armstrong, were so pre-eminent in the regularity of their attendance at the Saints' Day Services that I felt as if those services belonged especially to them and sought their approval before substituting for them the Communion on the last Wednesday of the month. Miss Williamson was distinctly of the type of Mary of Bethany, gentle, steadfast, loving, with the sweet reasonableness that is the distinguishing note of the sane and moderate churchmanship in which she was trained. It was a joy to minister to such an appreciative parishioner. Her example and memory are a benediction to St. Stephen's.

I want to close with a little appeal for self-denial, not to win merit or to gain spiritual strength so much as to enable us to give to the starving peoples of Europe. I fear that I have not brought these appeals prominently enough before the congregation. I have not wished to embarrass or thwart those who so generously and helpfully are wiping out our debt. But I learn that it has all been extinguished without calling upon the guarantors of the last $600, and feel that the coast is now clear. Let us show our gratitude to God for His mercy, and also help to bind up the wounds of the world by making a generous gift to these funds distributed by Mr. Hoover and others.

Sincerely yours,
CARL E. GRAMMER.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Despite the absence of many members from the meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary, held on Thursday, March 16th, those who attended were enthusiastic over the address made by Ven. Winfred H. Ziegler, Archdeacon of Albuquerque, N. M. His account of the beginning of work in this missionary district of New Mexico was well thought out and delivered, and stress was laid upon the lives and energy of the men who have spread the Gospel throughout vast regions, traveling many miles to hold services and to extend their work as opportunity offered. Limitations necessitated by lack of means are to be overcome in one instance, by the raising of ten thousand dollars more than the ten thousand already gathered in for the support of St. John's Sanatorium in Albuquerque, and this is the Archdeacon's object now during his sojourn in the east, or exile as he calls it. Eighty-six dollars have been promised thus far by St. Stephen's Auxiliary as the result of this meeting and it is hoped to round out the sum to one hundred dollars, so that life may be prolonged and suffering alleviated in the health-giving air of Albuquerque. Some of the incidents related were indeed most touching. So much time was devoted to his address that the reports of some of the delegates were held over for the next meeting on April 20th.

Announcement was made of the United Thank-Offering service to be held at the Pro-Cathedral, Broad near South Street, at ten o'clock, on Thursday, April 27th.

A SKETCH OF THE MISSIONARY WORK OF THE CHURCH

THE year 1921 marked an important era in the history of the work of the Church, for it was just one hundred years before that the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society, composed of all members of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America, was formed, and every parish was asked to emphasize this anniversary in one way or another.

Owing to varied circumstances in our own parish, no special meeting was held or address given, so it is with pleasure that the following article is prepared at the request of the Rector.

Philadelphia is particularly identified with this vital movement in church history as the Board of Directors held its first meeting in November, 1821, in the vestry room of Saint James' Church, and, on November 6, 1921, that event was appropriately recognized in the same church by a pageant illustrating the growth of a hundred years of missionary activity. The first general missionary meeting was also held in Saint James' Church, in 1822, and the first real domestic mission station was founded at St. Augustine, Florida. The project for the first foreign mission also was started in Philadelphia, at the home of Rev. Gregory T. Bedell, of Saint Andrew's, and in 1830, the first foreign missionaries of the American Church sailed for Greece. Naturally, means were solicited to carry on all such work, and in the record of those times it is interesting to read that contributions in cash were supplemented by a hogshead of tobacco, nails, medicine, tracts, lead-pencils and shoes, all equally necessary and comforting! The first bequest to domestic missions came from Mr. Frederick Kohne, of Philadelphia, a bequest of ten thousand dollars.

To the diocese of New York belongs the credit of sending the first missionary boxes and packages of clothing to the Green Bay mission in 1832, and the Female Tract Society of Pennsylvania, precursor of the Church Periodical Club, was sending annually 10,000 tracts throughout the Union. In order to spread information as to missionary progress the monthly magazine, entitled The Spirit of Missions, was first issued in 1836, subscription price one dollar annually, and it is a remarkable proof of the value of such a publication that its appearance has been eagerly looked forward to every month by the subscribers from that time to the present, and still more remarkable that the subscription price remains the same. How any one interested in missions can exist without it is inconceivable, and its first illustration was that of one of our early missions, a chapel in Liberia. In 1844, there was already a list of scholarships sustaining schools in Africa, an example of systematic giving, and Pennsylvania voluntarily laid a missionary apportionment upon herself in 1845. The long line of missionary bishops is headed, of course, by Rev. Jackson Kemper, and the lives of these men should be an inspiration to go and do likewise.

This general outline shows how the Society developed, and auxiliaries of women, small bands here and there, helped in various ways from the very first year of its organization, but it was not until 1871, that the Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Missions was authorized; therefore, the year 1921 was doubly memorable as being the fiftieth anniversary of that organization as well as the one hundredth year of the existence of the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society. Miss Mary A. Emery was the first Secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary and upon her marriage to Dr. Twing, her sister, Miss Julia C. Emery, succeeded to her position, in 1876, continuing the work of general secretary for forty years, resigning a few years before her death, which occurred in January, 1922. Her life was one of devoted service and her last work was the compilation of a book, "A Century of Endeavor", the history of the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society, the Woman's Auxiliary, etc., from which most of these items of interest have been gleaned. In order to commemorate the lifework of the Emery sisters, all of whom did such noble work, a fund was started to provide a house in New York for the residence of missionaries, home on furlough; fifty thousand dollars were aimed for, but ninety-three thousand quickly flowed in, and the Emery Fund will furnish rest and refreshment to many of our missionary workers. St. Stephen's Auxiliary made a contribution of eighty-seven dollars toward this sum, and the whole Emery Fund was a centennial offering.

All this by way of preliminary to the explanation of the why and wherefore of the Woman's Auxiliary, which is now called the Woman's Auxiliary to the Presiding Bishop and Council. General headquarters are in the Church Missions House, 281 Fourth Avenue, New York, and Miss Grace Lindley is Executive Secretary and there is an Educational Secretary as well. Leaflets are published, information given and speakers arranged for at any time. In our Diocese of Pennsylvania the Woman's Auxiliary has Diocesan, Foreign, Domestic, Indians' Hope, and Colored Mission Committees, holding monthly meetings at which delegates attend from every parish, to listen to reports, fulfil the pledges and meet the speakers who thus keep the Auxiliary workers in touch with the great missionary pulse of the Church. The delegates in turn take notes of everything which transpires at these meetings, and bring back monthly to their own parish as much information as possible. No matter how indifferent a delegate may be at first, she cannot fail to become interested and to interest others.

The Educational Department calls for an Educational Secretary in every parish, with the expectation of having a Mission Study Class held each year in that parish, using the textbook issued by the Department of Education, a valuable and instructive course of study.

The Church Periodical Club has grown with tremendous strides, and books and magazines which otherwise would be lost or destroyed find their way through this channel to distant parts of the country. The missionary boxes sent are always welcome and through the reorganization of the Supply Bureau adopted in many parishes, duplication is avoided and better results accomplished. The United Thank-Offering is made once in three years at the General Convention, and annual services held in the interim as encouragement toward the goal to be attained. This offering from women is for the support of women workers, and a certain amount is set aside for new buildings.

The different Committees make themselves responsible for scholarships, salaries of Bishops and nurses, support of hospitals, etc., and by every parish contributing a small amount the quota is fulfilled. The delegates bring money from their parishes and apply it as needed. Take, for instance, the Foreign Committee pledges which cover a wide field. In China, the districts of Shanghai, Hankow and Anking have a University and schools and beds in hospitals to be supported. In Japan, Tokyo and Kyoto have a college, nurses' school, hospitals, salaries of evangelists and nurses and even life insurances to be paid for by those at home.

Liberia is carrying on industrial and educational work at Monrovia, Cape Palmas and Bendoo, and has lately sustained a great loss in the death from pneumonia of Mrs. William H. Ramsaur, formerly Miss Sarah Conway, connected with Saint Stephen's Parish. Brazil has a special scholarship named after Bishop Kinsolving. These special pledges do not count on the quota, and it is the duty of the delegates to first fulfil the pledges which do count. Cuba also has scholarships and Haiti and Mexico as well. One could enlarge indefinitely on this subject, as each country widens the vista and offers a greater opportunity to extend the kingdom of God.

LAURA BELL,
President Woman's Auxiliary of Saint Stephen's Parish.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

THE Sunday School continues full of good spirit. Eighty-five per cent. are always twenty minutes ahead of opening time, in order to enjoy the excellent motion pictures we have been most fortunate in securing of late. We are indebted to the Y. M. C. A., to the Pathé and Universal Film Companies for getting the best of their films. In emphasizing Philadelphia (Our City), we used the excellent reels of the Schlicter Co., through the kindness of Miss Fitzpatrick, of our church. On Palm Sunday and Easter Sunday mornings the Life of Christ will be shown by the Superintendent, as is usual each year, using the finest type of Art Colored Slides.

Five little Chinese boys are finding St. Stephen's so attractive, that they come regularly. Miss Zella Cliff, formerly of the Burd School, is now a teacher in our Primary Department. Miss Minnie Corrigan, the efficient head of these little ones of ours, awarded Miss Mary Page Grammer's Class the Banner, for Class Spirit. In the main School Miss Dorothy Grammer and Miss Nodine each have a banner for their class this month, and on the Boys' side, Miss Shade is the winner.

St. Stephen's teachers entertained the Superintendents' Association of the Diocese at supper, on the 17th of February. Eighteen Sunday Schools were represented. We are all very much indebted to Mrs. Nissen, the Chairman, to Mrs. Gensheimer, Mrs. McEwen and to all who assisted in making the evening a success. The same committee are handling our teachers' supper conference of March 22d.

We are always pleased with visitors. Come and see for yourselves. Maybe you would like to help us. Faithfully yours,

G. H. STREAKER, Supt.

THE CO-OPERATIVE SHOP

A REPORT given by Mrs. Reath, at the Woman's Auxiliary:

The Co-operative Shop is located at 317 S. 20th Street. Miss Deane is Secretary. You pay $2.00 a year. One ticket is required for the family and those who subscribe are asked to give one article a year if possible. helping those people who are needy. They do not take rummage, but do take partly worn garments. They find women who will knit and do fancy work—will try to sell their work on a 5 or 10 per cent. commission. There is an Employment Bureau, not for domestic help, but for clerical help, stenographers, secretaries and trained nurses. In case of emergency, no charge is made for obtaining them.

Some of the prices follow: Evening dresses, $5.00 to $20.00; waists, $1.00 to $2.50 and shoes from $1.00 to $4.50.

The money is used for Social Service Work in the Diocese under the direction of Bishop Rhinelander and Mr. Richardson.

Miss Alma G. Elkinton has asked me to bring to the knowledge of the congregation the willingness of Mr. Braekvelt, a Belgian artist, to restore old paintings. He has been five years in this country and is, I learn, an artist of merit. But he takes a sensible view of the duties of an artist and is quite willing to do this less ambitious work, and to do it efficiently. His address is M. Louis Braekvelt, Portrait and Landscape Painter, 11 E. Athens Avenue, Ardmore, Pa. His telephone is Ardmore 412 R. He solicits orders for restoring old paintings.

Nuggets of Wisdom

FROM WASHINGTON'S FAREWELL ADDRESS

"This government, the offspring of our own choice, . . . has a just claim to your confidence and SUPPORT. Respect for its authority, COMPLIANCE WITH ITS LAWS . . . are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty. . . . The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government presupposes the DUTY OF EVERY INDIVIDUAL TO OBEY THE ESTABLISHED GOVERNMENT."

This is a pretty good argument in favor of obeying the 18th Amendment and enforcing the Volstead Act.

I AM TWENTY-FIVE CENTS

I am too small to buy a quart of oil;
I am too small to buy a half-pound of candy;
I am too small to buy a ticket to a good movie show;
I am even too small to buy a box of undetectable rouge;

—BUT—

Most people think I'm "some money" when I come to church.

BAZAAR

We hope to hold a Bazaar in the Autumn, but can only do so with the help of every one during the Summer. Each one can do something, however small, and after all it is the little things that help so much toward making anything a success.

Will you all please work for the Bazaar this Summer, as we want it to be as successful as the one we held last Winter.

We would like each one to bring at least two saleable articles in the Fall—remember it is for a Community House which will be a benefit for all—so all must work for its success. MRS. HOWARD REIFSNYDER,
Chairman.

During the past season the King's Daughters have made and given to St. Christopher's Hospital sixty-eight articles—clothing and bed linens,—together with postal card albums and other cards. A dress was made and given to a child whom we knew needed it. This is an increase of twenty-seven articles over what was accomplished last year. We also had charge of a miscellaneous table at St. Stephen's bazaar, which added $62.36 to the Community House fund. Two new members have joined our Circle, so that now we have eleven members, eight of whom are active. We feel we are progressing in our work and hope that next season will show even better results.

NO MAN LIVETH TO HIMSELF

ADDRESS AT THE RADIO BROADCASTING STATION, STRAWBRIDGE AND CLOTHIER, APRIL 2, 1922 BY

CARL E. GRAMMER

THIS truth is brought home to me with peculiar vividness, as I speak to this unseen audience through this wonderful invention. If it seems strange to you to listen in a quiet room to a speaker many miles distant, believe me it is a still more thrilling experience to the speaker himself. I feel as if I were an archer, drawing a bow at a venture, and shooting an arrow into the air, an arrow that in a miraculous manner will multiply itself into ten thousand arrows that will fly in every direction with inconceivable rapidity, and penetrating power. It is indeed a novel experience for us all.

Yet on second thought it becomes plain that this act of mine this afternoon is but one more illustration of what we are doing all the time—is but a new form of an old act. What is this whole universe but a great whispering gallery? Is not this the belief, that is the foundation stone of every Church, where men meet to pray? It not this the bow that speeds their petitions to the skies? Most emphatically do our Sacred Books declare that there is not a cry for help that does not reach the All-Father's ear; that there is not an unkind word to one of his little ones that is not registered on His tablets, perhaps I should say on His recording cylinders.

To this all-hearing ear, to this all-preserving memory we appeal, when we wish to obtain from the witness in the court of justice, the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. This unseen Auditor we invoke when we seek to bind our officials to the uttermost fidelity. Could we but realize constantly that this Ear is ever attentive to our words, we should not need to think of other Auditors. His service is liberty indeed. Where fear of God dwells, there is deliverance from all lesser fears. He who fears God, need not fear man.

Since, however, we find it difficult to reach this height, it is helpful to remember that we have countless other auditors. I do not mean disembodied spirits. It is of course, quite possible that they may be all about us, as little incommoded by our bodies as are these wireless messages. We cannot prove that our departed loved ones are not watching us, and listening to our words; but neither can we disprove it. Such a possibility is more and more conceivable. It is more and more manifest that the universe is one, and that the past, present and future are all linked together; that all life is mysteriously intertwined, or as the hymn puts it, that "living saints and dead but one communion make." But I refer not to these disembodied auditors—if such there be. I mean our countless auditors in the flesh. The world is so made that the word spoken in the closet to a friend, is soon proclaimed upon the housetop to the multitude. Who can tell how rumor spreads? We only know that it rushes like lightning from one quarter of the heaven to another. We only know that it has marvelous power to make or mar. We only know that not only do echoes roll from soul to soul, but that whispers and secret confidences often take the same course. When we think how many lives have been ruined by careless words, distorted and magnified by these reverberating echoes—of lovers estranged, of households shattered, of reputations ruined, of hearts broken, of lives embittered, of noble causes injured, we appreciate the loftiness of the praise of a noble woman, in Proverbs, when it says that in her tongue is the law of kindness; we realize the importance of setting a watch to the door of our lips; we understand what Jesus meant when he said, "By thy words shalt thou be justified, and by thy words shalt thou be condemned."

One cause of this mysterious power of words is our ignorance of the real nature of our hearers. The hydrogen that united with oxygen makes refreshing water, will make a devastating explosion if brought in contact with free oxygen and a flame. The water that brings health as it descends from the hills may bring pestilence as it leaks out of our drains into our wells. The prosperity of a truth, as well as of a jest, lies in the ear of him that heareth. But how difficult it is to adjust the message to the recipient, the truth to the prepossessions of the hearer. The invisibility of my present hearers makes no great increase in this inherent difficulty of the speaker. For, so far as their true nature goes, my visible hearers on Sunday are almost as great a mystery as you invisible auditors. I hardly know whether flesh most reveals or conceals the spirit it serves. Often one feels like saying with Duncan:

"There is no art
To find the mind's construction in the face."

Ugly natures often lurk behind beautiful features, and staring eyes and thick lips may mask delicate souls. How deceitful are appearances. The speaker who stands physically so conspicuous on the platform, may be really quite other than he appears. Looking like a bold champion, he may in reality be the pliant tool; professing to be an ardent patriot, he may be an unscrupulous self-seeker; announcing himself as a voice crying in the wilderness, he may be only an echo of some secret council, or junto, or caucus. The listener who seems so anxious to hear the message may be an embittered soul, who will turn the milk of the word into gall, pervert liberty into license, and twist counsels of prudence into prohibitions and negations. Truly we are encompassed about with mysteries. The Psalmist says of God, that clouds and darkness are round about Him. The same may be said of His children, made in His image and likeness. Wherever we turn, without, within, about and below, we meet mysteries. Out of the darkness behind us, into the darkness before us, we fly like shuttles, each of us a mystery to himself and to others.

Yet amid all this obscurity, one point is clear. Though on the horizon lies darkness still the path before us is plain; though the nature of our shuttles is a mystery, we can see that we are weaving together, as we fly about, some sort of a tapestry, called civilization, and in this tapestry we can discern a pattern disclosing itself, which our guides in the weaving tell us, is the City of God. Through this weaving, we realize that we are not each working for his own self, but are parts of a larger whole, that we are not fighting for our own hands, but are soldiers in a great army. It is this higher unity which enables thought to pass so rapidly from mind to mind, sympathy from breast to breast, courage from heart to heart. We are members one of another. We are brethren, and One is our Father, even our Father in Heaven.

Since we are thus mysteriously bound together in origin, nature and service, my hearer, think not in your quiet room that you can live your life in independence of the common weal, or of mutual service. It is just as unsportsmanlike in you to refuse to play your part manfully, as it would be for the torch-bearer in the torch race, that famous Greek game, to drop his torch, or extinguish its flame. You are no more free to relinquish your post of duty, than is the man in the fire line, handing along buckets to quench a fire, free to break the line by dropping out. You are just as much bound to be staunch, as the Alpine climber is under obligation not to cut, in the hour of peril, the rope that links him to his companions. You have no more right to waste the substance entrusted to your care, of which God has made you the steward, than the guardian has a right to squander the property of his ward. You have no more liberty to leave your post than a sentinel has to leave his. You are no more free to stand aside from the service of God and humanity, than the patriot is free to betray his country's interest and go over to the enemy. "No man liveth to himself." This wonderful invention that so much enlarges the range of my message, and that opens up such long vistas in various directions, of new pleasures, new conveniences, new facilities, new utilities and new developments, will also prove a new bond uniting us closer and closer together in fellowship, and binding our people into a greater solidarity. May such be the influence of these Sunday afternoon talks. May they make the solitary feel that he is a member of one great family. May they make the frivolous and irresponsible realize how they are bound up with others in the bundle of life and stand in the great judgment of God. May they be blessed in helping on the weaving of the great tapestry or in building up the great city, known as the City of God.

THE RECTOR'S LETTER

My dear Parishioners:

The annual reports tell their own story. It has been necessary on account of economy, to abbreviate some of them a little, and to omit a few letters. The special sources of thanksgiving are that the Church is entirely out of debt (this statement includes my office which at this time last year was greatly behind) that we had a Confirmation Class of nineteen; that nineteen transfers have been brought to us from St. Andrew's; that a new band has been formed in the Girls' Friendly; that the young people have organized a society of young men and women to be known as Old St. Stephen's Club; that the Dancing Class has had a successful year and most remarkable of all that our 5,000 dollars has been raised for a Community House, and a group is steadily working for another fair for that object next year.

I hate to give up so much space to that Radio address; but it has been asked for by so many persons that I feel constrained to gratify them. It will be an interesting memorial in our archives of this development. I speak of our archives, since our copies of the Parish News are bound up into volumes, which preserves in this way the history of the parish.

It is a source of great regret that his private affairs have compelled Mr. Atmore to resign the Accounting Wardenship which he administered with such marked efficiency and such helpful system. We owe him a great debt for coming to our assistance at a crisis. May He who has lead us safely through the bereavements and trials of this year, lead us through the years to come. The only change in the personnel of the Vestry is the retirement of Mr. Robert T. Boyd, who declined a re-election after many years of faithful service. He will be especially missed in the handling of the Summer outing fund. Mr. Wm. H. Hollar, Jr., whose father was one of our most active Vestrymen, was elected to fill the vacancy.

Our great problems now are to find a suitable rectory and to agree on some feasible plan for an enlarged Community House. The Federal Reserve Bank has not been able to make a proposal that the Vestry can accept. I cannot close without expressing my special gratitude to those who have made it possible for me to run the parish this winter, without the aid of a regular assistant, by undertaking among them the office work that had gradually accumulated in Mr. Keable's hands.

Without the aid of Misses Headman, Mrs. Harper, Mr. W. Gardiner Crowell, I should have been badly off. Mr. Barnes has also greatly assisted me by taking charge of the finances of the Parish News.

I must also express my special gratitude to those who paid off the indebtedness.

Yours cordially

Carl E. Grammer

REPORT OF THE ACCOUNTING WARDEN FOR APRIL 1922.

For the first quarter of 1922, that is, from January 1st to March 31st, our Receipts for General Expenses were $6,000.00
Expenditures 5,700.00

Balance carried to second quarter . $ 300.00

In order to meet the deficit of $5,652.75, we raised a fund amounting to $5,227.90, leaving $424.85 which has since been secured. The deficit has thus been paid in full. By doing this we save considerable interest on money borrowed for general expenses.

For purposes other than Church Expenses we raised $2,000.00 and paid out $1,500.00.

Our Endowment increased $617.25 by legacy and contributions and has been very largely increased by the increased value of our securities. The Church owes a debt of thanks to Mr. Moore and to the Investment Committee for their foresight in so investing the Church Funds as to give the Church the benefit of this advance.

As the Rectory Committee was unable to secure the house on Clinton Street and as Dr. Grammer is compelled to move not later than September it will be necessary to take immediate action to secure a suitable Rectory for him.

Owing to illness and consequent disorganization in my business I will be unable to continue as Accounting Warden after the election in May. I want to express my thanks to the Vestry for the constant support you have given me and I will be glad to co-operate with my successor so as to make the transfer to him as easy as possible. Craig Atmore

The Garden Party and Fair at Wyck, 6026 Germantown Avenue, will be held on Thursday, June 8th, from 2 to 9 P.M. Card of admission 25 cents. Music, Supper, Entertainment. Tickets procurable from Miss Bell or the Verger.

BENEVOLENT SOCIETY REPORT

THE Benevolent Society opened the first Wednesday in November with a good attendance.

We have taken the General Hospital in addition to those we have had in past years. Our highest record before the war was 7,000 articles but this year we have far surpassed that and made 7,500. The garments have been well cut, and the sewing exceptionally good. Although many in the society have been ill, those who were left always have done the double work cheerfully. A letter came from Miss Olga Newmann, the Russian lady, that she had received the money, and was warmly clad; our box was all wool garments and a pair of blankets.

The women of this society realize the importance of regular attendance or we could never have accomplished what we have in six months. Cornelia L. Ewing, Vice-Chairman.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

THE Woman's Auxiliary of St. Stephen's has held the usual seven meetings during the season, and a corporate communion was celebrated by all the branches of the Auxiliary on Sunday, October 16, 1921. Twenty-five members were present at St. Stephen's.

Mrs. William H. Ramsaur of Liberia was the speaker of the first meeting in October and a contribution of twenty-five dollars was made toward her work, and it was a great shock to hear of her death occurring a few months later immediately after her return to Liberia. It is suggested that a memorial to her should be undertaken by the Pennsylvania Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary in the form of an addition to the hospital in which she was so much interested, to be called the Sarah E. Conway Ramsaur Annex and this work will be taken up in the autumn.

Plans for the Bazaar for St. Stephen's Community House were discussed at the November meeting, Mrs. Howard Reifsnyder giving a general outline of the plan, and the successful result under her able management is well known and appreciated.

The December meeting was devoted to hearing the reports of delegates and arranging for Christmas gifts to settlement houses and other charitable enterprises, and in January it was an unusual pleasure to have Mrs. Roland S. Morris tell her experiences in Japan and the impression made upon her by the Japanese; and at the tea following she described in an informal manner the significance of many of the souvenirs she had accumulated.

In February, for lack of time but a brief review of a "Century of Endeavor" written by Miss Emery was given by Miss Laura Bell and amplified later in the PARISH NEWS.

In March, Ven. Winfred H. Ziegler, Archdeacon of New Mexico, gave a stirring account of life in that state and his appeal in behalf of St. John's Sanatorium in Albuquerque met with a generous response of over one hundred dollars.

The election in April brought the meetings to a close, and it was with regret that the Auxiliary relinquished Miss Ella Headman as Treasurer, which office she had filled so faithfully and with such regularity.

Many opportunities are offered to those who attend the meetings to become more familiar with so called church work by going to all-day missionary meetings, to evening missionary mass meetings, to educational days, to delightful meetings in country homes and gardens and to assume that individual responsibility without which there can be neither life nor growth.

The interest in parochial affairs stretches forth to those of the diocese, and it is fitting to mention here the approaching fair at Wyck, the colonial home and garden of Mr. Caspar Wister Haines, 6026 Germantown Avenue, on Thursday, June 8th, from two until nine o'clock. St. Stephen's joins with the other churches of the North Convocation in aiding the Italian Mission and the Hebrew Christian Mission, the beneficiaries this year, and it is requested that the members contribute either money or fancy and domestic articles for sale at that table. The cafeteria, music and dances on the lawn by foreign children are always popular features of this garden party, and every one is welcome.

In reviewing the hours spent together in mutual study as in the Mission Study Class, in actual work as at fairs and other charitable undertakings, in contributing to missions, in hearing speakers from various parts of the country, in reunions to plan for others, the scope of the Woman's Auxiliary covers a wide field, and there is a sense of comradeship and good feeling developed which goes far toward furthering the work set before all those of Christ's fold who love to serve Him and do His will. Would that all the women of St. Stephen's Parish would share in it.

LAURA BELL,
President,
Woman's Auxiliary of St. Stephen's.

REPORT OF THE UNITED THANK OFFERING OF ST. STEPHEN'S PARISH

THE Eighteenth Annual Service of the Women of the Diocese of Pennsylvania with the Presentation of the United Thank Offering was held at the Pro-Cathedral of St. Mary, on Thursday, April the twenty-seventh, at ten o'clock.

Bishop Rhinelander preached from the text: "Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

One hundred and eighty, of the two hundred and sixteen parishes in the Diocese, were represented by a total offering for the year of $12,190.58 from about 8,000 of the 40,000 women communicants.

St. Stephen's United Thank Offering of 1922 is $409.35 from ninety-four subscribers.

Reviewing the other years of this Triennium the amounts are: for 1920, $337.00; for 1921, $400.00 from 80 subscribers, making a triennial total of $1,146.35.

What might it have been if every woman and girl communicant in St. Stephen's could have had even a small share in the offering? The vision of the ideal parish in the United Thank Offering is not one woman missing at roll call.

The offering at Detroit in 1919 was called the Victory Thank Offering for the close of the war. The one to be presented at Portland, Oregon, in September next, will be the Peace Thank Offering.

If there are any in the Parish who still desire the opportunity for a personal representation in this United Peace Thank Offering of 1922, the treasurer will be glad to receive any amount, large or small, until August the twenty-fifth.

I am closing this triennium by sending to every one on the subscribers' list a printed greeting from the three past and present treasurers of this Diocese—the Diocese which has always led in this great Woman's movement in the Church, and I am hoping for a renewed effort and larger results in 1923.

Respectfully submitted,
ANNA J. MAGEE, Treasurer,
St. Stephen's United Thank Offering.

MOTHERS' MEETING REPORT

The Mothers' Meeting has had a successful year. We have added eighteen new members to our roll, many of them young women with large families of children, who find their only recreation in these weekly social evenings. We have lost through death, one of our faithful members. We feel that we have cause for some pride in our financial report this year. With the proceeds from our own Sale in 1920, and the addition of a gift from Mr. Reifsnyder we purchased a rug for the Vestry Room.

During the year we have contributed to Dr. Grammer's present, to the fund for Mrs.

Keable, to the Church Deficit Fund, given $35 to the Community House Fund and made over $250 at our table at the Fair. The Mothers have sent flowers to the members who have had illness or death in their families. We have a balance of $36 in our treasury.

We feel that having contributed, even in so small a way, to every special fund that has been raised this year, binds us more closely to St. Stephen's Church and gives us a real share in the activity of the Parish.

Respectfully submitted,
B. M. HARPER, President

ST. STEPHEN'S AID SOCIETY

The Aid Society held its meetings as usual on Friday mornings during Lent. There was an average attendance of ten members. The whole-hearted co-operation of these workers resulted in renewed interest and very excellent work. All our members expressed regret that with the close of the Lenten Season these pleasant Fridays were discontinued.

One hundred and seven garments were made and seventy-two miscellaneous articles.

Thanks are due to the Benevolent Society for their timely assistance.

GIRLS' FRIENDLY SOCIETY

ST. STEPHEN'S Branch of the Girls' Friendly Society held its first meeting for the season of 1921-1922 on Monday evening, October 10th, under the shadow of a great sorrow, for our ever faithful and helpful friend, the Rev. Frederick B. Keable, had that morning passed to the higher and fuller life. His memory is held in affectionate regard by the members of the Branch, to whom he was always a true and sympathetic friend.

On November 28th, the Branch entertained the Tenth Annual Southern Neighborhood Conference. The chief address of the evening was on Disarmament.

On December 12th, two members from the Branch of St. Jude and The Nativity visited us and explained their new method of self-government. This subject was later taken up by our Senior Members, who unanimously voted to continue our present form of self-government.

One of our Associates gave a talk on "Thrift" and it has been interesting and encouraging to learn that sixty-six (66) of our members save regularly, and that fifty-four (54) of this number have been saving from one to ten years.

Our recreation has been in the form of:

A delightful reading by Miss Laura Bell.

A Hallowe'en Costume Party.

A Christmas entertainment when the members presented "A Modern Magazine."

A Pantomime Farce "And the Light Went Out."

An evening of music

An evening of monologues by Miss Frances Leedom Hess.

Our work for and gifts to others have been as follows:

At Christmas, fifty-nine large, well-filled stockings and a quantity of dolls and toys to the children in the Philadelphia Hospital.

Thirty-three packages, each containing a half pound box of candy and a small gift, to the 21st Division of the 26th Infantry at Camp Dix.

Six hand-knitted sweaters, twenty hand-knitted children's caps and three hand-knitted pairs of stockings to the Babies' Hospital.

Fifty-two hand-knitted ear-warmers and one hand-knitted sweater to Mount Alto.

One hundred and twenty-two second-hand and twenty-seven new garments to the P. E. City Mission.

Our Lenten Work—some articles bought from the Pennsylvania Diocesan Supply Bureau and others, made by the members—sixty-five garments in all—were sent to Sandy Ridge Mission and Grace House on the Mountain, at St. Paul, Virginia.

During Lent the Married Branch Helpers again met on Thursday afternoons and this year made forty-two pieces of clothing for the Sheltering Arms.

Money Gifts to:

The Cathedral Girls' School, Anking, China	$5.00
St. Luke's Home, Phoenix, Arizona	5.00
All Saints' School, Bontoc, P. I.	5.00

One Band continued its loving care of a "Shut In", the members visiting her every few weeks. They sent her a basket of good things at Thanksgiving and "An Hour Box" at Christmas, and also gave her a "Party" in her room.

A very successful Millinery Class has been conducted through the season; the quality of the work and the style of the hats has been excellent.

Our Beneficial Fund deserves explanation. This is a fund which is used only to help any of our own members who may need bridging over a hard place. Each year a sum of money, sometimes large, sometimes small, is added to the amount already on hand. Few demands have been made on this fund, but those few have been urgent and the value of the help very real. No one but the Branch Secretary knows to whom assistance is given.

St. Stephen's co-operated with the other Branches in making the G. F. S. Fair in aid of the Seaman's Church Institute the great success it was.

At the Bazaar for St. Stephen's Community House the G. F. S. took entire charge of the Candy Table. One hundred (100) pounds of candy were made by our Associates and Members, and the gratifying amount of $308.66 was realized.

Three (3) services, conducted by Dr. Grammer, have been held in the Church, and at each of these services the organ has been played by one of our Honorary Associates, Miss Frances McCollin.

Forty-three (43) of our members were present at the Annual Service held at Holy Trinity on April 26th.

A new activity this season has been a circulating library within the Branch. The books recommended by the Reading Union and a number of other good stories have been in charge of our Literary Associate, and have been read by a large number of girls.

No report of the Branch would be complete without mention of the weekly suppers and the "Special Effort." The Branch Secretary is deeply grateful to a committee of girls who have relieved her of all responsibility concerning these suppers. Each week they are prepared and served by two or three girls and are always greatly enjoyed. With the help of a donation of canned goods, there is not only no deficit, but a balance on hand,—and the price still remains fifteen cents!

The "Special Effort"—this being work done by each individual girl to earn her share of the money the Branch gives to Mission and charitable work—was more successful than ever this year. On March 20th, a novel form of entertainment was arranged by the Committee in charge, and at that time the returns were brought in. A circus, in which the children of the Married Branch Helpers were the performers, provided the entertainment, and a wonderful circus it was, with all the real features, including a parade, clowns, a dancer in harem costume, a monkey who jumped through hoops, a tight-rope walker, a strong man, a sandwich man, a balloon boy, lemonade, peanuts, and, finally, chariot races! After the returns were all in, it was found that four hundred and fifty dollars and fifty cents ($450.50) had been earned for our work.

This amount has been voted to the following objects:

St. Stephen's Community House. (In loving memory of our kind and faithful friend The Rev. Frederick B. Keable)	$100.00
St. Stephen's Outing Fund	20.00

PARISH VISITOR'S REPORT

THE most beautiful season of the year is upon us, and as we raise our hearts with joy and thanksgiving, it seems to us that all nature is rejoicing, too. The trees put on their most beautiful garments; their tender green leaves and their budding boughs all bring joy to us because it is a foretaste of the relief of many ills that fly away at the approach of spring.

The past year has been unusually severe, and full of great hardships and deprivations for the working people. In almost every house visited, the men and boys were out of work, many had been idle a year, and some for a year and a half. It is especially hard when a man has held a position for years, and then through no fault of his own, but because of the stringency of the times or some other cause, has lost that position. Again and again he is turned away heart-sick, and he begins to feel keenly that life has conquered him, and he is down and out.

Scarcity of houses and high rents are among the main troubles. Some of our people who once paid $19 or less a month, are now compelled to pay $30 or even $35 a month, and when the men have little work, it is more than a problem for them to exist.

Last summer one of our women who supports herself and her children came to us in deep distress, as she was in arrears with her rent and about to be turned out of her home. The rent was $13 and Mr. Keable's advice was to help her. In a few days we received the following letter from her: "I am sure you will be surprised at this, but it is a fact. When I offered the landlord the money he would not accept it; he said he knew I could not pay that much. He said he could not be bothered every month with a constable's notice, so he gave us some days to get out of the house. At last I found a little house for $8 a month. It cost me $3 to move, and I spent $2 for something to eat. I do not like the house, it is away back in the corner of an alley. I do hope I will have better luck. I will start out on Monday morning with a determination to get better work."

We found the little house consisted of three rooms, one above the other, with a high brick wall so close to it that on first entering one could see nothing but darkness. But it is a shelter for her and her children. She has had work all winter and is still working.

A family whose extreme poverty (caused by the father's illness and an operation, together with lack of work) has caused us much thought for the past year, consists of the father, mother and eight children, all too young to work. Another little one is expected this summer. With all we could afford to do for them, there surely must have been of necessity a great deal of doing without.

Mrs. John Coats Browne has been most generous in her help toward the care of this special family. Mrs. Bilyeu and some of her friends sent us quite a number of new garments for these children. Miss Moore and her friends interested the Rev. Mr. Whiteside, a Methodist Minister, in this family, last summer. He placed six of the children in the country with well-to-do families, and within walking distance of each other, so that they could see each other every day, as they had never been separated before. The children all received good wholesome food and there was a marked improvement in their appearance on their return home. It certainly was a great help to us, and we appreciated it.

Some years ago we had a family of children attending our Sunday School that gave us much anxiety. The home from which these children came was in the poorest section of our city, and their parents were entirely unfit to bring them up. Through the attention of our assistant Minister at that time, a clergyman and his wife were interested in them, and decided to take one of these little girls to live in their home. She is now a young woman ready for a business career.

The minister and his wife took a deep interest in her physical, moral and intellectual development, which enabled her to graduate from the High School in three years. She is still living in the Rectory of the Clergyman, where she is a great comfort and addition to the home life. This young girl has exercised a good influence over her own family, especially her mother. The father is now dead and the mother has turned from her evil ways. She has married again, her present husband being a kind and upright man. "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these, ye did it unto me."

Miss Gebhart's annual memorial gift of $25 was a help to several families where the fathers were out of work. Many of our poor families were made glad by receiving half-worn clothing and shoes sent to the Garment Society by a number of our congregation and their friends. This Society does most excellent work; it is open every Tuesday morning during the winter from half past ten to twelve, and a number of times during the winter on Thursday evenings, from six to seven o'clock thus giving an opportunity to those who cannot come during the morning hours.

Five tons of coal were given to us by a kind friend and distributed where it was most needed. Just think what a ton of coal means to those who are forced by circumstances to buy it by the bucket!

Special thanks are due to the ladies who made the layettes during the Lenten season, as we are expecting four little new-comers this summer. We were also able to send a nice package to the Sheltering Arms for their needs.

The decoration of fruit in the church on the day of the feast of Thanksgiving is never wasted. First it gladdens the eye of all the churchgoers, and then it refreshes the poor and sick to whose homes it finds its way.

Four persons were admitted through us to the Philadelphia Hospital, and two into the Jefferson Hospital.

At Christmas one hundred and twenty baskets were given out. Many letters of thanks were received. One woman writes, "I want to thank you for that lovely basket. I think it is heavier each year, and wasn't that just one grand box of candy? It was packed so nice, it was a shame to spoil the box, and the mince pies were so good, too."

Last summer our outings were very much enjoyed. Mr. Keable and Mr. Carrigan arranged each trip for our people, and made a bright spot for many. Our first trip was the Mothers' Meeting picnic at Willow Grove. Then there were two excursions to Valley Forge by auto for our Sunday School scholars. In August a bungalow was rented for two weeks at Spring Mount, Pa., the younger boys going there the first week under the care of Captain and Mrs. Heritage; the girls the second week, with Mrs. Nissen, one of our Sunday School Teachers, taking charge. A boat was hired which gave them great pleasure, and they all enjoyed bathing in Perkiomen Creek.

The Parish Visitor when not engaged at the Parish House receiving callers and attending to other duties, is out visiting. Our people are much scattered, some living at long distances from the church, in Germantown, West Philadelphia, Fox Chase, and the extreme southern section of the city.

As I look back on the year that has passed, I am very thankful to my Heavenly Father for the health and strength He has given me to do this work, which I truly love, and for the great assistance I have received from Dr. Grammer and St. Stephen's congregation.

Respectfully submitted,
KATE H. LEWIS,
Parish Visitor.

BOARD OF VISITORS OF THE BURD SCHOOL

THE second winter in the new home has passed very happily for the children and all those interested in the welfare of the Burd School. There have been no developments of particular importance since the submission of my last report.

In March a very delightful entertainment was given which was well attended by our church members and friends of the School. The children appeared in Shadow Pictures of old nursery rhymes, accompanying these tableaux with appropriate songs. The music for one picture, which received much applause, was composed by Miss Frances McCollin, who also assisted in training the children to sing these rhymes. At the close of the entertainment two of our pupils who had recently graduated were congratulated upon having finished their school term. One received a diploma and is qualified to fill a position as typewriter and stenographer. The other pupil is now a student of Physical Culture at Temple University, hoping at the end of her course to secure a position as instructor in this branch. In each instance the congratulatory message from the Board of Trustees was accompanied by the presentation of a wrist watch, to encourage punctuality and an ever present memory of happy years in the Burd School. Three children have been withdrawn during the year owing to the re-marriage of the mother. It is a pleasure to be able to report that a former pupil has found congenial employment with a family where she has the entire charge of a little boy. She has given much satisfaction and has endeared herself to her employers.

There has been no serious illness during the year and the children are finding health and much pleasure in their interest in the garden where Miss Tappan has permitted them to sow flower seeds. Three children have been admitted during the year. There are at present two vacancies to report.

The Board of Visitors continues to find the standard of work and discipline well maintained, combined with a spirit of happiness and good feeling.

Respectfully submitted,
EMILY K. CAMPBELL,
Chairman of the Board of Visitors.

REPORT ON YOUNG MEN'S CLUB, ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH

DR. CARL E. GRAMMER,

DEAR DOCTOR GRAMMER:

Old St. Stephen's Club had its origin in the group of young boys who have been associated with the Church and have grown to manhood under the friendly interest and helpfulness of Mr. Boyd and several others for many years past. After the work in the Newsboys' Club was discontinued, it was carried on as the Young Men's Club, under the leadership of Mr. Keable. The first important move was in the organization of the baseball club, which was fully equipped through the generous assistance of a number of members of the congregation and some friends outside. The baseball season was impaired by the lack of an athletic field in which to practice, and without which no organization of the kind can attain proficiency. Previous to the sale of St. Stephen's farm, it was the custom for the young men to go there. The death of Mr. Keable was a great loss, but we have endeavored since to keep up the morale. Our membership was about forty, of which number we could probably count on twenty or less for fairly regular attendance. The basketball team was organized and had a very successful season, being defeated only twice in the season in the games played in the Church League. Experience proved, however, that the club attendance suffered by reason of the meeting nights being entirely given up to practice and games, and finally, by unanimous vote of the club, it was decided to discontinue the League games. We had, at various meetings, discussed the question of having a dramatic performance, this not being new to some of the young people, and early in January, it was decided that we would endeavor to present a farce comedy, entitled "Clarence", and the young people comprising the cast, have been working earnestly in study and rehearsals to that end, under the direction of Mr. Blackwell and Mr. Fox, and they report that the progress made has been very satisfactory. In passing, it is only just to call attention to the faithful and untiring efforts in this work, of Mr. Thomas J. Bell and Mr. Carrigan.

On Wednesday April 19, 1922, was held the first formal meeting at which the young ladies were present, and by unanimous vote the name "Old St. Stephen's Club" was adopted. The officers elected were: President, F. G. Cooper; Vice-President, Miss Florence Sherrard; Secretary, Walter McGowan; Treasurer, Robert T. Boyd; Assistant Treasurer, Miss Anna Bixler. A permanent entertainment committee, consisting of three young ladies and three young men, was appointed for the ensuing year, and it is hoped that the club membership will be increased, and that our efforts to provide pleasant and instructive entertainment will prove successful.

Respectfully submitted,
F. G. COOPER.

CHURCH PERIODICAL CLUB

THE forwarding of current periodicals regularly by individual members of St. Stephen's constitutes the first and largest work of the Church Periodical Club, developing the personal touch between sender and recipient.

That is the basis of all our effort.

The books and periodicals vary from the Bible to fashion magazines; the places reached from Liberia to Alaska; the spirit is that of Christmas carried all through the year.

During the month of November the same appeals were sent out as in the previous year and met with an even more generous response, for thirty-three dollars were received.

This was used to purchase Christmas cheer.

The little Indian boys and girls at Cannon Ball, North Dakota, received two packages of new and unbreakable games and toys; the older folks at the same mission, a package of twenty-seven new and warm and fleecy articles of clothing.

Another package of toys and games went to help the Rev. Percy C. Adams in his work among the miners at Ashland, Pa.; and another to the Rev. A. H. Beer for his poor people at Santa Domingo; and still another to a clergyman's family in the South.

All were most gratefully received.

In answer to numerous appeals for books from needy theological students, a generous church member very kindly supplied the funds for their purchase.

In his acknowledgment for books sent, one such student, Mr. Samuel Hardman, of Red Cloud, Nebraska, writes: "The splendid response by your branch of the Church Periodical Club is most helpful."

Another student, now the Rev. Joseph C. Jamison, of Oklahoma, ordained February 16th, after thanking us for the books supplied him, said: "I shall put them at the service of other candidates for the Ministry, and competent Lay Readers, so that their mission of help may be continued and extended."

We contributed five dollars to help in buying books for a Mission Study Traveling Library to be used in the rural districts of Pennsylvania.

Catechisms and tracts were sent to the Rev. F. M. Johnson, Jr., at Marfa, Texas.

In sending thanks, he assures us that "they will be used to good advantage." He has thirteen missions in his care.

We have given fifty dollars in all toward the purchase of books for the library of St. Paul's College, Tokyo, Japan.

Of this amount, twenty dollars were collected last year (1921) and the remaining thirty, since January 1, 1922.

Magazines are taken regularly to the sick and convalescent in the hospitals and homes throughout the city.

Thus the Church Periodical Club stands for personal interest, for friendships formed, and for a constant reminder, especially to our far-away missionaries, of the support of the Church at home; for as one has well said: "It helps us to realize the Communion of Saints."

REPORT OF THE DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL

THE Vacation Bible School opened Monday, June 27, 1921, with an excellent attendance, and continued in session six weeks. Total enrollment was one hundred and fifteen and average attendance forty-seven. Americans, Greeks, Russians, Hungarians, Lithuanians, Italians and Germans were the nationalities represented in the school. Church connection of entire enrollment—thirty-one Protestants, thirty-one Jewish and fifty-three Catholics. A manual training teacher and a kindergarten teacher together with the principal were in charge of the school.

The results of the Vacation Bible School are worth while as it takes the children off the streets for six weeks in the hot summer. Their lives are thus made safer and their parents are free from anxiety. To keep their hands busy in making practical and useful articles is worth while. To instill patriotism is worth while. To teach as many Bible lessons in six weeks as a Sunday School could in seven months is worth while. Thus one sees that the Bible School proved to be of great interest and untold value to the children, as well as being the means of a great amount of joy and happiness.

The boys and girls were very enthusiastic and eager to make things to sell at the Bazaar held for the purpose of the new Community House. They made hammocks, string holders, skirt holders, a reed basket, a whisk-broom holder and wash cloths which brought in the sum of $33. This was most encouraging.

The White-Williams Foundation of 1522 Cherry Street co-operated with the school in that they kept in touch with a certain family whose children would often play on their way to school and probably not reach the school before it was out and their parents desired the children to attend the Vacation school daily. By this co-operation we were able to keep these children in school. Since last summer these same children of which I have spoken, have become members of our Sunday School. All told, there are nine children of the Vacation Bible School who have become members of our Sunday School during this past year. These results are very apparent and really worth while.

Preparations for the coming season are well under way, and the children are all anxiously waiting for Monday, June 26th, on which day the school will open. It will close on Friday, August 4th.

MISSION STUDY CLASS

THE St. Stephen's Parish class for the study of Missions met every Friday morning during Lent, in the Parish house. The class consisted of eight regular members under the Leadership of Mrs. Horner-Smith.

The "Study" that included a "Survey" of the countries of the Orient, Liberia, as well as the colored people of our own Land, and the Southern Mountaineers, must have seemed a large subject to handle, yet our Leader made each lesson one of definite impression.

The close attention of the members of the class and the animated discussion that often followed was an evidence of their interest in the subject and also without doubt, an earnest of the achievement of the object pursued by the teacher, namely, "the development of the Missionary mind."

A voluntary offering for the Southern Mountaineers, amounting to $25, was presented at the Diocesan meeting of all the classes held at the close of the season.

This offering from the St. Stephen's Parish Mission Study Class was considered as a portion of the "appropriation for St. Stephen's Parish."

ANNA FARRELL,
Educational Secretary of St. Stephen's.

May, 1922.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

MUCH as we missed Mr. Keable we are thankful to say that the Sunday School has had a good year. The Secretary, Mrs. Nissen, reports one hundred and four Scholars in the Main School, and fifty in the Primary (under the conscientious leadership of Miss Minnie Corrigan). With fifteen teachers and three officers—in all, we have a total membership of one hundred and seventy-two.

Our School never closes, but is continuous, winter and summer. The Superintendent in summer teaches it as one big class. The winter sessions are from October to July, with a division into the Main and Primary departments, and these divided and graded into fifteen classes, with fifteen efficient and loyal teachers.

Christmas has its annual Play, Easter its Carol Service in the church, then the bringing to Confirmation, and June its excursion. Last year we went to Valley Forge, a most delightful occasion.

The highest type of educational motion pictures are used before each session of the school, thus giving us a punctual and interested attendance of pupils. Our awards for bringing in new scholars have been useful and successful. Our lessons have been catechised by the Rector and reviewed on the Screen by the Superintendent. The Treasurer, Mrs. Keable, reports a balance of $179.55 in our treasury, after all expenses have been paid up to May 10th. For this we are indebted to the liberal contribution of our church friends.

We have contributed to Missions, in our Sunday offerings, by report of our treasurer $232.88; besides our Lenten offerings to the same cause was $157.18—total for the year $390.06.

So we can happily report an enthusiasm and faithfulness most cheering.

GEORGE H. STREAKER,
Superintendent.

A SCOTCH BLESSING

If after the kirk you bide a wee,
There's some wad like to speak to ye.
If after kirk you rise and flee,
We'll all seem cold and stiff to ye.
The one that's in the seat wi' ye
Is stranger here than you, maybe;
All here hae got their fears and cares;
Add you your soul unto our prayers;
Be you our angel unawares.

We feel greatly indebted to our many friends who helped us make our Cake and Candy Sale such a success. It was an experiment this time and we were uncertain as to results; but we learned that many people enjoy home-made cakes and candies; $58.00 was realized at this sale, and to this sum we were able to add $12.00 which has been contributed from time to time by our members, making a total of $70.00 which we have given to the Treasurer of the Community House Fund in loving memory of Mrs. Vanderslice—our first inspiration in this work. To all who helped us in any way, whether by contributions or by coming to purchase, many thanks.

FEMALE P. E. PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY

At the last meeting of the Female Protestant Episcopal Prayer Book Society, the delegates from the different parishes were urged to try to add to the number of subscribers from their respective churches.

Owing to the Prayer Books and Hymnals having more than doubled in price for the first time, this Society finds itself unable to respond to the many appeals, of which there is a long waiting list. With an increase in the number of subscribers from each church, the difficulty will at once be solved.

The appeals from the small churches and missions from even the most remote parts of the country, are often most pathetic, and we cannot fail to see the necessity for the books if the work is to be carried on. The books are furnished free of charge. Will not some members of the congregation show their interest in this work, by joining the Society of which the dues are one dollar or more yearly.

Checks may be sent, or the money given to Miss Washington, 2008 Walnut Street.

LENTEN SPEAKERS

March 12 to 16 inclusive—Rev. Charles Wood, D.D., Church of the Covenant, Washington, D. C.

March 19 to 23 inclusive,—Right Rev. Philip Cook, D.D., Bishop of Delaware.

March 24—Rev. William Y. Edwards, Rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd.

March 26 and 27—Rev. Z. B. Phillips, D.D., Rector of the Church of the Saviour.

March 28, 29, 30—Rev. Carl E. Grammer, S.T.D., Rector of St. Stephen's.

March 31—Rev. Albert Stork, Assistant at St. Stephen's Church.

THE RECTOR'S LETTER

Sweet Briar, Virginia,
March 2nd, 1923.

My Dear Parishioners:

I think that you will agree with me that our Centennial was a wonderful success. From the opening reception at the Burd School to the closing banquet every celebration had a special interest. The sermon of Sunday morning and the papers of the Historical Evening will be published, I am sure, and will be greatly valued. The exquisitely decorated chancel, the glorious music and the cordial words of Bishop Garland and Dr. Twombly were worthy of the 100th anniversary of our Consecration, and of the great gift that Miss Magee presented to the Church.

If there had been sufficient time at our disposal I should have liked to ask Dr. Washburn of Christ Church, and Dr. Hill of the First Presbyterian Church, the one, the rector of the oldest Episcopalia and the other the pastor of the oldest Presbyterian Church in the City, our near neighbors, to speak some words of congratulation and fellowship on our historical night. If the following letter from Dr. Washburn had been received in time, I should have read it at one of the celebrations. Letit stand here as a greeting from the Mother Parish of the City:

My dear Dr. Grammer:

The courteous invitation of the Rector, Church Warden and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church to attend the Centennial Celebrations is gratefully acknowledged.

I had fully hoped to attend on Wednesday evening; but find to my real regret that I am bound by a previous engagement to preach up state at that time.

May I say to you and your people at this happy time in your history how sincerely I rejoice with you on having rounded the century mark so vigorously and with such manifestations of divine approval.

In 1823 the venerated rector of Christ Church and Bishop of the Diocese was beginning to reap some of the fruits of his patient and wise spiritual leadership of the historic communion in the new Republic. He had gathered about him a remarkable group of young ministers, De Lancey, Kemper, Muhlenberg and others; amongst them Montgomery. His interest in the founding of St. Stephen's must have been more than official. You will edify and stimulate us all by the publication of the historical papers read at your anniversary.

But that which warms the heart of your brethren at this time is the reinvigoration that has been brought to every department of your venerated parish in these days.

The notable reconstruction and adornment of the edifice—within and without—is a splendid accomplishment. As our nearest neighbor to the west, it heartens us to have our downtown sister so sturdy and beautiful.

Above all we rejoice over the noble measure of religious vitality that centers in and radiates from the beautified sanctuary.

God bless the rector of St. Stephen's and his loyal congregation, and quicken in us all the zeal for His house that is consuming.

Fraternally yours,
Louis C. Washburn.

Let me thank again all those who cooperated in making these celebrations memorable, and helpful, and then turn to other themes. For a time I dare say that all of us yearn for a change of topic. Deeply as I appreciated the kind words spoken about my ministry, I felt as if it some be a relief to the congregation to have me disappear for a time. "Let us cease from man whose breath is in his nostrils, whose foundations are in the clay," said the prophet, and I hope that on Sunday you heard nothing of either the organization or the rector, but the sermon was of God who is all in all, path, motive, guide, original and end, whom to know is life, and whom to serve is the supreme end of existence.

I, myself, attained a complete change of scene by coming to this Virginia College. I have been on its Board of Directors since the beginning, and can remember many anxious sessions, and critical seasons. But the rapids and falls are now behind us, and our prosperity deepens and widens like a noble river as it broadens out into the estuary that connects it with the sea. A visit here is only a source of pleasure to a director. We are officially classed by the General Education Board as a College of the highest grade, and in our 17th year have 325 matriculate students, our utmost capacity, without a "special" student in our halls. I write this letter in the College library on Friday afternoon. A score of girls are studying at the tables. The silence is unbroken. The windows are half open, and I hear the sound of the carpenters at work on an inn that we are erecting near the library for the convenience of our visitors.

The winter climate of this region is a wonderful combination of tonic mountain breeze and warm southern sun. A blue haze covers the mountains today, and the pines, cedars, larches and magnolia trees, not to speak of Sweet Briar house's colossal boxbushes, give warmth and tone to the landscape.

The College is very proud of having secured Miss Maude Royden to speak here on March 14th. I hope that many of our congregation will hear her in Philadelphia. The newspapers report her as unfriendly to prohibition; but I can not think them accurate. When a social and moral experiment of that is no sign of wisdom for a visitor, unacquainted with our problems, or with the measure of success that prohibition has attained in a state like Kansas, where it has long been in force, to give us her opinion of the outcome. The measure of success already attained with unsympathetic agents entrusted with the enforcement of the law is a pledge of our success under more favorable auspices. The Christian sentiment of our country is practically unanimous for the prohibition laws.

We hope that Miss Royden will show the women of America that women have a call to religious teaching, as well as to charitable and administrative work. The day is not far distant, when our pulpits must be open to women of prophetic and evangelistic gifts like Anna Howard Shaw, Eva Booth, and Maude Royden. God so clearly equipped and called these women to the ministry of teaching and exhortation, that the Church ought to ask itself "Who are we that we should fight against God."

When this number of the PARISH NEWS reaches you, Lent will be half over. The noonday congregations have been most encouraging. The addresses have been on a high plane. Both Dr. Melish and Dr. Twombly are preachers of a modern theology, who have not exhausted their spiritual earnestness in reconstructing their theology. The fires that melted their old dogma into more fluid forms still send forth light and heat. I hope the members of the Congregation will consider these noonday services as parish services and realize that as such, they are entitled to their loyal attendance and helpful ushering.

It seems to me that we could not do better than devote our Easter offering to the Community House. The reconstruction of the Sunday School building is clearly our divinely appointed task. That cause should now be given the right of way. We have no reason to believe that building will be appreciably cheaper for many years. When the interior of the Church was reconstructed during the war, objection was made that the improvement should have been postponed till prices went down. We now know that such delay would have doubled their expense. He who waits in these days for falling prices, will be like Horace's traveler, who waited at the ford till the river ran dry. Our Sunday School suffers, our parish activities languish, and the community work is impossible, until we erect a new, larger and well equipped building.

Let us begin at once to raise the money with the assurance that He who has set us the task will aid us to perform it.

Let us show forth our thankfulness for the rich equipment that we have inherited from former generations, and the splendid gifts that have been made in our own day by contributing, and pledging contributions liberally to this Community House.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

The following telegram was received during our Centenial Celebration from the famous actor John Drew—who was baptized in St. Stephen's Church.

MISS EMILY BELL:

Warmest felicitations on this most auspicious occasion.

JOHN DREW,
February 28.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

In spite of the cold weather Thursday, February 15th, there were twenty members present at the Woman's Auxiliary.

There were many announcements of Lenten Meetings, Mrs. Pattison's Talks, the Aid Society and the Mission Study Class.

There were appeals from Archdeacon Baskerville through the Committee on Colored Missions for the money for salaries of teachers in the rural districts in South Carolina; Mr. Page asks for books for the people in Altivista, Va., a small textile town, and from the Diocesan Committee an appeal comes for money for a small car for Deaconess Morris in Zieglersville. She has collected seven hundred books and distributes them among the people there who are fourteen miles from a church.

The next meeting of the Auxiliary will be held March 15th.

1823 THE SUNDAY SCHOOL 1923

The teachers of St. Stephen's Sunday School are a long line of Saints, Triumphant in the past and Militant in the present. (We would that we could list them all in this article.) Dr. S. Weir Mitchell's daughter Maria, a faithful young teacher of the past, has a beautifully sculptured memorial near the altar of our sanctuary. Dr. David D. Wood, for so long our loved musical teacher, has his memory honored in marble near the church entrance. Clayton F. McMichael, an excellent teacher and superintendent, had his name memorialized in bronze on our Sunday School wall and this will no doubt be restored with the new building; the rest, dead and living, are recorded in the Parish papers; but more than this, all are deep in the shrines of thousands of memories—are honored in the loving hearts of those who have been trained for Christian service in St. Stephen's Sunday School and brought by them to the clergy for their sacred ministrations at Baptism, Confirmation, Death and Marriage.

On Sunday, February 25th, before the morning church service, we celebrated our One Hundredth Anniversary.

A loved young teacher of the Sunday School, married some years ago, our present Church Historian and Rector's Warden, Hon. Roland S. Morris, hence we are indebted to Mrs. Morris for thus tightening the cord of affection between the church and school. He was with us on this Anniversary and with well chosen remarks assured us of our birth as an organization, one hundred years ago, and rejoiced with us that: "The Spirit then awakened still is Living ever Young."

Mrs. Stevenson, a daughter of a former vestryman, received from us on this occasion flowers and applause, as we honored this living scholar who was a member of our school in 1861.

Among the many teachers and scholars of the past who were present (and we were crowded to overflowing), Miss Minnie Corrigan was likewise honored for her faithful work in the Primary department.

The Rector's greetings and Dr. Elwood Worcester's happy remarks and fine memories from his Rectorship, were duly appreciated. The School responded with enthusiasm and never sang the sweet old hymns better. Particularly happy was the rendering of David D. Wood's "Little Brown Penny", written by him years ago for our "Infants" as their offering hymn, and Miss Ramer who now leads the little ones, will revive its use.

A fitting close to this memorable morning, was the Baptism of a former teacher's child, Mrs. "Bessie" Cleeman Clayton Bacon's baby boy, by Doctor Worcester, at our sacred Baptismal font, where the writer and hundreds of St. Stephen's Sunday School are happy to have there been received into the great church family of Christ.

So we all look forward to the joys of the Easter season grateful and hopeful that we may "be ever living ever young".

Faithfully,

G. H. Streaker, Supt.

Mrs. William B. Campbell, Treasurer,
1711 Pine Street.

Owing to the increase in the price of flowers, it has been found impossible to provide sufficiently good flowers for the altar at our present expenditure of $2 a Sunday. Dr. Grammer has consented to allow an increase of $1 per Sunday and has requested the secretary of the Altar Society to inform the subscribers to the Memorial Flower Fund of his decision. It is hoped that this will meet with the approval and co-operation of our subscribers and that they will communicate with Mrs. Wm. B. Campbell, as to their intention of continuing their subscriptions at the advanced rate.

E. B. Campbell,
Sec. Altar Society.

THE RECTOR'S LETTER

My Dear Parishioners:

"The Lord is risen. The Lord is risen indeed." Thus did the early Christians salute one another on Easter morning, and thus I salute you today. God is good—Christ has revealed immortality. Let us be of good courage, and greet the unseen with a cheer. After death is life, and before death we have an opportunity to serve the cause and people that we love best.

Nothing gives me more concern than the proper equipment of St. Stephen's for its future. A great hotel is coming into this neighborhood, and there is every reason to believe that the population immediately around the Church will not grow less. It will doubtless change in character; but it will need a church none the less. I am convinced that the greatest need of St. Stephen's will always be a minister with a living message. He must have a fine choir and a cordial and co-operative congregation. The Church will require a Community House that can shelter its Sunday School and parochial activities, and afford a field for Community Service. Such a Community House must not be such a heavy burden that it will crush the Church to provide it with an adequate staff or in default of such co-workers exhaust all the energies of the Rector in administrative details. An effective preacher needs time for thought, reading and meeting people. St. Stephen's must not so plan its future, that its pulpit will lose its attraction. But neither can our Sunday School long flourish in its present cramped quarters. Now that we have a beautiful and splendidly equipped Church, a new, convenient and well-situated Rectory, we must round out our equipment with an adequate Community Building. I shall later, and at greater length present a plan, that has been maturing in my mind.

But the manifold engagements of the day, which included a noonday Lenten address to the students of the University in Houston Hall, a call on a candidate for confirmation, and an afternoon given to the supervision of the moving into 1008 Clinton, have postponed the editorial till late at night, and it must be brief. One service of gratitude I must mention. The expenses of our elaborate programs and music and special decorations far exceeded the moderate appropriation, made by the Vestry at my request. These additional expenses have most generously been defrayed by Miss Magee according to her custom on such occasions. I hope that it will not be long before the literature of our celebrations, the sermon of Dr. Worcester, the historical brochure of Mr. Penniman and the address of Mr. Morris may be procurable in printed form.

Let me close with a line about the envelope system. This has now become such an approved and recognized form of giving, that I am going to send to every member of my Confirmation Class a package of the envelopes. On Easter-day one-third of our fiscal year has passed. I will make a report at the Parish Meeting in May on the fidelity with which the envelopes are being used, thus far. You will note that the Parish Meeting will be postponed according to our custom till May. Due notice of the exact date will be given. I hope that we may have a good attendance and inspiring, though brief reports.

And now, brethren, I commend you unto God, and to the word of his grace that is able to build you up—Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

OLD ST. STEPHEN'S CLUB

The "History of Old St. Stephen's Club", long promised and often delayed, is nearly ready for publication.

No part of the little book will be of more interest than the appendix, which will contain an alphabetical list of the workers in the Club. I am very anxious that it should be exact, and can think of no better way to secure this accuracy, than by publishing the list here, that I may learn from the congregation, if any names have been omitted. As the last proof will be returned to the printer shortly, additional names should be sent at once.

C. E. G.

March 13, 1923.

The Rev. Carl E. Grammer, D. D.,
St. Stephen's Church,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Dr. Grammer:

You certainly deserve much credit for your Centennial. It was the finest series of meetings of this kind I have ever attended and I was particularly impressed by the fact that so much of the material was supplied by the past and present members of the congregation.

I hope you will succeed in getting the Parish House and I wish you would let me know how that matter turns out.

Yours faithfully,
Elwood Worcester.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Mrs. John H. Neill was the speaker at the March meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary. She is organizing a guild of workers from different parishes who will interest themselves in giving personal service to the Philadelphia General Hospital.

There are eighteen hundred patients and many of them have no friends to visit them. The workers pledge to visit and give friendship to the patients, and help those who can walk to the meetings in the chapel; to help give entertainments and an occasional treat; to follow up the babies who are baptized in the Chapel, and in a way be sponsor to them.

Anyone can volunteer to give certain hours each week, and Mrs. Neill will appreciate it very much. Her address is 1219 South 50th Street.

The next meeting of the Auxiliary will be held April 19th at eleven o'clock.

BEULAH E. HOLLAR, Sec'y.

NOTICE OF PEW RENTS

Be pleased to take notice: that the rents of the Pews and Sittings will become due on the 25th inst. If paid by check make payable to order of Charles S. Calwell, Warden, and remit to Jos. B. Van Dusen, Jr., Room No. 1001, Stephen Girard Building, No. 21 South Twelfth Street, Phila.

COMMUNITY HOUSE FUND

After the banquet at the Burd School on February 28th, Miss Laura Bell had so many requests for copies of her poem "The Little Grey Towers", that the verses have been printed and may be obtained from the Verger at ten cents apiece for the benefit of the Community House.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

An Easter Carol Service

It is surprising how quickly the modern boy and girl read and learn musical compositions which they have not before heard.

In our Sunday School Play of last Christmas, which we gave before four large audiences, it took eight weeks of practice, for the reason that the whole musical play, of one and a half hours' duration, had to be all memorized.

In our Easter Carols, which are all new, the words will be printed on the programs; yet the music of seven carols was well learned by the school in three sessions. In order to perfect them we will practice these most tuneful selections for six Sunday mornings.

Kindly keep in mind, Sunday morning of April 8th, the next after Easter, when the Sunday School, scholars and teachers will have their annual procession into the church, at the regular morning service. You may think in different ways of the Risen Christ, but whatever your opinions may be, they will be deepened and strengthened when you hear our young people and little ones sing their Easter Carols.

We trust you will all be present. We particularly urge not only parents and relatives, but former scholars, teachers and friends of young folk, to come and join with us in expressing the joys of Easter, the coming spring, and the Risen Christ.

Faithfully,

G. H. STREAKER, Supt.

At an informal meeting of St. Stephen's Benevolent Society held March 14th, the following letter was read from the Episcopal Hospital:

Feb. 19th, 1923.

ISABEL P. DAVIS, Sec'y.

DEAR MADAM:

I wish to congratulate you for the wonderful way in which the members of your Society work. The making of nearly 450 gowns has been no small piece of work and we wish to express to you and through you to them, our appreciation of their efforts.

Very sincerely yours,

HARRIET M. GILLETT.
Directress of Nurses.

NUGGETS OF WISDOM

The Church Militant is no place for saints, only for human beings who would keep one another company on a difficult road and the company of ONE who went before and knows the hardships—and the glories—of the way.

MRS. WILLIAM B. CAMPBELL, Treasurer,
1711 Pine Street.

Owing to the increase in the price of flowers, it has been found impossible to provide sufficiently good flowers for the altar at our present expenditure of $2 a Sunday. Dr. Grammer has consented to allow an increase of $1 per Sunday and has requested the secretary of the Altar Society to inform the subscribers to the Memorial Flower Fund of his decision. It is hoped that this will meet with the approval and co-operation of our subscribers and that they will communicate with Mrs. Wm. B. Campbell, as to their intention of continuing their subscriptions at the advanced rate.

ELLA HEADMAN, Treasurer.

THE RECTOR'S LETTER

My Dear Parishioners:

With this number we close another volume of the Parish News. We had a fine Parish Meeting, though I should like to have had a larger attendance. It was, however, a raw, inclement evening for the season, and many of our men were out of the city or detained by pressing engagements. The various reports will show the condition of the work. They are brief, and worth reading.

Mr. Reifsnyder is such a generous helper of various causes and such a promoter of fellowship in the congregation that there was general disappointment at his refusal to allow himself to be nominated for re-election on the Vestry. With that exception all the old Vestrymen were re-elected. Two new members were added: Mr. Jay M. Whitham, who is not new to the duties of a vestryman, as he has served in that capacity in other parishes elsewhere, and Dr. Frank G. Cooper, who is the President of Old St. Stephen's Club for Young People. Readers of the Parish News will be interested to know that Mr. Whitham has collected most of the "Nuggets of Wisdom" that enrich our pages.

Since the last issue of the Parish News Miss Anna J. Magee has made the generous proposition to the Parish which has been read from the chancel and formally accepted by the Vestry, but ought to be recorded here—as these monthly numbers are bound eventually in a volume, which will constitute an authentic record of the chief events in the life of the Parish.

Her offer was that if we raise the $20,000 that we have on hand for the Community House to $25,000, she will give the church $25,000 and if we raise $10,000 making our sum $30,000, she will give $30,000. This generous offer the Vestry has accepted in the name of the congregation. It was resolved to set to work at once to collect subscriptions. Ten thousand dollars is a good deal of money, but let us remember how we took Liberty Loan and Victory Bonds during the war. We felt that Patriotism required it and we managed it somehow. Now Providence has placed this task upon us. Our Sunday School Building was always inadequate; now is the time to erect an edifice that will serve a larger purpose and enable our church to do a community work, as well as develop its own societies. I hope the committee will ask for pledges that cover two years. This will lighten the burden. Greatly do we miss at such a crisis some of our generous givers who have been taken from us. But surely the need will procure the funds. I can but hope that those who recall what valuable service St. Stephen's rendered the whole nation in the World War will come to our aid.

The loss of the use of that building for nearly two years by some of our societies was a great blow to their development. That patriotic service cost the church more than money. I say this not repiningly for it was a privilege and honor to be able to render it. It was the most remarkable achievement in the century of the church's life. But I mention it, because I feel that the service entitles the church to the assistance of our friends and well-wishers.

By the death at Atlantic City of Mrs. Elizabeth Boyce Judson, St. Stephen's lost its oldest communicant. Her husband, Dr. Oliver Judson, was a vestryman for years and was especially interested in the welfare of the Burd School. Her son, Mr. Oliver Boyce Judson, was also on the Vestry for a season. Mrs. Judson's maiden name was Boyce and she was born in Georgetown, D. C.

She was a loyal member of our Parish and one of those staunch church people able to give a reason for the hope that is in them, and also for any line of action she might approve.

After an illness of three days, she passed from these scenes in her sleep. Her funeral service was at St. Stephen's. Blessed are the dead, who die in the Lord.

Efforts are constantly being made to obtain permission for the opening of moving-picture halls and theatres on Sundays. The plea advanced is the entertainment of the masses, but the actual motive is the profits of such performances. In New York State the movement to permit Sunday performances in legitimate theatres was successfully opposed by the Actors' Equity Association. Mr. Grant Mitchell tells me that this great association is resolved to preserve for the actor one day of rest. My own investigations convince me that the operatives in the moving picture theatres would express the same desire if they dared to speak out.

We do not seek to bring back the Puritan Sabbath, or to restrict harmless pleasure on the Lord's Day, but we think that money-making should stop on Sunday for the theatre and moving-picture people as well as for the grocer and the candy store. Let entertainments that charge for admission be prohibited on the day of rest and a clear line is drawn and all occupations placed on the same footing.

In closing let me mention that the address of Dr. James Hosmer Penniman at our Centennial Celebration has been enlarged and recast and is now published as a brochure under the title, "Philadelphia in the Early Eighteen Hundreds." Copies may be procured from Mr. Stork at fifty cents apiece. The income from the sales will go toward the Community House.

Miss Bell's verses on the Little Gray Towers, were sold for the benefit of the same cause and brought into our treasury over thirty dollars. Another contribution to the same purpose came from the Girls' Friendly in a gift of one hundred dollars in memory of Mr. Keable. Thus, the influence of his faithful ministry continues to bless the Parish.

As I give this letter to Mrs. Harper, a registered letter is handed me which contains a fourth Liberty Loan bond for one hundred dollars. This bond is presented to St. Stephen's Community House in memory of their "dear Mother, Mrs. Sarah C. E. Thackara, who has been gone from us just one year," by her children.

What a hopeful sign is such a gift.

Yours cordially,

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

THE PARISH MEETING

The Parish Meeting was held according to our custom on the second Wednesday in May at 8 o'clock.

After a hymn and prayer, Dr. Grammer announced the method of procedure. A meeting of the pew holders and renters of sittings was then called with Mr. Joseph B. Van Dusen, Jr., in the chair. On motion of Mr. Atmore it was resolved that the vote of the pewholders and renters be cast for the persons nominated by the Parish Meeting. A Parish Meeting then followed, and all the old vestrymen were re-elected, with the exception of Mr. Reifsnyder, who declined a re-election for personal reasons to the manifest regret of all. Two new members were also elected: Mr. J. M. Whitham and Dr. Frank Cooper.

The reports of the various societies which follow were then read by the chairmen and secretaries. At the close refreshments were served by a committee of ladies under the chairmanship of Mrs. William B. Campbell. It was an encouraging and harmonious gathering.

TO THE USERS OF THE ENVELOPE SYSTEM

At the annual Parish meeting Dr. Grammer asked me to make some statement about the use of the envelopes.

There were sent out at the beginning of the year 322 packages accompanied by pledge cards and literature; 63 of these were never heard from, by which I mean, no pledge cards were returned, nor have any envelopes been returned to the Church; 183 envelopes are used faithfully, and three persons sent in pledge cards stating the amount pledged, but as yet no envelopes have been received. We would appreciate it very much, when another year comes, and the envelopes and cards are sent out, if everyone who intends using the envelopes would return the pledge cards, even if they do not wish to make a pledge. This is a means by which we know the packages have been received. In the case of the 63 envelopes we have no definite knowledge that they ever reached their destination.

And now may I say a few words to the users of the envelopes, with the hope you will realize that these remarks are not made in any spirit of criticism, but with the knowledge that you all wish to co-operate with us. In sending in several envelopes with one sum of money to be divided among them, please mark the amounts on each side, and also fasten the envelopes together either by banding them together, or putting them all in one large envelope. In putting money in one side only to be divided in two, mark on each side the amount they should contain.

Please do not tear the dates off the envelopes sending in several at a time, or paste one envelope over the date of another, as it is most necessary to leave the nature and objects of charity unmutilated.

ELLA HEADMAN,
Treasurer.

REPORT OF THE ACCOUNTING WARDEN

St. Stephen's Church

The finances of the Church are in a satisfactory condition. To a considerable extent this is due to large gifts for special purposes, and also to the wise administration of the finances when Mr. E. W. Moore was Accounting Warden.

At that time a large amount of Church funds was invested in Government securities, purchased at very low prices. The securities have since been sold at high prices and the funds re-invested in first mortgages, bearing six per cent. This has increased our Principal Account and the interest returns to the church.

Mr. Atmore during his short term as Accounting Warden modernized the books and accounts so that the present Accounting Warden found his task comparatively easy.

In addition to the increase in Principal Account from the profits on sales of securities, we have received for the account of the Endowment Fund, between the period January 1, 1922, to April 30, 1923, a total of $5,500.

The amount collected and paid for work within the Church—in other words, operating expenses—was $31,100.

There was also collected for work outside the Church—societies, missions, etc., $12,300.

During this period the improvements to the exterior of the Church were made, costing $14,400, which amount was contributed by Miss Magee.

The new Rectory at 1008 Clinton Street was purchased and improved, costing the Church $23,000 in addition to the $10,000 which Miss Magee contributed for this purpose.

Of course everyone is familiar with the loss which we have had by fire, part of the Sunday School building having been destroyed. The fund now in the Accounting Warden's hands for the purpose of rebuilding the Sunday School amounts to $20,620. Of this amount $10,900 was received from insurance, and the balance collected from various sources, principally as the result of the activities of the ladies of the Church.

The income from invested funds in the General Endowment Account will not be affected to any great extent, although $23,000 worth of securities were sold and used for the purchase and improvements of the new Rectory. This condition is due to the fact that certain securities were sold in 1922 on which the income averaged from four and one-half per cent. to five per cent., and this money was re-invested in mortgages now yielding six per cent.

Our budget for the year 1923 of possible receipts and expenditures shows a total amount receivable from endowment, collections and other sources of $23,375, and our estimated expenses for the same period amount to about $24,200, so a probable deficit will be shown for the year of $845. This is not figuring on any special expenditures for improvements or repairs.

Respectfully submitted,
CHARLES S. CALWELL,
Accounting Warden.

REPORT OF THE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY OF ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH

For the Year Ending May 9, 1923

The Benevolent Society opened, as usual, the first Wednesday in November. At the end of December our beloved Vice-President, Miss Ewing, suffered a great loss in the death of her brother, Mr. J. Hunter Ewing, since which time she has been seriously ill, but we are all thankful that she is now on the road to recovery. Her absence was keenly felt as she has endeared herself to us all by her thoughtfulness and loving kindness. Under her influence each one tries to do her best.

We have worked hard to make this the banner year of the society and have succeeded, having made 7382 articles, the largest number ever accomplished.

Through the efforts of the Assistant five new hospitals were added to our list; we now do work for twenty-five, the chief ones being Episcopal, Jefferson, Philadelphia General, University and Woman's Hospital of West Philadelphia, and they all tell us the work is beautifully done.

We also made fifty aprons for the Church Supply Bureau, which credits St. Stephen's $50 towards its apportionment.

We closed for the season this morning, when ice cream and cake, donated by several members, were served to the sewers in appreciation of their faithfulness during the past year.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Another year has passed and this annual record of the Woman's Auxiliary is duly presented. Seven meetings have been held with an average attendance of twenty-two. There were two resignations and two deaths and five new members were added to the list. The delegates have brought reports from the different Committees, and Mrs. J. Alison Scott, President of the Pennsylvania Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary, keeps in constant touch with the various parishes, either by correspondence or in person, and was the speaker at the November meeting, when she gave details of the General Convention in Portland, Oregon, which she attended as a delegate. There was also an account given of a visit to the Holy Land by Miss Laura Bell at the meeting in October, and Mrs. W. H. George spoke on the Budget and Priorities at the December meeting.

In January it was a great pleasure to welcome Mrs. Grafton Burke from Fort Yukon, Alaska, and to hear of the work carried on by her husband and herself at the hospital, formerly called St. Stephen's, but now is the Hudson Stuck Memorial Hospital, and twenty-five dollars were given toward its support.

Mrs. John H. Neill spoke one morning on Volunteer Hospital Work, making a plea for helpers from every auxiliary to visit the Philadelphia General Hospital and bring a little cheer into the lives of the patients. Other meetings were devoted to arrangements for Lenten classes and to a Conference to discuss and explain the status of parish quotas and Dr. Grammer threw light on the requirements for St. Stephen's.

Through attendance at the monthly meetings at the Church House the delegates become familiar with all forms of missionary activity throughout the United States, China, Japan, Liberia, Mexico and Cuba, and have many opportunities offered them for active service in united effort to advance the work for our Lord in the extension of His kingdom, also to hear and meet those of His workers who are especially identified with missionary stations, and, above all, the privilege is given to respond to the call to those quiet hours appointed to meet together for meditation and prayer, to be thus refreshed and better endowed with spiritual zeal.

LAURA BELL,
Pres. St. Stephen's Woman's Auxiliary.

REPORT OF ST. STEPHEN'S UNITED THANK OFFERING FOR 1923

The Nineteenth Annual Service of the Women of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, with the presentation of the United Thank Offering, took place at St. James's Church, on Thursday, April 26, 1923. The attendance was notable for its size and devotion. The Rev. Dr. Mockridge preached from the Epistle of St. Paul to the Colossians, 2nd Chapter, six and seventh verses—an illuminating sermon. A Celebration of the Holy Communion followed with the Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Garland as the Celebrant.

The offering of this the first year of the present Triennium totalled $11,559.74, being the largest but one of all the first-year offerings—and that one having had a special Thanksgiving.

Frequently, during the year, the Diocesan Treasurer, Mrs. John P. Hollingsworth, has stressed the importance of the ideal of a substantial increase in the number of subscribers, her watchword being "not how much, but how many" and every woman in the Parish.

The offering from St. Stephen's Parish was $400 from 128 subscribers, the largest number it has yet had. To this the Mothers' Meeting was most helpful.

It was a great pleasure to receive so substantial a contribution from the Mothers' Meeting. I fully appreciate the sacrifice represented by this offering of $30.00, from 68 subscribers whose names accompamy this offering.

The final report of the 1919 United Thank Offering with interest to December 31, 1922, showed the total amount of $509,564.61; with the number of workers at home, 68; number of workers abroad, 109; number of workers on retired list, 19; number of workers in training, 6.

In the words of the Diocesan Treasurer "Let us pray and work together now as in the past."

With grateful thanks for all your help.

Faithfully,
ANNA J. MAGEE, Parish Treasurer.

REPORT OF MOTHERS' MEETING

The Mothers' Meeting of St. Stephen's Church opened for the season of 1922 and 1923 on Thursday, November 2nd, and closed on Thursday, April 26th, with 112 names on the roll. We have lost 2 members by death and about 12 by removal and inability to come out in the evening, and have added 20 new members.

Our attendance has ranged from 28 to 90 with an average of 45.

When we realize that these members come from Fox Chase, Willow Grove, Mt. Airy, Overbrook, West Philadelphia, South Philadelphia, Kensington and from Maple Shade, Clementon, Blackwood and Audubon in New Jersey, we see that these meetings mean much to them.

Our Summer Outing, a trip to Valley Forge, was greatly enjoyed by 95 who participated, our pleasure being much increased by the presence of Dr. Grammer.

In December we held a special party in honor of Mrs. Wilder, the oldest member in point of time.

Our contribution to the Community House Fund was over $122, made at the Mothers' Table. We have sent $31 to Miss Magee for the United Offering, given $10 to the Community House Fund, spent $14 for flowers for members, filled 3 Christmas stockings for St. John's Settlement House and have a balance in the treasury of $22.48.

One member has been confirmed, and three others are awaiting the opportunity for confirmation.

Respectfully submitted,
BLANCHE M. HARPER, Pres.

REPORT OF THE GIRLS' FRIENDLY SOCIETY

In again presenting the annual report of St. Stephen's Branch of the Girls' Friendly Society, the Branch Secretary feels that no account of pleasant and profitable evenings or work accomplished can give an adequate idea of the many acts of kindness and consideration by which the members prove their fidelity to the motto of their Society—"Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ."

During the past season we have had five social evenings:

A Hallowe'en Party.

Folk dancing by children from the Southwark Neighborhood House.

A Christmas entertainment when, through the courtesy of Mr. Streaker, the Sunday School children gave "Bringing in the Yule Log."

A Valentine Party.

An evening of monologues by our great favorite, Miss Frances Leedom Hess.

Talks have been given on the following subjects:

"The Ballot and Issues Involved" by Mrs. Imogene B. Oakley. This proved so interesting and popular that Mrs. Oakley has promised to speak to us again next winter.

"From New York to Trondhjem—Norway" (Illustrated) by the Branch Secretary.

"My Impressions of Coué," by Miss Shellenberger.

"Poetry and the Drama," by Miss Shellenberger.

"African Missions" by Mrs. Wm. W. Arnett.

"My Trip to the Holy Lands," by Miss Laura Bell.

Two services have been held in the church, one of which was a Corporate Communion Service, the first the Branch has ever had. At this service 75 members were present of whom 68 partook of the communion.

The Branch took entire charge of the Supper and the Candy Table at the Bazaar given for St. Stephen's Community House, provided all the food for the Supper and almost all the candy.

At Christmas 80 large filled stockings and a box of toys, valued at $150.00, were sent to the children in the Philadelphia General Hospital.

32 hand knitted caps and sweaters were made for Carr Creek Community Centre at Dirk, Kentucky.

The Lenten Sewing, our allotment from the Department of Missions, has been finished and sent to St. Mary's Indian Mission at Nixon, Nevada, and about three dozen extra garments were made for the Episcopal Hospital.

At the Married Members' Lenten Meetings the attendance was better than it has been for some years past and a goodly number of useful pieces of clothing were made for St. Luke's Hospital, Tokio, and our own Episcopal Hospital.

One Band continues its loving care of a "Shut-in." At Thanksgiving they sent her a basket of provisions; at Christmas a "Wonder-box" containing a gift for each hour of the day and at Easter a plant. But best of all they visit her from time to time, cheering her with the presence of their young lives.

Members of another Band are writing weekly letters of cheer to soldiers in the Oteen Hospital at Oteen, North Carolina.

The most eagerly anticipated evening of the entire season is the one when the returns from the "Special Effort" are turned in. At that time an entertainment is always provided by the committee in charge and this year a Mock Trial more than fulfilled all expectations. The amount of the Speical Effort reached $400.00 and has been voted to the following objects:

St. Stephen's Community House	100.00
In memory of our kind and faithful friend, the Rev. Frederick B. Keable.
For materials for next year's Lenten sewing	60.00
Little House of St. Pantaléon	36.50
Episcopal Hospital	25.00
Home for Consumptives	25.00
Beneficial Fund	35.50
Elizabeth Roe Dunning Fund for Blind Girls	25.00
Missions and Social Service Work	25.00
Church Mission of Help	20.00
Children's Country Week Association	10.00
Church Farm School	10.00
Cape May Holiday House	10.00
Sister Elizabeth's Work—England	10.00
Children of a deceased member	5.00
Miss Wilkins' Memorial Flowers	3.00
	400.00

The Millinery Class has been taught by one of our own members and a recent exhibition of hats, worn by living models, showed the work to have been excellent.

No report of St. Stephen's Branch could ever be complete without mention of the weekly suppers. From the beginning to the end of the season the food is bought, cooked and served by faithful members and no matter what the weather or outside attractions a good hot supper is always ready for the girls who come at six o'clock.

The Branch has lost two Working Associates from its already too small number but has been most fortunate in gaining the help and interest of Mrs. David D. Wood, who has been admitted as a Working Associate.

The possibilities of The Girls' Friendly Society are measureless. The most practical and the most spiritual subjects are within its scope. St. Stephen's Branch needs at least one more earnest, devoted woman as a Working Associate. It means weekly meetings, it means learning the viewpoint of girls and knowing their lives; it means prayer that they may "be strengthened and protected" but to an Associate who really cares, life becomes enlarged and enriched through the eternal bonds of friendship.

GRACE V. D. LUCAS,
Branch Secretary.

BURD SCHOOL

As Chairman of the Board of Visitors to the Burd School, it gives me much pleasure to report that the members of our Committee have visited the School every week during the year with the exception of July and August and for a couple of weeks early in the winter during the epidemic of measles. These visits which we regard as helpful inspection have proved, we hope, of some use, as we find our interest in the school is reflected in the work of the children especially in their competitive efforts to win the reward offered for good behavior and the neat condition of rooms and dormitories with special attention given to the care and tidiness of bureau drawers and closets. Their monthly reports from the Public Schools are quite excellent and the record of Burd School girls both at school and at home is an evidence of the standard set by our Principal, who is always ready to help and to encourage.

In February, during the week set aside for the Centennial celebration of the Church, a reception and dinner were given at the school. During the afternoon reception the children sang carols ably led by Miss McCollin and under Dr. Grammer's direction, gave recitations from the Psalms and the Gospels, one child after another taking up the recitation even in the middle of a sentence when called upon by Dr. Grammer, giving a striking example of well trained and active memories. The night of the dinner the children sang a Grace, written by Miss Louise Betts Edwards and set to music by Miss McCollin. The large assembly room used as a dining room on this occasion presented a beautiful appearance made so by a great profusion of lovely flowers. Both of these festivities were most delightful and will furnish pleasant memories for Burd School annals.

Miss Tappen, our Principal, after five years of faithful service has asked for and obtained leave of absence for five months during the coming summer. During her absence Miss Lamb, her assistant, will be left in charge.

We have now forty girls in the School. Four of our older girls were confirmed during the winter. There are three admissions and one death to report, the latter due to meningitis.

Respectfully submitted,
E. K. CAMPBELL, Chairman.

May 9, 1923.

The congregation will be interested in this most gratifying letter from the Commissioner of Public Welfare. The Schick test suggested by the Commissioner had been used in the school before her suggestion was received.—C. E. G.

"MY DEAR DR. GRAMMER:

"It is a pleasure to read of the excellent work being done by the Burd School for Girls. The report of our representative is before me and I wish to congratulate you upon the ideals and achievements of the School.

"The attention that has been given to making the place a home takes it immediately out of the institutional class. But in addition to homelikeness your Superintendent has managed to create an atmosphere of beauty and charm that must have its unconscious influence upon the girls.

"There are many things which I should like to praise but the list would be too long. I will only mention the unusual opportunities given for self-development in the educational advantages offered, the outside contacts which the girls enjoy and the system of allowances through which the girls learn the value of money and gain some experience in buying.

"The health program, too, has features to which most institutions are too often oblivious. I wonder whether you have ever thought of using the Schick test for the immunization against diphtheria. If not, you would, I believe, find this the one thing to make your health protection complete.

"With best wishes for your continued good work, I am

"Very sincerely yours,
"ELLEN C. POTTER, M.D.,
"Commissioner of Public Welfare."

REPORT ON "OLD ST. STEPHEN'S CLUB", ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH

As stated in the previous report, our club was reorganized under the present title on April 19, 1922. The first event of importance was the presentation of the play "Clarence", by our club members at the Little Theatre on the evenings of May 18th, 19th and 20th. As a first attempt it proved quite successful, and we were enabled, through receipts from it, and from other small ventures, to redeem our pledge to raise $500 for the benefit of the Community House Fund, sending in our check for $600. Our club membership at the present time numbers sixty, with an average attendance of twenty-five.

Through the kindness of Mrs. Charles S. Walton, of St. David's, Pa., we were permitted to use her beautiful estate with its ponds for bathing and rowing, tennis courts, etc., and the log cabin with all conveniences, for a picnic party on June 10th, when we had sixty present. A moonlight excursion on the Delaware on the evening of August 17th, wound up the summer season of 1922. After reassembling in September, we were again the guests of Mrs. Walton at St. David's on October 7th, and were treated with the greatest kindness and courtesy. In reference to these picnic parties, it gives us pleasure to state that we were proud of the behaviour of our young people, with not a single unpleasant incident to mar the day.

Our Hallowe'en Mask Dance on November 1st, was largely attended. We wished to do something more than provide amusement for ourselves, and in Christmas week, we entertained 76 little children from the vicinity of Second and Lombard Streets, gathered together by the kindly assistance of Mrs. Clayton. The children were given toys and candy, distributed by Santa Claus, impersonated by Mr. Gonzalez, and we were assisted by Mrs. Reifsnyder, Mrs. Calwell, Mrs. Boyd and other willing helpers. We cannot be too thankful that the fire which partially destroyed our Sunday School building did not occur on this occasion.

Other events were the Valentine Dance on February 7th; a series of three instructive lectures with colored lantern slides, on March 7th, 14th and 21st, by H. D. Bailey, A.M., of Muhlenberg College, Pa., and the last event was a dance given on April 18th. With all the other branches of our church work, we are greatly in need of proper facilities, but we hope that in the near future, new quarters will be provided.

Respectfully submitted,
F. G. COOPER, Pres.

ST. STEPHEN'S AID SOCIETY

The Aid Society held its usual Meetings on Friday mornings during Lent with an average attendance of ten members.

As our present members have worked together for the past three years, these Lenten meetings are pleasant reunions and the friendly intercourse gives an additional impetus to the work. It is hoped that another year may find more members of our congregation interested in this work of making baby garments for the poor of our Parish.

110 garments were made, also 122 miscellaneous articles.

Thanks are due to the Benevolent Society for its much appreciated assistance.

REPORT OF THE PARISH VISITOR

The hard cold winter is over, and the welcome spring has come; the little crocuses and tulips are pushing up through the sod to look at the sun, the birds are beginning to plan a home among the branches of the trees; and the voice of the brook is heard once more in the woods, a babbling happy voice, joining the birds in their grateful hymn of praise that spring is actually here.

It may seem to those reading about it that the work of the Parish Visitor is monotonous, but it is really not so, for there is in each applicant who asks for help a reaching out for sympathy and understanding that goes to make a bond of closer ties than the mere giving and receiving of material things.

Many calls on the sick, in their homes or in the hospitals, were made, for it was a hard winter, and it was a winter that entailed much suffering and deprivations because of the exorbitant price of coal, and sometimes the inability to secure it at any price.

One case among many sad ones was instantly relieved by Dr. Grammer and Miss Magee; it was the case of a woman who after undergoing an operation lay helpless for a year on her bed, her only nurse being an eighteen-year-old daughter, who had also the care of the entire household, with occasional outside help from relatives. Calling upon the mother one day we found the daughter very ill, so Dr. Grammer wrote to Miss Magee, asking for the use of one of her endowed beds at the Jefferson Hospital. The request was instantly granted, and all arrangements were made to receive the patient, but alas! she lived only a few weeks, but she was made comfortable and happy until the end came, and I was with her then, to be of any comfort that I could be, for she was conscious almost to the end. Now what can we do for the mother?

We have on our hands, or rather, Dr. Robert Scott has on his hands, one of our women ill with cancer. He is very good and kind to her; another case on his "Free List." In visiting her one day we found her weeping bitterly; she had broken her glasses by lying on them in bed, not knowing they were there. But she was made happy when we had them repaired. Miss Gebhart's memorial and Mrs. Brunner's check has helped us to make her a little comfortable.

One of our interesting women living in one small room, and having had three partial strokes of paralysis, was made very happy by the present of a ton of coal, which she kept in one corner of her room, as the only place of safety for such a priceless gift.

Mrs. John Coats Browne has also taken a load of anxiety from our shoulders by her interest in a family whom we have had to relieve from time to time. By her help and encouragement the man has been enabled to keep his family together, and now has work, which for some time it seemed impossible to get, notwithstanding his anxiety and willingness to work.

A pretty tale comes like a streak of sunshine—a woman receiving from the Government a pension of twelve dollars a month, because her husband served in the Indian Wars, pays three dollars a month for her room, lives on the balance of the twelve dollars, yet every Sunday, she never fails to put ten cents in her church envelope. Is not that truly "the Widow's Mite"?

We received with joy and distributed with equal joy seven tons of coal from a "Friend indeed," and three extra tons from Mrs. Walter Douglass. All the recipients voiced their gratitude in high notes of gladness and praise.

Because those who had much bore in mind those who had little, eight families were made happy on Thanksgiving Day, and the fruit decorations of the Church also brought happiness and refreshment to the sick.

We distributed baskets to 125 families at Christmas, each basket filled as usual, with chickens, groceries, vegetables, mince pies, candy and fruit, just as we sent when times were easier, but people just as needy.

Layettes made by the Ladies' Aid Society for the little babies were sent where needed.

At the Sheltering Arms they were hailed with joy by two very young mothers, aged fourteen years.

A family of children bereft of their mother was provided for by relatives of the step-father living in North Carolina. The eldest girl refused to go, as she preferred to get work and remain in Philadelphia. One of our "mothers" kindly offered her a home which she accepted, but she did not accept any of the work she could obtain, so it became a problem what to do for her. We finally decided to place her at St. Michael's Home, Mamaranack, N. Y. The results, so far, justify our decision. She is being taught all the useful arts—sewing, dressmaking, cooking, laundry work, and is being kept at it. Each department is under the care of an Episcopal Sister, and several of these have given a favorable report of her deportment, as well as of her work. She has also been confirmed. Dr. Grammer is paying her board, while her step-father clothes her.

On a hazy day in June we had our Sunday School picnic. There were 125 in the party which started to Atlantic City to spend the day. The conductor on the train looked at us curiously, then asked if the children were going to take "a dip in the ocean." He was told that all who could afford it would do so; he then wrote a note to be presented to one of the bath houses by which all were able to have the treat of their lives, a bath in the surf, with a bathing suit and a clean towel, for ten cents. Our next treat was the pier, on which the members of the party were allowed to go on and off at will, for all wore tags. We ate our lunch at the end of the pier and we were all ready for it. In the afternoon all were delighted to have Dr. Grammer join us. We had a most enjoyable time, and all returned home safely, tired, but very happy.

Later in the summer we had our outing for "the Mothers." We had four sight-seeing autos to Valley Forge. That also was a day long to be remembered by many. One of the party wrote a letter of thankfulness: "I don't ever remember enjoying anything so much as that trip to Valley Forge; it was such a wonderful ride, it seemed to put new strength into me for days." Through Dr. Grammer's kindness I was able to brighten and cheer twenty of our women by enabling them to take a short vacation; four were sent to the Mercer Home, Atlantic City, for a week.

The sympathy, the kindness and the generosity of Dr. Grammer and of St. Stephen's people make the heart of the Parish Visitor glow with gratitude.

Respectfully submitted,

KATE H. LEWIS.

REPORT OF THE MISSION STUDY CLASS

The little group of ladies who formed the Mission Study Class of St. Stephen's Parish met in an upper room of the Parish House during Lent. The readings and discussions differed in one particular from the method usually followed.

Instead of Missions in foreign lands the foreigner in our country was considered the subject and the title the "American Mission of the Church" was given for the studies of the season of 1923.

The word "American" while it indicated a new feature in the plan of the studies was not understood to limit their influences to the boundaries of America. A prevailing characteristic of the foreign-born is the loyalty to his kindred in the old home.

The pecuniary aid he sends them is only a part or token of this loyal affection. All that he learns and acquires through the privileges of our free institutions he is eager for them to possess also.

There is the nature of an experiment in the effort of Church and nation working together for the same specific object—the making of a good citizen—but there is a difference in the basis of their work. The missionary holds that righteous dealing and integrity of character, the necessary qualities of good citizenship, can be secured only by Christian principles, and the most compelling of these is that of brotherly love. The phrase "the brotherhood of man," so often misused, is in its reality founded on the Christian belief that by the Gift of a loving God men are made brothers.

Because the foreign-born has not been met and treated as a brother the conditions have arisen which have forced nation and church to seek a remedy. There has become a necessity that is aptly described in the expression "A change in the state of mind in the nation." Instead of a mere tolerance, not to say antagonism, of the American to the foreign-born, there should be a welcome for him, which would show an appreciation of his value. For that he has value, every employer knows, be it of the skilled mechanic, or the textile worker or the laborer in the mines or the household domestic, not to mention the gifted singers and musicians, the inventors and discoverers.

The recognition and appreciation of the merits of the foreign-born was the prevailing idea of the committee who made the assignments of the lessons for the classes. The text gives repeated illustrations of loyal service and valuable contributions from these representatives of the various nationalities.

A recital, to spread the information, that is well fitted to foster the spirit of unity and to create the bond of brotherly love. This unity and this love is the underlying and controlling effort of the church.

And the aim and hope of the Mission Study Classes was to give efficient aid in the attainment of this desired result.

On the 19th of April a closing session was held in the Parish House of the church of the Holy Trinity, when offerings were made from all the classes in the diocese.

The contributions from St. Stephen's Parish of $30.00 was assigned to "the general work of the church to carry out its programme of work among the American Missions."

This amount is counted on the quota allotted to the St. Stephen's Parish.

REPORT OF THE DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL

The Vacation Bible School opened Monday, June 26, 1922, and continued in session six weeks, closing August 3, 1922. Total enrollment was 109 and average attendance 50. Americans, Greeks, Russians, Hungarians, Lithuanians and Italians were the nationalities represented in the school. Church connection of entire enrollment—33 Protestants, 22 Jewish and 54 Catholics. A manual training teacher and a kindergarten teacher together with the principal were in charge of the school.

It was deemed necessary to change the hours of the school so as to give the cleaners more time to arrange for Church on Sundays. Therefore we held school from 9 A. M. to 12 o'clock noon, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday of each week, thus holding school four days a week instead of five. This change worked out most satisfactorily. More work was accomplished in the Bible, Music and Manual Departments owing to the fact that more time was allotted to each department. By the new arrangement we had 3 hours a day, 12 hours a week for school instead of 2 hours a day and 10 hours a week for school, as in previous years.

Constructive and creative instincts dwelling in every boy and girl are developed by the various manual activities taught in the school. The quantity and quality of articles made during the manual training period surpassed those of other years. These children are learning how to bring domestic order out of chaos. The children in the Kindergarten department did most unusual and interesting work under the supervision of a very capable teacher. The Bible and Music work were unusually well done. The Vacation Bible School was most successful during the summer 1922.

Preparations for the coming season are well under way and the children are looking forward with great anticipation for June 27th, on which day the school will open.

CHURCH PERIODICAL CLUB

Everywhere the Church Periodical Club is becoming better known and there are constant calls for every variety of reading matter.

For certain classes of periodicals, quarterlies and reviews, technical magazines and those for children, the demand far exceeds the supply.

Forty-five individual members of St. Stephen's regularly forward their current periodicals and receive grateful letters in return.

In some cases new subscriptions are taken out in the name of the recipients. In that way the far-away people are always sure of receiving their magazine on time.

We have all of us felt a certain thirll on opening a new magazine, fresh from the hands of the publishers.

As in former years, appeals were sent out during the month of November for money to purchase Christmas cheer.

We received thirty-two dollars and fifty cents, with which we bought toys, games and useful atricles to fill four boxes.

Two of these went to the Indian boys and girls at Cannon Ball, North Dakota; another to a poor family in the South where there are three little ones; and one to assist the Rev. Mr. Brown in his work as Rector of St. Paul's Church, at Wells, Vermont.

In answer to appeals for books from needy theological students, a generous Church member again supplied the funds for their purchase.

The Rev. Mr. Hardman (ordained in April) very gratefully sends a copy of the folder presented by him to his own congregation at Easter. He is now Rector of Grace Church, at Red Cloud, Nebraska, and wishes again to show his appreciation of our help in supplying him with books for study last year.

Deaconess Baker, stationed at St. Elizabeth's Indian School, at Wakpala, South Dakota, thanks us for the Easter cards sent them; also for the renewal of the subscription to a magazine, "The American Boy," telling us that "It is read by our boys, then by the white boys in the little town of Wakpala and then goes to the home of an Indian where some men read it."

Thanks were received for the 125 books sent to help in forming a Community Library at Altavista, Virginia.

The Rev. Charles W. Freeland, at Anniston, Alabama, thanks us for magazines which he carries to the soldiers at Camp McClellan, six miles away. He says that: "The Camp is rapidly filling up for the summer and such contributions are more than ever welcome."

Packages of novels are often sent to brighten the lives of lonely people, living far from any public libraries.

As we go forward in our work let us strive by our prayers and enthusiasm to help those who are carrying the Gospel to all nations, and our rural work at home, so they may feel that the Church Periodical Club stands behind them for Christian education and recreation.

The first half of the past season the King's Daughters devoted to making articles for the Bazaar. We were privileged to take charge of the table selling articles for infants and children—always an interesting department, and through the kindness of many friends we had very attractive things to sell. Our proceeds amounted to $114.50.

In February we had a successful cake and candy sale, which gave us $58.00. To this sum was added an amount contributed by our members, which made a total of $70.00. This money was given to the Community House Fund in loving memory of Mrs. Vanderslice.

The remainder of our time was spent in helping with a small part of the Lenten sewing and also in making a few children's dresses, which are to be given to Miss Lewis for distribution.

Two of our members spent an evening at the "Sheltering Arms." A number of games were played and prizes given, after which refreshments were served.

Each year we feel we progress at least a little, and we trust that we may be able to accomplish much more in the future.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

After our report of May, 1922, the next big event in our Sunday School was the Annual excursion which went to Atlantic City, on Tuesday, June 27, 1922. We took 125 and had a happy day at the Seashore, going via the Reading Railway and using Young's Pier for our headquarters.

The School held its sessions all through the summer in one big class, and was rearranged again in classes with teachers, on Sunday, October 1st, for the winter. Aside from our regular Diocesan series of lessons, on "The Heroes of the Church," we had a continued chapter story in moving pictures each morning, until the fire of December 29th made it impossible to continue this helpful feature. The film story of David Livingstone and Stanley's search for him in Africa, added much attraction to the School and well supplemented the lessons. We are looking cheerfully forward to the new building when we can again use moving photography. Our selection and use of moving picture illustrations we believe has been effective as well as unique in Sunday School work.

The Christmas Play of the "Yule Log" was probably the best we have given. In the four performances, we entertained about 1500, outside of the scholars.

In the mid-winter sessions after the destruction of our building, we were made comfortable in the upper rooms of the Parish House and Miss Ramer took charge of the Primary Department.

At Confirmation we had our usual class of about thirteen boys and girls to be presented to the Bishop. This is always a cheering sight to the faithful teachers.

In the Easter Carol Celebration of April 8th, we made our annual procession into the Church at the eleven o'clock service. This time we had all new carols. The Primary little ones sang sweetly, standing around the illuminated floral cross. The Rector gave us a good address and we made our Lenten offering for Missions which amounted to $136.86.

Our Treasurer, Mrs. Keable, reports that we have given in the year, altogether, $255.46 for missions.

Out of our receipts from the church we have remaining, after paying our expenses for the year, $200.40. Our Christmas festivals of the past two years have been our biggest, and yet we have a balance of $126.47 after paying the expenses of these accounts.

We are grateful to all our church friends for their kindly assistance and are looking forward happily to our June excursion and hopefully to our quarters in the new building.

Faithfully,

GEORGE H. STREAKER, Supt.

GARDEN PARTY AT WYCK

A garden party and fair will be held in the grounds of Mr. Caspar Wister Haines, 6026 Germantown Avenue, on Thursday, June 7th, from two until eight o'clock. St Stephen's will have the table for domestic and fancy articles, working with Christ Church, the Free Church of St. John and Church of the Advocate. Contributions of money or articles may be sent to Miss Laura Bell at the Parish House, 19 S. 10th Street, marked for the fair at Wyck.

A cafeteria supper will be served beginning at five o'clock, and there will be music and dancing on the lawn by foreign children, and other entertainments during the afternoon. At the request of Dr. Levis, the Dean of the Convocation of North Philadelphia, the proceeds will be given to St. Nathaniel's and other missions in that Convocation. The fair is under the auspices of the Woman's Aid of the North Convocation and St. Stephen's is one of the parishes in the district. All the members of the congregation are asked to kindly assist in this project and tickets at twenty-five cents apiece may be obtained from the verger.

HISTORY OF
OLD ST. STEPHEN'S CLUB
For the Enlisted Men
BY
REV. CARL E. GRAMMER, S.T.D.
Price $3.00
Subscriptions received at Parish House.

Most solemn promises have been made by the printer that the "History of Old St. Stephen's Club" will be delivered at the Parish House this week. So mote it be, as the Masons respond. Hope deferred not only maketh the heart sick, it also checks subscriptions and diminishes interest.

Two hundred and fifty copies have been contracted for. I hope that most of them may be sold. As years pass this record of our patriotic service will gain in interest.

A NOTE COMPILED FOR THE CENTENNIAL

The Parish Register kept by Dr. Montgomery records only the baptisms and marriages. Under Dr. Ducachet the baptisms, marriages and burials are recorded but not until Dr. Rudder's rectorship do we find a list of confirmations.

The total number of baptisms recorded in the century is 3477; confirmations, 1732; marriages, 1561; burials, 2272.

During Dr. Grammer's rectorship there have been 394 baptisms, 404 confirmations, 462 marriages, 541 burials.

Some men's troubles make 'em sour and mean. Other men—the real sort—rise above their trials and are sweeter spiritually for them.

NUGGETS

If there be some weaker one,
Give me strength to help him on;
If a blinder soul there be,
Let me guide him nearer Thee.
Make my mortal dreams come true
With the work I fain would do;
Clothe with life the weak intent,
Let me be the thing I meant;
Let me find in Thee employ—
Peace that dearer is than joy;
Out of self to love be led,
And to Heaven acclimated,
Until all things sweet and good
Seem my nature's habitude.

The heart benevolent and kind most resembles God.—Burns.

Oh do not pray for easy lives,
Pray to be stronger men.
Do not pray for tasks equal to your powers,
Pray for powers equal to your tasks.
Then the doing of your work shall be no miracle,
But you shall be a miracle.
Every day you shall wonder at yourself—
At the richness of life which has come to you by the Grace of God.

A kindly act is a kernel sown that brings forth a goodly tree
Whose branches will spread down the seas of time to the gulf of eternity.

God made him? Well, since that's the case
Howe'er he lacks in outer grace,
However he inclines to sin,
There must be something good within.

And that is why, in every man,
I try to find what good I can,
As miners seek the gold that lies
Beyond the reach of human eyes.

May not suit you to the letter,
Trust him—it will make him better;
Take him at his best.

Make friends. Do not expect friends to make you.

THE TRAVELING SALESMAN

Off the train he hops at daybreak, with a grip in either hand,
With a stomach mighty empty and a wish for Slumberland;
But he never makes a whimper, as he hops into the bus,
For he laughs at real discomforts that would bring the tears from us.
Ever laughs the traveling salesman, and his laugh rings loud and sweet
To the poor, old stranded actor or the beggar on the street,
Just because the salesman helps them to their breakfast and their fare,
Even though it takes a greenback he can ill afford to spare.
On the train he hops at midnight, and when dawn has come again
You can see him swinging blithely from the cold and dreary train.
Just another round of calling, taking orders in a town—
Orders that he thinks are corkers—that the credit man turns down.
Just another round of hustling, just a ten-mile drive or two,
When the wind is full of winter and his hands are numb and blue,
Far from home and good home cooking, far from baby and from wife,
You can bet it takes a hero to endure a salesman's life!

* * * * *

But with all his cares and hardships, when he creeps to bed alone,
In some little country roadhouse where the cold would freeze a stone,
With the same old smile he slumbers, for inside his watch's case
Is the photo of a wifie and a dimpled baby face.

Only one day at a time. There may never be a tomorrow—
Only one day at a time, and that we can live we know.
The trouble we cannot bear is only the trouble we borrow,
And the troubles that never come are the ones that fret us so.

The noblest question in the world is—
"What good may I do in it?"

When you with "He" as substitute for "I"
Have stood aside and watched yourself go by.

Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

It is pleasant to take up the pen again to write an editorial for this Monthly. I realize that this paper is a real bond of union in our scattered congregation. It is gratifying to find that it is so faithfully read. Through the kindness of Dr. Kobayashi, I am able to afford its readers authentic news of life in Japan. I commend these Japanese letters to the notice of the congregation. Perhaps it will be well to recall how I secured them. Dr. Kobayashi, who was for a time a student of mine in the Virginia Seminary, asked whether I could find any way to help him secure a musical instrument for his musical and delicate daughter. After the earthquake, the fire consumed her guitar, and she was pining for an instrument of music of some kind. The father would gladly write some "Letters from Japan" in return for such aid. So I agreed to raise the money for a second-hand piano. In response to my appeal $75 was contributed, and I have still $75 more to raise; but the piano has been secured, and below is the letter of the happy girl. I hope that the congregation will give me the rest of the promised money speedily.

The death of Mrs. E. Elizabeth Holman on Sunday, September 13th, will come as a shock to the wide circle of friends who knew her in her various activities in her days of health, and realized how closely she and her daughter, Miss Louise Betts Edwards, were bound together. Rarely have I known such a union of spirit as existed between these two, or a parent and child who lived so mutually for each other. Deep and general is the sympathy for the devoted daughter.

Mrs. Holman's last years were full of suffering, courageously borne, and of increasing limitations. But these years when sickness prevented her from attending the church have not made us forget her faithful and efficient service in the Mothers' Meeting, where she brought the annual fair to a new standard of excellence, and supplemented the failing energies of Mrs. Taylor by her co-operation. Nor can we forget her vivid and gifted personality. Happy in the literary gifts and achievements of her daughter, she was also happy in her own love of literature and her own powers of initiative. She was the first woman in Philadelphia to take up the profession of an architect, and she was one of the pioneers in the introduction of the bungalow style of house. It is good to know that she was sustained by faith in God in her months of sickness, and we thank God for the hope that is given us in Jesus Christ of re-unions in the Life Everlasting.

The children of the Burd School return in fine health and spirits from their summer outings: The Seniors at Camp Wamphollobank near Wilkes-Barre, and the Juniors at Camp Gilfillan near Paoli.

The congregation will be pleased to hear that one of the Burd School graduates, Miss Eva Pletsch, who graduated from Temple University, and after a brief stay in the West, took a post-graduate course in Columbia University, New York, is now one of the staff of Temple University.

Another of the Burd School pupils, Miss Isabella Harmon, has been sent this winter to the Moody School at Northfield. It is thought that country air will be beneficial for her, and arrangements have been made for her to study there.

The Community House will be taken possession of for our various activities, as soon as it shall be turned over to us, but the formal opening will be postponed till November, for I want the Bishop to be present, and am anxious to make it a noteworthy occasion.

The congregation will be interested to know that Mr. Crouch reached the conclusion that he preferred teaching to the duties of his post in St. Stephen's and has taken a position in one of the New York High Schools. Our best wishes go with him to this congenial field.

During this month the General Convention will be in session in New Orleans. This will be the first time in the history of our Church that the General Convention has visited one of the Gulf States. The whole South will be interested in its deliberations, and all New Orleans will be impressed, I am sure, by the dignity of its proceedings and the sermons of its great preachers.

It is a source of regret that ill health will prevent Dr. Foley's attendance. The tendency of the Roman Catholic strength in New Orleans will be to moderate the sacramentarianism of our Church, so far as the temper of the community in which it meets will have any influence on the Convention. In Roman Catholic Ireland the English Church is pronouncedly Protestant. When James II was trying to introduce Romanism into English colleges and places of power, the Church of England became keenly aware of the errors of Rome. So I hope that in a city where Roman Catholicism is as strong as it is in the Spanish-French emporium on the lower Mississippi, the absurdity of making our Church a pale copy of the Roman Catholic Church will be strongly felt. May the Assembly be guided by a spirit of good, strong sense. What is needed chiefly in legislative bodies is not zeal, or eloquence, but wisdom. I have always regretted that in order to arouse enthusiasm, the numbers are kept up, and the House of Deputies has become such an unwieldly body. It is a pity that the delegations are not restricted to three clerical and three lay deputies from each diocese or missionary district.

Let us pray that God may send down on its members the spirit of good counsel.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

June 23, 1925.

Rev. Carl E. Grammer, S.T.D.

My dear Dr. Grammer:

It is refreshing to find, in Miss Foy's report of her recent visit to the Burd School, nothing but words of praise for the care that is given the children under the competent supervision of Miss Tappem.

Since the work of the Burd School has always stood so high we were exceedingly interested to note that even the somewhat minor detail of a drinking fountain is being supplied. This bespeaks a whole-souled desire to meet all requirements.

We are interested to know that you are sending your Seniors and Juniors to two different camps so as to give as much variety as possible to your children.

Wishing you continued success, I am

Very sincerely yours,

ELLEN C. POTTER, M.D.,
Secretary of Welfare.

P. S.—Because some institutions have quoted sections of the letters that follow official visits made by the Department's staff, and because misrepresentations have therefore occasionally resulted, I am asking institutions to quote my letters in full if they desire to give publicity to any part of them.

Christian soul! the times are calling,
Altars falling,
Men's hearts failing them for fear;
Unto thee their eyes are turning,
Spirits yearning
For the word of faith and cheer.

Christian soul! great deeds await thee.
Consecrate thee
To the task that nearest lies;
Question not that God will use thee,
Nor refuse thee
Blessing on thy sacrifice.

Walk thou not as one benighted,
Nor affrighted;
Where the foolish sees no God,
Thine to glimpse the fiery column,
Thine the solemn
Comfort of His staff and rod!

LOUISE BETTS EDWARDS.

Mothers' Meeting Annual Outing

July 9th, the day of the annual outing of the Mothers' Meeting, dawned clear and cool, an ideal morning for a river trip. Long before the appointed hour little groups might be seen making their way to the ferry where the William Penn lay at anchor. They were unencumbered with lunch baskets, for the day before Mrs. Harper and Mrs. Higham, assisted by a little band of willing workers, had been at work making six hundred sandwiches and preparing other supplies for the picnic meal.

A few minutes' grace was allowed for the tardy, then the boat turned for her downward trip, near the great bridge, so long hoped and planned for, and now stretching across the Delaware like a dream come true. Mr. Streaker was on hand, and proved an excellent guide, pointing out the objects of interest on both sides—the docks of the New York Shipbuilding Company, with the hulk of a mammoth vessel in the stocks, the deserted plant at Hog Island, with a pathetic collection of unfinished craft piled together high and dry, the DuPont plant at Wilmington, and many other landmarks were viewed as the William Penn made her way down the stream.

The Rector was there, and pronounced a boat trip an ideal outing, enabling him to meet and group all the members of the party, while the Verger of St. Stephen's was as ever on the alert to ensure everyone's comfort, and guard against possible accidents. The children had room to play and scampered about tirelessly all day. Downstairs music and dancing beguiled the trip, but many preferred the upper deck, and found their best holiday in sitting quietly, watching the green banks slip by.

It was after 1 o'clock when the party landed at Delaware Beach, and trudged up the path to the picnic grounds. Here the luncheon was spread, and the white tablecloths and pasteboard plates and cups gave an air of neatness and refinement to the bare tables. A hearty meal was despatched with much enjoyment, and there was time left for a stroll about the grounds, and even for a dip in the river. Then the whistle blew and the homeward trip was made without accident or mishap. As the vessel neared the dock someone went to the piano and began to play a familiar hymn. One voice joined in, and then another, and soon a volume of sound filled the little cabin which proved that the Mothers were still "going strong" after their long day. Then the boat was made fast, and with many a word of appreciation to the leaders whose careful planning made the outing a success, and with many a handshake and hearty farewell the members of the Mothers' Meeting separated, to meet again in the fall.

The Sunday School

Full of enthusiasm after the summer vacation, the Sunday School re-opened on September 13th with the Guild-room filled.

June 27th we had our best and biggest outing. One hundred and sixty scholars, teachers and friends had two special cars on the Reading Railway and spent a delightful day at Atlantic City. The school closed the next day, Sunday, for the summer.

Now, we have new teachers joining the tried and faithful ones, and we are looking forward to our "Rally" in the new building in early October.

Faithfully,
George H. Streaker,
Superintendent.

Letters from Japan

St. Margaret's School,
Takaido-nura,
Tokio-fu, Japan,
June 4, 1925.

My dear Dr. Grammer:

Two Sundays ago I was asked by the rector of Christ Church to preach at its evangelistic campaign meeting. About eighty people came, to whom I spoke on the subject, "The Eternal Christ."

When I finished the rector announced to the audience that he had a card sent up to him from one of the people present, and that card had a message written on it which read as follows: "My name is T. Terai, a lawyer in the city of Aomori. Twenty-eight years ago I was baptized by Mr. Kobayashi who has just preached here. I came up to Tokyo to attend a lawyers' meeting and hearing that Mr. Kobayashi was to preach here tonight, I have come to hear and see him. If you allow me, I shall be glad to speak to the audience on my Christian experience since my baptism."

"I will gladly give Mr. Terai the chance," said the rector, "for you will be interested in a testimony of one of the Christians baptized by this evening's preacher."

Mr. Terai spoke very simply, but his was one of the most extraordinary Christian experiences of steadfast faith in God amidst of trials and discouragements and his talk impressed the audience tremendously. At one time, he and his wife alike were in bed for consumption, while two of his children had an attack of fever, typhoid or otherwise, and the family was poor. But Mr. Terai never wavered in his trust in God. He fought the trial bravely and got well. He was then a clerk in the local court, but he made up his mind to become a lawyer. Examinations for the license are pretty severe. He tried for the first time and failed. The next year he tried again, and again he failed. His hard work revived his lung disease, but nothing daunted him. The third trial was another failure, but at last he passed the examination at the fourth time and became a full qualified lawyer!

During that time and ever since then he has remained the most faithful member of our church, as well as a successful lawyer, in that prosperous city in northern Japan.

After his address, the rector asked the people to leave their names with addresses if they wanted to make further inquiry about Christianity, and fourteen men and women put down their names on inquiry blanks.

A few days ago there was an excavation of very old Chinese manuscripts and paintings in the city. Among them I saw a Nestorian text of the seventh century. I could not read it very well but I found it somewhat mixed up with Buddhism. The title of the sacred roll was, "Jo-tin-min-shin-so-King" (sutra-sacred text). It is possible that this is a Syrian or some such western word. Could you think of any? The roll was owned by one of our Buddhist professors in the Imperial University who could not make out the significance of the title. By the way, this was part of that famous mass of sacred Buddhist rolls discovered by Stein. The completed cyphering of those wonderful scriptures may throw new light on the relation between Christianity in the form of Nestorianism and the Mahayana Buddhism, which teaches salvation by faith in the Saviour Buddha, Amitalea Buddha.

Dr. Addison, of Cambridge Theological School, has just been studying Mahayana Buddhism of the Pure Land sect in Kyoto with the help of its priests there. He is going home very soon and you will find it very interesting and instructive to talk with him on the subject when you have such chance.

The rainy season has set in and days are so dreary now.

With best wishes for you and Mrs. Grammer and many kind friends who show their goodness to my daughter.

Yours very truly,
J. H. Kobayashi.

St. Margaret's School,
Takaido-mura, Tokio-fu,
Japan, June 25, 1925.

My dear Dr. Grammer:

We have bought a piano! The piano was owned by a daughter of an ex-minister to a South American Republic. It is an English made one and has been used for some years, but with a thorough repair and repainting it will make a respectable instrument. A hundred and fifty dollars will just cover the whole cost. It is a bargain. Our musical friend thinks it will answer my daughter's purpose quite well. In a week or so, it will be installed in our house in its new guise. This will be an event in our "defurnitured" household. You can imagine my daughter's joy.

And now, my dear Dr. Grammer, we certainly do not know how to thank you for all that you have so kindly done for us. Our gratitude is very deep indeed. Will you kindly convey our sincere thanks to those good friends who have so gladly joined you to do so much to bring this day of joy into our family.

St. Margaret's School will close the session on July 15th. It has been a busy one with our American Principal, Miss Heywood, who has so ably attended to the laying out of the new school ground, the building of new class rooms and halls, as well as her regular duties. She is going home to spend a few months, and it is quite probable she will be in Philadelphia.

We are all much impressed with and thankful for what the churches in your city have been doing for our school. I have talked to our girls about "the gold, silver and jewel offering" of Philadelphia, and they were deeply impressed.

On July 4th, the great American holiday, sixteen (possibly 17) girls of St. Margaret's School will be confirmed by Bishop McKim. This is one of the largest classes we have ever had.

You will be interested in the envelope I enclose. This was distributed to every door in this neighborhood from a Shinto shrine not far from us. As I have deciphered the mysterious Japanese ideographs on both sides of the envelope you will understand the import of this bit of sacred acts of our native religion. The envelope itself is for rice offering; that is, you fill it with rice and send it to the shrine together with the human effigies done according to the directions given. The rice is the fee.

What is of interest in this matter is the scape-goat idea implied in it. Shintoism puts great emphasis on purity, both physical and spiritual. The purification of one's sins by laying them on a human figure—how that prefigures the sacrifice on the Cross!

Of course, we Christians do not send the envelopes back and the shrine gets so much less rice.

Azalias are now gone and wistarias are going, too. The rainy season this year has not been very rainy so far, though the sky is overcast almost every day. This is our Empress' birthday, and we have no school I write this with the sliding shoji of the room open, for it is quite warm to-day. Our garden trees all glory in their summer splendor—poplars, maples, pines, a plum, a japonica, an azalia, a chestnut, etc. Beyond the valley there stands a magnificent forest of ancient pines and gigantic cryptomerias which compose the garden of a noble family with traditions of feudal heroism. It is so quiet and restful here, though just outside of the city boundary.

I hope you are now enjoying a summer rest with Mrs. Grammer somewhere in a cool place. We expect to stay here in our house.

Once more thanking you and with my best wishes for Mrs. Grammer, yourself and my kind friends in all which my daughter Keiko and my wife most heartily join.

Most sincerely yours,
J. H. Kobayashi.

The Honorable Offering Rice for the Great Purification at Hikawa Shrine

"The Great Purification" of June and December every year is an important divine rite which is performed in accordance with the Imperial decree in order to purify the sins which people unconsciously commit and their defilements, and to drive away misfortunes and sickness. If you write on these effigies your names and ages, and after rubbing your bodies with them and breathing upon them, send them to this shrine, the divine rite of purification will be solemnly performed to the end that their sins and defilements be purified and that evils would come neither upon their own persons nor upon their houses. For that purpose this is herewith sent you.

Note.—It is especially important for those who are in mourning to have this divine rite of purification performed for them.

139 Shimoshibuya, Tokyo,
Japan, Aug. 8, 1925.

Dear Dr. Grammer:

The piano, after its repairs and tuning, came to my house a week ago.

My father told me that I ought to write and thank you and other friends who did this kind thing for me. Of course, that was exactly what I wanted to do and I am doing so now. Only my English is so imperfect, but with some help from my father I hope I can let you know how grateful I am for what has been done to me.

I always liked music and though I wanted to take piano lessons while in St. Margaret's School my father was afraid he could not afford to buy a piano, so I took organ lessons, as there was a good organ in our house then. But this, together with that lovely guitar, which Mrs. Grammer so kindly gave my sister—alas! now not in this life—was burnt in the recent great fire.

For nearly a year and half, my only musical enjoyment was a little Japanese phonograph with a few records. From last April, however, St. Margaret's School was able to give me chance to take piano lessons once a week. I was allowed to use a school instrument. This was a great privilege. Still, without any instrument at home it was a lonely affair.

I did not know that my father had written you for an organ for me, so you may imagine my great joy when he told me that you would kindly help him to get me one. And how greater my joy was to find that at last a piano was coming to my house instead of an organ!

The piano did come a week ago, as I said, a piano which I wanted to but could not have for the last seven years! It is an event for me. Indeed, it is an event in my household. I am so happy, so joyful, so lively and so very deeply thankful. You have created an absolutely new source of happiness not only for me but also for my parents and brothers, for they do not even seem to mind the noise I make.

My gratitude is so deep that I do not know how to express it. I can only say that I am most truly grateful. Will you kindly give my thanks to my unknown friends who have so kindly joined you in doing me this deed of great goodness?

My previous organ lessons enabled me to start on piano at a grade higher than that of a beginner's. I have finished Duvernay's Mechanism and am now working on Kuhlar's Sonatinen, Band II. I can play Dvorak's Humoreske, Spindler's Hunting Song, Minuet in G, Gipsy Rondo, Ilyinsky's Berceuse, etc.

As my piano teacher, Miss Murray, of California, has gone home, I may enter a music school in the city from the fall.

You may be interested to know that my musical knowledge is serving a Christian purpose, for very often I am asked to play organ for the Japanese services in Trinity Church, our pro-cathedral church, before the fire. To-morrow being Sunday, I am again asked to do that.

With my kindest regards and best wishes for you and Mrs. Grammer, and for my other friends,

Very truly yours,
Keiko Kobayashi.

The camel, at the close of day,
Kneels down upon the sandy plain
To have his burden lifted off,
And rest to gain.

My soul, thou, too, shouldst to thy knees,
When daylight draweth to a close,
And let thy Master lift the load
And grant repose.

The King's Daughters

The King's Daughters started in with their season's work with a most encouraging meeting—all our former members being present, as well as a new member. We find ourselves very much in need of a sewing-machine, and would greatly appreciate it if any one in the congregation could donate a machine in good working order. The November meetings will be on November 3rd and 17th, in the Community House.

Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

The chief interest of our Congregation just now is the Community House. Let me point out as basic in our policy, that this building is both a Community House and a Parish House. A fair raised $10,000 for a Community House, and many gifts were doubtless contributed with this feature chiefly in mind. But it was always understood that the building would also serve Parochial purposes and the great bulk of the gifts came from St. Stephen's for that object. It was to replace the old building that Miss Anna contributed her $30,000. and the insurance of $10,000 from the old building went to the erection of this new one. It is St. Stephen's Church that has erected it, and undertaken to maintain it. It follows from this that any organization that is connected with St. Stephen's is entitled to the use of this building, with due regard to the convenience, rights of others and under such rules as may be necessary. This will apply to societies whose members are not all members of St. Stephen's. Those organizations are St. Stephen's organizations, and all their members have the privileges of the building.

We should not however deserve the title of a Community House if our membership was limited to these. We are anxious to include others and in such terms as may make the house a community centre. To do this means that there must be some sort of tie in the common use of the house. It must be more than a mere cross-roads of convenience. A lodging house where there is no parlor, is not much of a social force. The aim of a Community House is to help the Community by binding together its isolated elements, sometimes its disintegrating elements, into a social group. This can not be accomplished unless the Community House becomes in some degree a means of association. It will be a help to achieve this, if we follow the example of the Y. M. C. A. and restrict the privileges of the Community House, to those outsiders who shall become members of the St. Stephen's Community House Association. The fee for such members will be one dollar for the period ending June first. All members of St. Stephen's will be official members of the Association. A list of the members from outside and of the St. Stephen's people who use the house will be the list of the active members. To this band all Community House notices will be sent and we hope that among them there will develop a spirit of reciprocity and comradeship. A record is being kept of the meetings and attendance. Beginning with September 23, there have been seventeen meetings with a total attendance of seven hundred and sixteen. Two of these meetings, Mr. Streaker's Sunday afternoon talks, are new departures, that have a great promise. The average attendance at his two meetings was 75. One of our visitors was a deaf lady, who found it a great help in improving the day.

The additional burden upon the Church of this Community House is great. There is the interest on the debt, in round numbers $1,800, and the additional light, heat and service required will amount to much more. We are relying upon the loyal co-operation of the Congregation as a whole and the members of the Community House Association in particular to enable us to meet these additional charges.

The Young People's Club, an organization of much promise, has shown its sense of this obligation by including in the purposes of the Fair, that it will hold on November 20-21, the raising of money for the Community House. I bespeak for them your cordial support in this fine-spirited endeavor.

It has taken time to solve the problem created by the burning of the old Sunday School building. The result is the fulfillment of the counsels of many. It has been slowly worked out in the only spirit in which a voluntary association like a Church can be successful, that is by a spirit of mutual concession. One of the deadliest foes of a Church is the spirit that will not play unless it can have its way. Nothing is gained by yielding to such disruptive folk. Neither can a Church be successfully managed by granting leadership to those who refuse to serve in the ranks first. A mother once came to me and asked me if I would not help her to control a weak and wayward son by interesting him in Church-work. "Put him on your Vestry," she urged. "He must be given some leadership." But what a weak and sycophantish society the Church would be, that tried to win adherents in such a fashion. I have seen this experiment tried with disastrous results. Let the various societies promote to official position, not those whom it hopes to win by the honor, but those who give promise of being useful in the position. This is the only wise course. The best leaders will be those healing, uniting and friendly spirits, who know how to consult and co-operate. The wise leader seeks not to get his way or to impress himself, but endeavors to find the right way and to subordinate himself to the good of the whole.

One of the most exquisite of our English Minor Poets is Archbishop Trench, the eminent scholar. I wonder how many of the congregation are acquainted with these four poems:

Lord, what a change within us one short hour
  Spent in Thy presence will prevail to make,
What heavy burdens from our bosoms take,
  What parched grounds refresh, as with a shower!
We kneel and all around us seems to lower;
  We rise, and all, the distant and the near,
Stands forth in sunny outline, brave and clear;
  We kneel how weak, we rise how full of power,
Why, therefore, should we do ourselves this wrong,
  Or others—that we are not always strong,
That we are ever over-borne with care,
  That we should ever weak or heartless be,
Anxious or troubled, when with us is prayer
  And joy and strength and courage are with Thee?

Lord, many times I am aweary quite
  Of mine own self, my sin, my vanity—
Yet be not Thou, or I am lost outright,
  Weary of me.

And hate against myself I often bear,
  And enter with myself in fierce debate:
Take Thou my part against myself, nor share
  In that just hate.

Best friends might loathe us, if what things perverse
  We know of our own selves, they also knew:
Lord, Holy One! if Thou who knowest worse
  Shouldst loathe us too!

THE KINGDOM OF GOD

I say to thee, do thou repeat
To the first man thou mayest meet
In lane, highway, or open street—

That he and we and all men move
Under a canopy of love,
As broad as the blue sky above;

That doubt and trouble, fear and pain
And anguish, all are shadows vain,
That death itself shall not remain;

That weary deserts we may tread,
A dreary labyrinth may thread,
Through dark ways underground be led;

Yet, if we will one Guide obey,
The dreariest path, the darkest way
Shall issue out in heavenly day;

And we, on divers shores now cast,
Shall meet, our perilous voyage past
All in our Father's house at last.

And ere thou leave him, say thou this,
Yet one word more—they only miss
The winning of that final bliss.

Who will not count it true, that Love,
Blessing, not cursing, rules above,
And that in it we live and move.

Who that a watcher doth remain
Beside a couch of mortal pain,
Deems he can ever smile again?

Oh who that weeps beside a bier
Counts he has any more to fear
From the world's flatteries, false and leer?

And yet anon and he must start
At the light toys in which his heart
Can now already claim its part.

O hearts of ours! so weak and poor
That nothing there can long endure;
And so their hurts find shameful cure,

While every sadder, wiser thought,
Each holier aim which sorrow brought,
Fades quite away and comes to nought.

O Thou, who dost our weakness know,
Watch for us, that the strong hours so
Not wean us from our wholesome woe.

Grant Thou, that we may long retain
The wholesome memories of pain,
Nor wish to lose them soon again.

The Universe Under Moral Government

Viscount Grey's book entitled "Twenty-five Years" is an account of the diplomacy of Europe by one who was in a position of authority behind the scenes. It is written with the careful moderation of a statesman, and not with the unrestrained fault-finding, or the air of omniscience of so many of our newspaper critics. It is well worth the careful study of our statesmen. While it justly places the chief blame of the Great War upon Germany, so far as the blame for that great tragedy can be distributed among the nations, it nevertheless holds that the sole blame can not be laid upon any one nation, but that the conflagration was the inevitable result of the diligent collection by all parties of such heaps of combustible materials in the shape of armaments and military preparations of all kinds. As for the Kaiser, Lord Grey treats him as a mere pawn in the hands of the militarists.

I may speak on the lessons of this great book at some other time, but I refer to it now for the sake of the passage in which the former Secretary of Foreign Affairs of Great Britain refers to the German attitude toward Turkey. The misgovernment of Abdul Hamid and his ill-treatment of the Christian minorities in Asia Minor was one of the greatest scandals in Europe. England protested, and won the ill will of Turkey but as a sea power could do nothing without the co-operation of the Continent. France was afraid to bring on a European convulsion unless Germany would join in the protest, but this Germany refused to do. This is Lord Grey's significant statement:

"Germany at Constantinople exploited the situation steadily to her own advantage. We (England) sacrificed our influence and material interests in Turkey (by England's protest against the Turkish atrocities). We did, indeed, keep our hands clear and acquit the national conscience, but to do this without effectively helping the objects of our efforts and our sympathy, the Christian minorities in Turkey, was a very barren and unsatisfying result.

"Germany's policy seems to have been based upon a deliberate belief that moral scruples and altruistic motives do not count in international affairs. Germany did not believe that they existed in other nations, and she did not assume them for herself. The highest morality for a German government, was the national interest; this over-rode other considerations, and as such she pursued it at Constantinople. Her policy was completely successful; ours was deadlock and failure. Germany pushed her commercial interests in Turkey; the wealth of Asia Minor was passing into her hands; but she gained these advantages by acting on the belief that morals do not count in policy. It was this mistaken view of human affairs between nations that lost her the war. The very principles and views that for so many years seemed an unqualified success in her Eastern policy had the seeds of destruction in them. Surely the conclusion is irresistible that a policy which rules out all moral purposes, except national interest, has a fatal lack of what is essential to enduring success."

But what does the futility of such a lack indicate except the moral government of the universe?

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

Mrs. Mortimer Brown, who was buried on October 17th, after a funeral in the Church, was the daughter of Mr. William S. Price, the Nestor of the Philadelphia bar at the time of his death, and an eminent canon lawyer in his day. In memory of him Mrs. Brown presented the Church the Gamaliel Window on the north wall. Mrs. Brown was a woman of great fortitude and courage, with a capacity for friendship that overlooked all mere differences of opinion.

In theology she was intensely conservative, in churchmanship advanced, in regard to reforms fundamentally opposed to all legislative effort to make the world better; yet she could care for and value those who differed from her in all these points.

Interested in the stage, in literature, in friendship, she was a wonderful host and a loyal friend. Her faith in God was steadfast to the end.

"A Helpful Prayer"

"Almighty Father, the God not of the dead but of the living: we have joy together in all who have faithfully lived and peacefully died, and whose truth and beauty are even now in our hearts. May we be assured that those who are absent from us have found a more perfect rest in thee, and the crown of an unfading life. No longer can we care for them, but thou wilt care for them better than our love could do. By pastures green and by quiet waters, into higher life and service, thou wilt lead them, O thou Eternal Lover of Souls. Cherish and bless them, we pray thee; and give unto us great peace and great hope as we think about them in this still hour. Take the veil from our hearts and join us in one communion with all thy saints on earth and in heaven; through Jesus Christ our Lord—Amen."

A Beautiful Hymn

At the recent funeral of the Rev. Rufus W. Miller, D.D., the eminent leader in the Reformed Church, whose services have been so justly praised in the newspapers, the first hymn was new to me. It was so beautiful that I asked Dr. Leinbach, the Editor of the wise and progressive paper "The Reformed Church Messenger," to send me a copy. This he has kindly done, sending along the following information.

"It is the classic hymn of our denomination, and the author, who was one of the best known pastors of our Church, was afterward a professor in our Theological Seminary. He has written many poems and folk songs, and is held in high regard among our people. This hymn is also the Mercersburg Academy hymn, and I heard Dr. Charles Erdman, of Princeton, refer to it last summer before a great audience and say of it that he thought it was one of the greatest hymns in the language, and that it ought to be in every Christian Hymnal."

I find this hymn is in our hymnal, but I had never observed it.

JESUS, I LIVE TO THEE

Jesus, I live to Thee,
The loveliest and best;
My life in Thee, Thy life in me,
In Thy blest love I rest.

Jesus, I die to Thee,
Whenever death shall come;
To die in Thee is life to me
In my eternal home.

Whether to live or die,
I know not which is best;
To live in Thee is bliss to me,
To die is endless rest.

Living or dying, Lord,
I ask but to be Thine;
My life in Thee, Thy life in me,
Makes heaven forever mine.
—Henry Harbaugh, 1850.

The Sunday School

It is a pleasure to welcome back Miss Murdock to a class in our Sunday School. Mrs. Hopkins, formerly a scholar, is added to our teaching force together with Mr. Hopkins, her husband, who has taken a class of boys. When a pupil of the school returns to be a teacher it gives us much joy. We are happy to welcome Miss Forbes into our teaching staff, also.

A congenial and valuable get together of our teachers was held on Monday evening October 19th at the home of the Superintendent, when many valuable suggestions were made to improve the opportunities now before us in our new building. Chief of these was our plan to hold a big "Rally" on Sunday morning, November first, at 9.30. The little ones of the Primary and several of the Main School classes will add their talents to an interesting program we have arranged, and it is hoped that many of our church people and relatives, besides friends of the children, will be present. The offering that morning will go towards the Japanese Fund. So come and help us in this, but more so, give us the cheer of your presence. You will be more than pleased to see this happy group of over 100 gathered together each Sunday morning in our new Commuity House happily studying God's Word.

Faithfully yours,
George H. Streaker, Supt.

The Sunday 4 o'clock Talks, with Motion Pictures.

The Rector and Vestry having endorsed a plan to use the Auditorium of the New Community House on Sunday afternoons in a series of 4 o'clock talks illustrated by moving pictures under the direction of Mr. Streaker, they were formally opened by Dr. Grammer on October 11th. We are more than cheered by the presence of seventy-five at the opening meeting and believe, as it becomes known, that we will soon fill the fine room with an interested group of adults each Sunday afternoon. The themes will be a series of connected subjects with a Christian application, for adults, and always illustrated with the best of moving photography. After a large experience during and since the war the speaker has secured an unusually fine collection of realistic films to picture his talks. He hopes thereby to reach many passersby, and thus find for those who may desire a regular Church Home and add more to our regular services.

The Woman's Auxiliary

The Woman's Auxiliary held its first meeting of the season October 15th, preceded by a Corporate Communion.

There was no speaker but reports of the delegates and planning of the year's work occupied more than the usual time.

The next meeting will be held Thursday, November 19th, at eleven o'clock.

B. E. Hollar, Secretary.

The Young People's Club will have a "Fair" on Nov. 20-21. Proceeds will be used for the Community House and to entertain poor children at Christmas, and the mothers of the South-east Water Front. It is their aim to make over a thousand dollars and this can only be done with the help and cooperation of the Parish.

They plan to have supper on the first floor, the Fair in the auditorium and dancing on the third floor. Do try to help them make it a great success by your presence, and send donations of any kind to the Community House from now on until the Fair, November 20-21.

The Child in the Garden

When to the garden of untroubled thought
I came of late, and saw the open door,
And wished again to enter, and explore
The sweet, wild ways with stainless bloom inwrought,
And bowers of innocence with beauty fraught,
It seemed some purer voice must speak before
I dared to tread that garden loved of yore—
That Eden lost unknown and found unsought.
Then just within the gate I saw a child—
A stranger-child, yet to my heart most dear—
Who held his hands to me and softly smiled
With eyes that knew no shade of sin or fear;
"Come in," he said, "and play awhile with me;
I am the little child you used to be."

Each has two gifts:
First—Capacity—develop it.
Second—Opportunity—seize it.

FOUR MOTTOES

"Look up not down, out and not in, forward and not back, and lend a hand."

Edward Everett Hale.

Sometimes

Across the fields of yesterday
He sometimes comes to me,
A little lad—just back from play—
The lad I used to be.
And yet he smiles so wistfully—
Once he has crept within—
I wonder if he hopes to see
The man I might have been?

Women's United Thank Offering

As it is now time for the collection of the dues of the Women's United Thank Offering, I wish to ask my subscribers if they will kindly send me their contributions without waiting to hear from me. Many have already done so, and this is greatly appreciated, but if others who see this notice will respond by sending their dues directly to me it will greatly simplify matters for me. To those who do not, however, I will gladly write a reminder.

Although urged by the General Treasurer to follow the example of many of the churches in making the collection twice a year it was decided to keep to our custom of doing so annually only.

This collection, begun in October, 1925, will be handed in at the April meeting, 1926.

I sincerely trust that we may acquire some new members in this great missionary work for women.

Our ranks have been reduced by death and removal from the city of some of our most generous contributors, but please let us do our part in seeing that St. Stephen's does not fall behind from the place which belongs to her.

Kindly send contributions to Miss Washington, 2101 Spruce Street, Philadelphia.

ELLA HEADMAN, Treasurer.

May I ask those of the congregation who use the envelopes please to send in their envelopes by the last Sunday in December. The envelopes for next year will be somewhat different from this year—some change is made in the objects—in the general direction of giving more for outside purposes. Some objects are provided for in other ways and no longer will appear on the books of the envelope system. It will save much trouble, if this year's contributions can be collected by the end of the year.

Ella Headman, Treasurer.

The contribution of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Schulz to the Community House is gratefully acknowledged, and the office would be very much obliged if they would let us have their address.

Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

Now that the General Convention has closed, it is natural to take the bearings of the ship of the Church. Without any desire to be a sensationalist (and in these days there is a most unfortunate tendency to seek the flamboyant and startling, instead of the balanced and true in statement, and it is very hard to avoid exaggeration, and the use of superlatives), I am going to confess frankly that there is much to give serious concern to those that love the Protestant Episcopal Church.

The Catholic Party scored a victory in the change of position of the Prayer of Humble Access. Personally, I prefer the English Communion Service to our own. Those much be-praised additions in our Prayer Book, after the recital of our Lord's words of institution, always seem to me misplaced eloquence. To my mind, the climax should be our Lord's own words. After them our best eloquence is silent devotion. The oblation and invocation and the succeeding prayer should precede the consecration, leaving that as the supreme moment of the service, to be immediately followed by partaking of the elements. Now we shall have still another prayer added to the group that separates the Lord's own words from the distribution.

But even worse than this further departure from the dignified simplicity and restraint of the English service is the fact that the alteration was a victory for the Catholic Party. This faction in our church—for that is the proper name for this disciplined and determined group—cannot safely be encouraged. It is resolved to undo the work of the Reformation. Unless it can be checked, sad days are ahead of the Protestant element in our Church.

The Church of England is now having a hard time with this aggressive and reactionary cult inside of its ranks. But undoubtedly worse days are ahead of our Mother Church. Deeply as we may regret any change in that noble Church that has given such splendid examples of reasonable, religious and holy lives, and produced such fine scholars, theologians, preachers, and missionaries, nevertheless Disestablishment is one of the certainties of the future. The Irish Church has been disestablished. Only a few years ago the Welsh Church was disestablished. The permanent right to defeat the will of the House of Commons has been taken away from the House of Lords, which might have delayed disestablishment. The English Church is no longer the church of a large majority. It is doubtful whether it is the church of the majority. England has in these last days been ruled by Prime Ministers who are not Churchmen. A Labor Party has held office. Disestablishment may linger a while, but it is undoubtedly on its way, and its arrival cannot be long postponed.

That contest will certainly send up the churchmanship of the clergy and many devoted members of the laity many degrees. Sympathy will carry our churchmanship up with theirs. Already we are so high that any such increase will raise our temperature to fever heat. Let anyone recall how the Diocese of Pennsylvania lost seventeen clergymen to the Church of Rome because the privilege of our pulpits was by canon permitted to persons not ministers of our Church. That was eighteen years ago. Since then the Anglo-Catholics have progressed. They do not leave now; they simply announce their intention of altering the Church. They open their conferences with prayers to the Virgin, and advocate the whole cycle of Roman dogmas, except the decrees of the Vatican Council of 1870. Newman predicted this development. "The stumbling-block is no longer," he wrote, "the errors of Rome in the dogmas and practices of the Schoolmen, the abuses the Reformers objected to—no, it is the Tridentine decrees that constitute the offence of Rome. Now the Council of Trent is the great barrier, but we shall soon find that its decrees would not stand in the way, if it were not for the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin." To-day we have passed that milestone; the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin gives no trouble now. We must have Saint Anne among the Black Letter saints, and the only trouble seems to be the infallibility of the Pope.

So runs the tide among Anglo-Catholics. How much more strongly will it run when the Church of England will be deprived of many of her privileges, and some of her endowments. What will be the effect upon our Church? I do not wish to be an alarmist, but I confess that the prospect is dark for those who love our Church and are deeply interested in her welfare. Where is there another Church to be found so comprehensive, so freighted with the aesthetic culture of English civilization, so productive of sweet reasonableness and sincere devotion, so congenial to people of education and refinement, so abundant in its services to all classes, so Scriptural, so sane, so rich in types, so intertwined with the life of the English-speaking people? It is no light matter to allow such a Church to be altered into another pattern.

Yet altered it will be unless the Protestant element realizes the situation and bestirs itself. Wherever "The Living Church" is taken and read, the propaganda is going on. The same is true of "The Witness." "The Southern Churchman" offers no vigorous resistance. Our only Church paper on the other side is "The Churchman," which is most inadequately supported, and not nearly so widely taken as it should be. I wish, myself, that it were less narrowly ecclesiastical in its interests, and had more devotional articles—in brief, that it was more Liberal-Evangelical in tone; but whatever may be its limitations, it is the most liberal, courageous, prophetic sheet that we have, and it ought to be encouraged. I am having some sample copies placed on the table in front of the church. I hope that many copies will be taken in St. Stephen's. It is worth the subscription price many times over.

One of the outstanding leaders of the Church of England, the Rev. H. D. A. Major, D.D., the editor of "The Modern Churchman," will preach in St. Stephen's on Sunday night, December 13th. On the following Monday he will meet at luncheon a group of leading Liberal Clergy of the diocese, and of the neighborhood. The meeting will be in our new Community House. I hope that Dr. Major may arouse our people to the situation.

It is all very well to want rest and quiet, but no one has a right to turn away from duty because his preference is for a quiet life. It is our duty to keep the Protestant Episcopal Church a Scriptural Church, a comprehensive Church, and a learning Church. When God sends us duties and tasks, the meaning is that He does not want us to rest.

Personally, I intend to do all that lies in my power to keep our Church comprehensive, liberal, Scriptural, reasonable and ethical. To this end I tried to get the leading Liberal Evangelical, the gifted Bishop of Birmingham, to visit us for a week in Lent. Unfortunately, he could not be secured. He is a Fellow of the Royal Society, a great mathematician, as well as a learned theologian, and his voice would reach circles that need enlightenment. The questions at issue cannot be determined by aesthetic values. Many people treat them in that superficial fashion. I am glad to see that the Holy Cross theologian, Father Hughson, disdains such reasoning. He uses ritual as a means of inculcating dogma, and not for its artistic value. The aesthetes cannot help us, the architects, like the eminent Cram, who thinks that society needs walled towns for its redemption and flees for refuge to the moss-covered, battlemented towers of Rome. We need scholars, and prophets, and lovers of the truth.

Beauty has its own function, but it is truth, and not beauty that makes us free. I shall do what I can to bring the prophets to St. Stephen's.

The formal opening of the Community House on November 17th was a great success. The main auditorium was well filled, though not as crowded as it would have been if all the societies that use the building, and the congregation of St. Stephen's had turned out in force. Still the attendance was creditable, and the interest in the building was fine. Nothing but praise was heard of its solidity, convenience and utility. The Bishop was most generous in his praise of the Church and of the Rector. The evening closed with refreshments and dancing by the young people.

The singing of the Burd School children, under the leadership of Miss Frances McCollin, was much enjoyed.

Dr. Grammer mentioned the following contributions toward the Community House: The Fair in which Mrs. Reifsnyder and Mrs. Calwell were the leaders with the co-operation of Mr. Reifsnyder which raised $10,000.00; the insurance money $10,000.00; Miss Anna J. Magee's $30,000.00, and about $17,000.00 from the congregation. The total cost of the building was about $100,000.00, and the balance was raised by mortgage. Especial acknowledgment was made of the services of the Building Committee, Mr. Wm. H. Hollar, Jr., and Mr. Jay M. Whitham, who had charge in consultation with the Rector, of the excellent work of Mr. W. P. Trout, the architect and of Jacob Myers and Sons, the contractors. In furnishing the building the Rector was greatly aided by the expert advice of Miss Julia MacAllister, who selected the curtains and tables, by Mrs. Reifnsyder in fitting up the third story and the kitchens and pantry, and by Mr. Reifsnyder in the equipment of the office.

The office of the Community House will be open from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M., with Mrs. Keable in charge, except on Saturday, when the office will close at 12.

Mr. Clair will be in charge of the activities in the building from 5 P. M. to 11 P. M., which is the hour for closing. It will be his duty to enforce the rules formulated by the House Committee, which is composed of Mrs. Howard Reifsnyder, Mrs. Daniel Roberts Harper, and Miss Bertha T. Walshe.

A special committee will be appointed to consider the applications for the use of the Community House. The secretary of this committee is Mrs. Keable, and all applications should be made to her.

The Fair on Friday and Saturday, November 20th and 21st, under the competent management of Mrs. Howard Reifsnyder and the Young People's Club, proved a great success. Never were there such suppers at any church fair that I ever attended, nor such music for dancing, nor such encouraging fortunes told, nor such admirable arrangements, nor such bargains at the counters, nor such attendants behind the counters, nor such general sociability, nor, in fine, such a fair. The total net profit was $1,000.00.

Special acknowledgment should be made of the generous kindness of the Band, under the leadership of Mr. Webbe. It discoursed fine music most spiritedly, and was most liberal in its encores. The dancing promoted sociability, as well as increased the receipts. The new floor was much praised for its smoothness for dancing, as well as for its beauty and manifest solidity. We were glad to include among our guests some of the Jefferson Medical students.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

A chorus for the young people and their friends will be held in the Community House, on Friday evenings at 8 o'clock, punctually, commencing December 4th, omitting Christmas and New Years. Young people of both sexes, above 17 years of age, who can carry a tune are eligible for application for membership. No dues with the class, but those not connected with St. Stephen's will be required to qualify by entering the St. Stephen's Community House Association, fee one dollar for membership till October 1st. It is planned to study Christmas carols during December. Miss Frances McCollin has been engaged as choral conductor. Apply to Miss Margaret Tappen, 4226 Baltimore Avenue. Telephone, Woodland 5979.

Prayer at the Opening of the Community House

Almighty and Everlasting God, Thou all-sustaining, over-ruling Spirit, whom the universe covers with a garment, partly revealing and partly concealing—Thou God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has manifested Thyself to us through Thy beloved Son,—we invoke Thy blessing upon our gathering this evening, and upon this house, that is dedicated to Thy greater glory in the larger service of mankind. We praise Thy name that good has come out of evil and the loss inflicted by fire, has through the zeal and liberality of many resulted in gain to this Church in a larger equipment with which to serve the community. We thank Thee for the friends and helpers raised up for the work and for the generous concession made to us by those in authority over us in the city. Especially do we recall with gratitude the generosity of our departed friend and parishioner, Anna J. Magee, whose munificent contribution made this achievement possible. Thou alone knowest whether any knowledge of our doings here is communicated to those who have passed on to the other world. We do not presume to make requests, for Thy thoughts are better than our thoughts and Thy ways pass our understanding. We can only hope that she knows that she is not forgotten and that her gifts were not fruitless.

We thank Thee that no serious accident, no loss of life accompanied the erection of this edifice, and we invoke Thy blessing upon all the activities that may grow up in it. May friendship here abound. May the lonely here find society, the sad find cheer, the ill-equipped find training, the untaught find learning, the friendless find friends, and all men realize that religion which is the solace of the soul in its inward struggles for holiness and peace, is also the inspiration of the activities and sociabilities of life.

And to Thy name shall be the praise for ever and ever. Amen.

Prayer Book Revision

A large part of the time of General Convention was given to Prayer Book revision. Some portions of almost every session of both Houses were used for this purpose, under pressure of a determination to complete the revision so that final action might be taken in the Convention of 1928. The Constitution provides that no change shall be made in the Prayer Book unless it be first proposed by one General Convention, then submitted to the conventions of every diocese and then adopted by the next succeeding General Convention.

The Joint Commission on the Revision and Enrichment of the Prayer Book was appointed in 1913. Proposals have been made by the Commission at each succeeding convention. At the Convention of 1922, final action was taken on changes in Morning Prayer, Evening Prayer, and the Litany. These changes consisted mainly in giving greater flexibility. Among other things, a short Canticle was permitted for use in the place of the Te Deum. A single psalm is permissible and a wide selection is made possible.

The work of this Convention of 1925 was of two sorts, passing on revisions made in 1922 and considering new proposals. Among the changes now finally confirmed are the following. Many new special Prayers have been added and some of the Old Prayers have been amended. Among others there are new Prayers for missions, for social justice, for workers and for prisoners. In the Order for Holy Communion, the Commandments may be read in shortened form. A hymn may be sung before the gospel and "Praise be to Thee, O Christ" may be said after it. Special prayers may be said after the Creed. New Collects, Epistles and Gospels are provided. The prayer of humble access is transferred to a place after the prayer of consecration.

In confirmation the questions and vows of Baptism are repeated. In the Marriage Service the vows of the man and the woman are made alike, the word "obey" being omitted. The words "With all my worldly goods I thee endow" are eliminated. The Visitation of the Sick is a wholly new office. In the Burial Office there are prayers definitely remembering the departed before God. A beautiful service for the Burial of a Child is added:

Among the new changes made in this convention, which must be acted upon finally in 1928, are the following. The three forms of Holy Baptism, for Infants, for Adults and in private, are made one service. Archaic phrases which are misunderstood are dropped. Sponsors are asked questions in answer to which they assume responsibility for the Christian nurture of the children baptized. Further changes were made in the litany, among others the petition for those who travel by land or water is changed to read "by land or by water or by air."

In addition to the Catechism there are provided Services of Instruction, which contain all the questions in the Catechism together with questions on the Church, the Ministry, and Confirmation.

The various services of the Prayer Book have been slightly rearranged, in order to make the use of the book more simple.

In addition to major changes, such as those listed above, there are a multitude of minor revisions intended to avoid vain repetitions and to substitute modern words and phrases for those which have lost their original meaning.

CHILDHOOD'S PLEA

Protect me—ye of larger growth.
Hear my appeal—Please take my hand
And lead me safely through the days
Of childhood into grown-up-land.

The Woman's Auxiliary

At the meeting on Thursday, November 19th, the Auxiliary was honored by the presence of the Bishop of the Diocese, who gave a most instructive and interesting address on Mexico, which country he and Mrs. Garland visited before attending the General Convention in New Orleans. By personal inspection of the status of the work of the Church in Mexico he was enabled to thoroughly understand existing conditions, and it was doubtless owing to his report at the Convention that a new Bishop was elected, Reverend F. W. Creighton, of St. Ann's Church, Brooklyn, who will shortly enter upon his duties.

There were forty-three present at the meeting, and all who had the privilege of hearing the address were much impressed by the keen observation of the Bishop, and greatly appreciated his bringing specimens and pictures to illustrate the talk.

Laura Bell, President.

The Sunday School

We will have appropriate pictures and exercises as usual on the Sunday before Christmas. But our big Festival will be celebrated on Tuesday evening, December 29th, at 8 o'clock, in the New Sunday School Auditorium of the Community House. We will give a play by the scholars called, "Happiness," to which we cordially invite all who care to come. An offering will be taken for the Japanese Fund.

G. H. Streaker,
Superintendent.

The Christmas Baskets

The Christmas Baskets are one of the unique features of Xmas at St. Stephen's. Last year 124 baskets were given out, containing seven dinners each. The Committee appointed to take charge is Mr. Howard Reifsnyder, Mr. C. K. Klink, Mr. Howard Freestone, Mr. James Carrigan. I appeal to the congregation for their generous gifts. Let us make Christmas a time of joy, and a season of manifested good will.

The next issue of the Parish News will have a full report of the Fair, but Mrs. Reifsnyder wishes to take this opportunity to thank the members and friends of the Parish who sent donations to the Fair and for the large attendance both days.

An Opinion of Sir Henry Maine, the Great Conservative, and an Authority on Law and Institutions

If any government should be tempted to neglect, even for a moment, its function of compelling obedience to law—if a democracy were to allow a portion of the multitude to set at defiance some law which it happens to dislike, it would be guilty of a crime which hardly any other virtue could redeem.

Dr. Fosdick truly says: "Vital religion is one of the three deepest needs of men. Men must have bread—that is the economic need; they must have friendship—that is the social need; they must have faith in the spiritual meaning of life—that is the religious need."

ON THE DISCOVERY OF THE MALARIA GERM

This day relenting God
Hath placed within my hand
A wondrous thing: and God
Be praised. At His command,
Seeking His secret deeds
With tears and toiling breath,
I find thy cunning seeds—
O million-murdering Death.

I know this little thing
A myriad men will save.
O Death, where is thy sting,
Thy victory, O Grave!

Before Thy feet I fall,
Lord, who made high my fate;
For in the mighty small
Is shown the mighty great.
—Sir Ronald Ross.

NO PROBLEM THEN

(From Farmer's Magazine, published in 1796.)

Wanted for sober family, a man of light weight, who fears the Lord and can drive a pair of horses. He must occasionally wait at table, join in household prayer, look after horses and read a chapter in the Bible. He must, God willing, rise at 7 in the morning, and obey his master and mistress in all lawful commands; if he can dress hair, sing psalms and play at cribbage, the more agreeable.

N. B.—He must not be familiar with the maid servants, lest the flesh should rebel against the spirit and he should be induced to walk in the thorny paths of the wicked. Wages 15 guineas a year. (About $7.00 a month.)

If chance could fashion but a flower,
With perfume for each tiny thief,
And furnish it with sunshine and with shower,
Then chance would be a Creator with the power
To build a world for unbelief.
Fred'k Emerson Brooks.

MOTHER

When I'm feeling blue,
And the skies are gray,
Just a thought of you
Drives my cares away.

Thoughts of you and home,
(Dear old cosey nest),
Cheer me as I roam—
Lull my soul to rest.

You're my dearest friend,
Always staunch and true;
So, till time shall end,
I'll be loving you.

Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

The opening of a new building always means the closing of one task and the inception of another. Now that the building is completed, the task is to make it useful. Thus far the prospects for its large usefulness are quite bright. Our Main Auditorium has been engaged by outsiders once, it has been used once a month for Movies for "the Mothers," and on Sunday Afternoon for movie-pictures and talks by Mr. Streaker. We have 30 young men enrolled in the St. Stephen's Community House Association, that they may enjoy the privilege of basketball. The Young People's Club had a fine fair and has manifested a new vitality.

Our most notable use of the building, however, was on Monday, December 14th, when I gave a luncheon to the Liberals in this region, who are distinguished by their social and cooperative turn of mind, and give promise of being the kind of people from whom associated and Liberal movements might arise. Fifty-five of us sat down together in the main room on the 3rd floor. Bishop Garland honored us by his presence. One of the guests of honor was the Rev. Joseph Fort Newton.

Dr. John Wade, the Vice President of the National Church League, came over for the occasion from New York. From Washington, Baltimore, Wilmington, on the South, from Lancaster and Reading, on the West, from Northern New Jersey, New York, Long Island, and Connecticut, on the North, our visitors assembled. Of course the great attraction was Dr. H. D. A. Major, the Principal of Ripon Hall, Oxford, the Editor of the Modern Churchman, and one of the chief organizers of the Modernists of England. He came to Philadelphia, as my guest, but I shared him with Dr. Carter of Bryn Mawr, at whose Church he preached on the morning of Dec. 13, preaching at St. Stephen's at night. Every one who heard him on that evening, I am sure, was impressed by the charm of his personality, by the breadth of his scholarship, and by the consecutive and logical movement of his thought. He was, however, somewhat uncertain about the exact way in which to speak to his audience. This was revealed by the greater freedom and fluency that he manifested when he addressed an audience of Clergymen at the Church House.

An Oxford Don, he evidently failed to appreciate adequately the ability of an audience of lay people to listen discriminatingly to theological discussions. His address to the clergy was a masterpiece in its singular sweetness, logical coherence, irenic tone, conjoined with definiteness and clearness. Every one was charmed by him.

At the luncheon he spoke more in detail of the causes that had led the English liberals to take the name of Modernists, and of his own work in founding the Modern Churchman. At the close there was a Conference. I explained briefly the principle on which I had gathered my guests together. No lack of friendship was to be suspected, when any prominent liberal in this section was overlooked. Neither was his omission to be considered a reflection upon his Liberalism. But there was no use of bringing in people who would proclaim that they felt any bonds of association a restraint on their freedom and would at once rush out from the fellowship. Neither was there any good sense, it was urged, in including those chronic objectors, or extreme radicals, who disorganize or discredit every movement they are associated with. Such people I explained were left out on the principle so admirably put in the well-known lines in the debate on the Exclusion Bill in England:

> I hear a lion in the lobby roar.
> Say, Mr. Speaker, shall we shut the door
> And keep him there, or shall we let him in
> To try if we can turn him out again?

Of course time has not lessened the truth of Terence's saying, Quot homines, tot sententiae, (many men, many minds): but the guests were near enough together in spirit and general convictions for profitable discussion. The occasion was in every way so enjoyable, and so heartening, for as a rule liberal clergymen live somewhat lonely lives theologically and ecclesiastically, that there was a strong and indeed unanimous desire for another such gathering before Lent.

I accordingly offered the Community House for such a meeting on Monday and Tuesday, February 8th and 9th. The suggestion was heartily welcomed. If a Conference is held, it will be under the auspices of the Philadelphia Branch of the National Church League, of which the Rev. Granville Taylor is the President, the Rev. Jas. M. Collins, the Vice-President, and the Rev. Charles Levy, the Secretary. The chief attraction next to the fellowship will be a series of papers on the relation of Liberalism to Christian thought, to the old Church Schools of Anglo-Catholicism and Evangelicalism, to the Church's Legislation, Educational Programme, to Social and Political questions, and perhaps to Mysticism and the Devotional life. If leading Clergymen can be prevailed upon to prepare papers on these interesting themes there ought to be quite a large concourse of the Liberals in the province to hear them. The doors ought to be open to the laity also. Any other course would be most inconsistent with the principles of Liberalism, which teach that "open covenants," should be "openly arrived at."

If St. Stephen's can prove to be the foster mother of such a Conference, affording it warmth, shelter, nourishment, surely it will be serving a most useful purpose in our Church, the very purpose that a highly endowed Church ought to fulfil. What better use could it make of its income, after making reasonable provision to meet the local needs, in its community house and its popular services on week-days, than to spend its main energy in advancing the cause of the truth, and helping on that re-adjustment between our enlarging knowledge, and our theology, which is so essential, if the new generation is to be won, and yet is so painful to older or conservatively minded members of this generation? The true measure of the success of a Church like St. Stephen's is not the number of its members, but the character of its influence on the community.

Such a service can not be looked for from a Church that ministers as a kind of chapel of ease to a wealthy and fashionable congregation, a class in the community that is always theologically conservative, and is markedly lacking in the spirit of adventure, essential to any vigorous liberalism. There is more hope of it from a Church making a popular appeal and attracting the masses. But on the other hand, there is the tendency there to keep in the middle of the road, where the greatest numbers are found, or there is the danger that the teacher may take to sensational methods and flavor his discourse by crude attacks on old beliefs. The Church best equipped to teach a progressive theology wisely, sanely, constructively is an endowed Church that is not dependent for its maintenance upon the popularity of its teaching. Such a Church can sow the seed of the future's harvest.

Judged by such a conception of St. Stephen's proper task, this luncheon to Dr. Major, and this projected conference if it comes off, as there is every reason to hope it will, must be considered as notable occurrences in the history of our Parish.

With this January, we enter upon a new fiscal year, and I make an earnest appeal to every one who attends the Church to accept a carton of envelopes and use them faithfully. St. Stephen's needs your contribution to enable it to bear the additional expense of the Community House, its lighting, heating, cleaning, and keeping open with due safeguards, to pay the interest on the mortgage, and gradually retire it. The Diocese needs our aid for its hospital, its Church Farm School, its missionaries in slums, in jail, and almshouse. The General Church calls for our contributions for its manifold activities, at home and abroad. Let us not give self-indulgently, just where we can see the result and reap the harvest of gratitude. Let us give not sentimentally, but on principle. Let us give at home, for the needy near us are placed by God in our special care, and then let us "cast our bread upon the waters," where no thanks from recipients can reward us, where only God will know of our gifts and the chief motive will be obedience to his Son's command to preach the gospel to every creature. Those who are not on the Envelope lists miss receiving many circulars, for it is our chief mailing list. I am making it a rule to present every person confirmed with a package of envelopes on the principle, that those old enough to assume their baptismal vows, are old enough to make some regular contribution to the Church. It is not the size of the gift that counts. What matters is the spirit and fidelity. No one gets the full blessing of giving, who does not deny himself something in order to give.

Let me close with a greeting for the new year. Let us make it a real new year. Let us bring to its tasks a new thoroughness, a new fidelity, a new alacrity, a new cheerfulness, a new and deeper trust in God, a new submission to His will, a new love and comradeship for our fellow men, a new devotion to the Kingdom, a new loyalty, admiration and gratitude to Jesus, and new zeal in the use of the means of Grace, a new trustfulness in the unsearchable counsels of God, that they are loving, and wise and certain to prevail.

Let us apply to the New Year, this hymn for the New Day:

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Every morn is the world made new;
You who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here is a beautiful hope for you,
A hope for me and a hope for you.

Here are the skies all burnished brightly,
Here is the spent earth all reborn;
Here are the tired limbs springing lightly,
To face the sun, and to shine with the morn,
In the chrism of the dew and the cool of the dawn.

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain
And in spite of old sorrows and older sinning,
And puzzles forecasted and possible pain,
Take heart with the day and begin again.

Surely that is the right spirit. "If God be for us, who can be against us?" Let us take heart with the year and begin again.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

A Christmas Thought

Jesus was born, and climbed the gorge that leads to manhood's heights,
Obedient to a parent's rule, neglectful of delights,

Learning the wisdom of the wise, the folly of the fools,
And by the inner light of truth correcting both their schools.

Duty to Him, the single aim, with God as path and goal;
The holy books, the hours of prayer, the watch-towers of His soul.

Such was His road to throned heights, His steps we still can trace.
This was the discipline that wrought His power to beauty's grace.

He walked with God on earth's rough ways and God, in union true,
Through Him revealed Himself to man, man's nature to renew.

O Leader, human and divine, we thank Thee for Thy life,
In Thee united are the powers, in us so oft at strife.

That light and hope may shine upon the darkling ways of men,
Send down Thy spirit from on high, be born in us again.

Letter from Japan

The following letter reached me just too late to be published in the December issue. I am sure that every one will read with interest of Japan's awaking to the need of religious training for children. It is pleasant too to have our missionary encouraged by recognition from the head of his Government. The picture of the piano has not arrived. I am gratified to be able to report that $120 of the promised $150 has already been forwarded to Dr. Kobayashi.

C. E. G.

St. Margaret's School, Takaido-mura,
Tokyo-fu, Japan, November 11, 1925.

My dear Dr. Grammer,

Pardon me for my silence, but I have not been feeling well for two weeks.

I have just come back to my class work from the national conference of the principals of girls' high schools, which was convened by our Education Office and held in Tokyo.

There are now in Japan over 800 government-recognized girls' high schools, both public and private, but this year only one-third of them were called to the meeting. The conference, among others passed three interesting resolutions.

They approved of the growing enthusiasm among girls for physical exercises, but discouraged inter-school games among distant provinces, and were not in favor of some of the games they considered too strenuous for Japanese girls, such as high jump, base ball, etc. Then, they advocated a change in our regulated school curriculums, by which pupils would have a very few required subjects, while they would have greater freedom in choosing their subjects of study.

The third resolution was one of the most important ones that has ever been adopted by such assemblies in Japan, at least, viewed from the standpoint of Christian Schools. A committee was appointed for drawing up a report for the means of the more satisfactory moral training of girls. The report made several suggestions, but the plan most emphatically recommended was to encourage the religious training of pupils. The committee believed that "the religious sentiment of pupils should be cultivated and opportunities for religious belief should be given."

This is all the more remarkable because the great majority of the committee were the principals of government schools, who mostly professed no religion,—and two of them being Buddhists, while there was no Christian on the committee. The Japanese government, like America and France, sticks to the policy of separating religion from education in public and government-recognized private high schools. But while France and America recognized the importance of religious training of children outside of the schools, the Japanese government has always had a tendency of discouraging children's religious education, especially the Christian influence over them. But at the last conference, the representative of the Education Office formally declared to the house that he too recognized the need of religion and that there would be no objection to having devotional meetings in schools outside of regular school hours.

This is a most significant turn of tide in the educational circle of Japan.

The Emperor this year has graciously extended both to my wife and myself his kind invitation to be present at the Chrysanthemum garden party at the Prince Regent's Palace, Hitherto, this privilege was confined to those who held Imperial decorations or certain court ranks, but now it has been extended to me, a simple principal of a private secondary school, a pure and poor democrat with no decorations and ranks. Surely, Japan is getting democratic!

My daughter Keiko has taken a picture of the piano, which I am enclosing. It is not a good one, but we hope it will give some idea of how it looks to you and other kind friends of ours.

With my kind regards and every good wish for Mrs. Grammer and yourself, and other friends, in which Keiko heartily joins.

Yours very sincerely,
J. H. Kobayashi.

P. S. The picture is to be developed and takes a few days, so it will be sent by next mail.

Carol for St. Stephen's Day

The following poem is kindly sent me by Miss Louise Betts Edwards. It is from the Sloane MSS. and dates from the 14th or 15th Century. Its number in the British Museum, MSS. is 2593. Its explanation of the position of St Stephen's day in the Christian year is noteworthy.

Saint Stephen was a clerk in King Herod's hall,
And served him of bread and cloth as ever king befal.

Stephen out of kitchen came with boar's head on hand,
He saw a star was fair and bright over Bedlem stand.

He cast adown the boar's head and went into the hall,
I forsake thee, King Herod, and thy works all.

I forsake thee, King Herod, and thy works all,
There is a child in Bedlem born is better than we all.

What aileth thee, Stephen? what is thee befallen?
Lacketh thee either meat or drink in King Herod's hall?

Lacketh me neither meat nor drink in King Herod's hall,
There is a child in Bedlem born is better than we all.

What aileth thee, Stephen? art thou wode,[1] or thou 'ginst to brede?[2]
Lacketh thee eigher gold or fee, or any rich weed?

Lacketh not neigher gold nor fee, nor no rich weed,
There is a child in Bedlem born shall helpen us at our need.

That is all so soth[3], Stephen, all so soth I wis,
As this capon crowe shall that lieth here in my dish.

That word is not so soon said, that word in that hall,
The capon crew Christus natus est among the lords all.

Riseth up my tormentors by two and all by one[4],
And leadeth Stephen out of this town and stoned him with stone.

Taken they Stephen and stoned him in the way,
And therefore is his Even on Christmas Day.

[1] Wode=mad.
[2] 'ginst to brede'.—Dost thou begin to breed?
[3] Soth='True.
[4] —Pronounced as in only and atone. As one.

C. E. G.

Cheerfulness is a sign of wisdom.

O, ye who sigh and languish,
And mourn the lack of power,
Heed ye this gentle whisper;
"Could ye not warch one hour?"

For fruitfulness and blessing,
There is no royal road;
The power for holy service
Is intercourse with God.

St. Stephen's Chimes

(Written to a modification of the classic Scottish tune "Caller Herrin'" which introduces the Bells of St. Andrew in Edinburgh, Scotland, Neil Gow, Composer.)

Hark! Above the City clamor
In a sweet poetic glamour
Like a Choir celestial singing
Old St. Stephen's Bells are ringing.
"Come!" says old St. Stephen's rolling
Out its melodies consoling,
Not forgetting in its tolling. . .
"Welcome, All who come!"

When the tunes with notes appealing
Wake the chords of buried feeling
Weary brains are briefly brighten'd
Heavy laden hearts are lighten'd.
"Come!" says old St. Stephen's, etc.

As the echoes spread the greeting,
Heralding a friendly meeting,
Young and old the call attending
To the Church their ways are wending.
"Come!" says old St. Stephen's, etc.

There withdrawn from business wholly,
All their thoughts on worship solely,
Preaching, Praise and Supplication
Blend with quiet Meditation.
"Come," says old St. Stephen's, rolling
Out its melodies consoling,
Not forgetting in its tolling
"Welcome, All who come!"

Dr. Carl E. Grammer,
St. Stephen's Church, Philadelphia,

Dear Dr. Grammer:

The chief merit of my little St. Stephen poem lies in its music, which of course is not mine. The title "Caller Herrin'" might be despised by those who are not familiar with the story and traditions of that phrase; but apart from the title it is a classic with the people of Scotland.

In olden times the fresh herrings were "cried" through the streets of Edinburgh (and other cities) by stalwart Fishwomen who were either the wives or sisters or in some way related to the Fishermen. It was one of the most picturesque "cries" and as there was a good deal of price-haggling many quaint stories are told of the dealers and the public. Perhaps the most famous is what came to the attention of Lady Nairne. . . Scotland's sweetest songstress. "Ah, leddy, dinna grudge the price: it's nae fish ye are buyin' but the lives o' men."

. . . alluding of course to the many lives lost among the fishermen in those days. Once so the tale goes, Neil Gow, a contemporary of Burns and Scotland's greatest Composer of Dance Music, with a few Lyric Masterpieces to his credit, was on the streets of Edinburgh when the Fish-wives were in full cry, and at the same time the bells of St. Andrew's Church were chiming a tune that seemed to take in all the notes of the scale. The composer went to his room and made a composite tune of the Fish-wife's "Cries" and the Church bells, with the result we now have in the beautiful "Caller Herrin'". Then Lady Nairne wrote a song to the tune and it bears the same title. It is now in most books of Scottish Song and in different keys. Prof. Blackie (the Grand old Man of Scotland) always wrote two sentiments when requested for his autograph. One was a Greek Epigram, which looked scholarly but few could read. The other was the famous line from "Caller Herrin,'" which was also a great favorite with Queen Victoria . . .

"Truth will stand when a'thing's failin'"

I believe the tune is easy for the Chimes, and as a Novelty your Bellringer might try it. After all there has always been a connection with Christianity and Fishermen, not only symbolically, but in the first "Fishers of men."

Some day soon I hope to meet you.

Sincerely yours,
James D. Law.

First Prize

As a minister's son in a divinity school I was unconsciously being shaped into the conventional parson's mold.

Waiving exemption, I enlisted. I found I had enrolled in another school, the courses of which I needed.

The result is that though I would not favor universal military training, I so value mine that I would almost approve a year in the Army as a pre-requisite for a theological degree.

I discovered

That intelligence is not a matter of campus experience nor of university degrees.

That essential gentlemanliness is as apt to be found in the immigrant's son as in the college president's.

That because a man appears to be hard-boiled is no evidence that on occasion he may not be as tender as a mother.

That in motive most profanity is an offense against good taste rather than a sin against Deity.

That many virtuous men have foul mouths; that many vicious men are particular even with infinitives.

That a Jew or a Protestant or a Catholic is not to be evaluated by his label, but by the fidelity with which he practices his tenets.

That many a man who claims to have no religion is doing his human best to live "by the faith his lips deny."

That all kind deeds are not done by deacons.

Notes of the Woman's Auxiliary

Two delegates brought reports to the small meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary on December 17, and several letters were read and announcements made. The illness of the speaker, Mrs. Dillard, was the cause of regret and disappointment.

Some changes have occurred in the delegation sent from the Parish to the Church House, and it is most important to have regular representation at those meetings so as to bring back information to St. Stephen's Auxiliary. It is an honor and position of trust to be a delegate, and with such representation comes the feeling of responsibility and a deepened interest in the missionary work of the whole Church.

As a matter of record, mention may here be made of the meeting of the Woman's Aid of the Convocation of North Philadelphia on Tuesday, October 13, and their participation in the Supper with the Convocation in the Community House, with a joint attendance of nearly one hundred and twenty.

Mrs. John C. Browne, delegate from St. Stephen's to the Woman's Aid, acknowledges with thanks the receipt of annual contributions for 1926, from the following members. Annual dues to the Woman's Aid of the Convocation of North Philadelphia for January, 1926.

At our last meeting we filled twenty-five stockings which will be sent to the children at the Hope Day Nursery, and we trust these gifts will give much pleasure to the little ones on Christmas morning. We have also started making some little dresses for these children. We are very grateful for the sewing machine which was sent to us in response to our previous request.

The Young People's Club, through Dr. Grammer, invited Mr. Dooner to the party given to one hundred children and received this very interesting letter in reply.

Rev. Carl E. Grammer,—

Dear Dr. Grammer,—Please accept my grateful thanks for the invitation to the celebration of the Young People's Club of St. Stephen's, December 30th.

I greatly regret that personally I cannot be present having recently recovered from an attack of the grippe.

The happy recollections of our neighbors, "St. Stephen's," will always remain with my Family and to all employees of Dooner's Hotel who had the privilege of the friendship of the Clergy and members of St. Stephen's Parish.

With best wishes to yourself, the Young People's Club and Members of your Parish for a Happy New Year and a continuously happy year, I am,

Sincerely,
Thomas Francis Dooner.

The Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

The purpose of this monthly is to prepare the way for the work of the coming month, rather than to record the occurrences of the past month; but there are some incidents of the past month that call for special mention here. The first is the completion of our "Expectation." In 1924 we contributed for causes outside of the Parish about $5,000. For 1925 we were asked to contribute $6,500, but before the last instalment from the envelopes came in, it looked is if we would be $2,200 short. The Vestry assumed the leadership in raising the deficit. The members subscribed $600, and the two wardens, Mr. Morris and Mr. Raspin, made personal canvasses.

By January 18th there was still a deficit, but several members of the Vestry made themselves responsible for it, if it could not be secured from others, and the full amount of our "Expectation" was paid to the Treasurer of the Diocese before the books were closed. Since that date enough subscriptions have come in to meet the deficit completely.

This great success shows what can be done by enthusiasm, loyalty and co-operation. But we ought not to have another such spurt. The right way will be to get to work on this Expectation earlier, and to have it in mind longer. The Vestry has accepted an Expectation of $7000 for 1926. The ideal way to raise this amount would be for everyone to increase the amount in the pocket in the envelope whose contents go for causes outside the Parish. I intend to do this, and I invite other envelope-users to join with me in this method. Others may prefer to make a definite pledge. I hope that the whole matter may be taken up in some way this winter, so that such a drive may not again be necessary. It is manifest we have the money and the loyalty; the only problem is to find the best method to obtain the result.

It was pleasant to learn from Dr. Ancell on January 24th, that Mahan School has secured such a fine position in the educational world in China, and that it will soon be able to re-open with enhanced prestige and with all the inmates that it can accommodate. It was good to hear that the Hall built by St. Stephen's was so useful, and that it had been so much improved in appearance by the porch which was made possible by our supplementary gifts.

Certainly Dr. Ancell's appearance in my pulpit on that Sunday morning was a most opportune help, for I was in no condition to preach a sermon after my youngest daughter's wedding on the previous afternoon. I must embrace this opportunity to thank Mr. Barnes and the choir for the beautiful music on that occasion. It lifted the whole service to a high plane of beauty and dignity. The whole-hearted and friendly interest of the congregation in this great event in my family's life, as shown by their attendance at the ceremony and reception, and their wonderful outpouring of gifts of friendship was most moving, and deeply touched the hearts of Mrs. Grammer and myself, as well as our daughter.

Not unrecorded or unlamented shall our faithful workers pass on to the life beyond the dividing stream of death.

The Benevolent Society lost a faithful cutter, and St. Stephen's a devoted member, in the death of Miss Caroline Hutchinson, who was taken from us in December. Another such worker passed to her reward when Miss Anna Sinclair died. For many years a faithful Sunday School teacher, Miss Sinclair did not allow her increasing years to lessen the fidelity of her attendance upon the services of the church of her loyal devotion. To the last she could be found in her place. During her short illness she left a bequest of five hundred dollars to St. Stephen's. By reason of the time of its writing, this bequest was not valid, but Mr. William S. Ashbrook, her nephew, has notified me that his mother, Mrs. Joseph Ashbrook, will carry out her sister's wishes.

After about eight months of suffering, after many operations, and many sickening alternations of hope and apprehension, Mr. Harry Gabell was delivered on January 13th, from his pains, and passed on to his reward. He was a member of the Confirmation Class of 1924. Through his long sickness he showed unusual fortitude and patience. Wonderful was the grace of God as shown in his stoutheartedness, and in the marvelous courage and devotion of his wife. May God support and sustain her.

On Wednesday, January 20th, at the High School on Spring Garden Street where she was a teacher, Miss Emma L. Berry made an address in praise of her Alma Mater, Cornell University. Immediately after the address she was taken very ill, and was carried to the Western Homeopathic Hospital, where she died next day. She was buried in her home in New York State, but a service was held for her friends by Mr. McHenry, at 7.30 P. M., on Saturday, the 23rd. Her ill health and her absorbing tasks left her no leisure to devote to church work, but she was a faithful member, and will be missed in the church as well as in the school she served so faithfully.

On March 21st, at the 11 o'clock service we shall have the rite of Confirmation administered. The first meeting of the Confirmation Class will be on Friday, February 5th, at 8 P. M., and there will be regular meetings every Friday from that date to the Confirmation. In these talks the distinctive features of the Protestant Episcopal Church are explained, and the fundamental truths of all the Churches are emphasized. A cordial invitation is given to all who have not yet been confirmed to take this step, and publicly assume the obligations of a follower of Jesus of Nazareth, and of a loyal son of our Heavenly Father. The lectures will close shortly before 9 o'clock.

Any persons who cannot attend at this hour the Rector will be glad to confer with privately, either at their homes, or at the Rector's office.

The Community House attendance for the month of January, up to noon January 27th, and so not including the Fair, the dancing class, etc., was 758. This includes one Sunday School of 120. There are 55 registered members of St. Stephen's Community House Association, outside of the membership through St. Stephen's Church.

Woman's Auxiliary

Mr. and Mrs. Ancell were guests of the Woman's Auxiliary at the January meeting. Each made a short address about their work in China. Mr. Ancell spoke concerning Mahan School and Mrs. Ancell told of her work among the women. She thinks there is no work so worth while as the evangelization of China, because the people are so wonderful and their population constitutes one-fourth of the people of the earth.

It is a great regret that more women of the congregation do not come to the Auxiliary and learn what a small group, with concerted effort, can do.

The delegates bring wonderful reports from their committee meetings at the Church House where appeals come in and where the women set about to fulfill them.

The range of accomplishment is wide: a magazine is sent regularly to a missionary in the Philippines; quilt pieces are sent to a little group of Indian women in the far West; a well is dug for some struggling mission worker, or a house is built. Sometimes it is a dormitory or a church. And when the letters come from all these people acknowledging the efforts of the Woman's Auxiliary, they warm the heart.

Young People's Club Bazaar

The Bazaar given by the Young People's Club on November 20th and 21st, was a great success. The proceeds seem to be an endless stream as we received two checks this week, but I think we must make a report, so any money coming after this date will be held for next Fall, when we hope to have another fair.

Our gross proceeds were $1,513.59; expenses $440.19, leaving a total gain of $1,073.40. We will use $500 for our charity work, and the balance for equipping our club with dishes, silver, linen, kitchenware, etc., the remainder to go to the Community House.

The Club wishes to thank the congregation for their support, without which we could not have made such a success.

Mrs. Howard Reifsnyder,
President.

LETTER FROM JAPAN

St. Margaret's School,
Takaido-mura, Tokyo, Japan,
January 1, 1926.

My dear Dr. Grammer:

Thank you very much for your very kind letter of December 3rd, and the postal order for $42.00, both of which came to my hand in due time. The money reached me most opportunely, for we Japanese are in special need of money at the end of the year, so I was all the more grateful.

I trust the little picture of the piano and the letter which my daughter wrote you in September, I think, safely reached you. Just now she is working on the book called Czerny. As you say, I hope the day will come when she may be called to play at the radio station, so that you may be able to hear, but I am afraid that is not very certain, as there are so many better musicians than she in Tokyo.

How I wish I were in Philadelphia to hear Dr. Major. I always admire him very much. What the liberals need is exactly what you say on the subject, and I am glad that such a book as the Liberal Evangelican has come out. I have read so many favorable comments on the book, and your article in the Chronicle, for which I thank you most heartily, makes the book so attractive that I expect to get the book as soon as possible.

Eleven girls of St. Margaret's were baptized on December 20th, the fourth Sunday in Advent. On the Christmas Eve we had a Christmas entertainment of the school. Girls recited English Psalms, sang carols in English, had an English play entitled, "The Spirit of Christmas," and a Japanese classical comedy, "Radio," an original piece by one of our teachers

The school gave its Christmas offering Yen 300 toward the Japan's apportionment in the Board's plan to pay off the deficit.

All this made our Christmas a very joyful season.

I write this on the New Year's Eve. The whole city is just as busy and beautiful as a Christmas Eve in America. Every store is decorated; accounts are being settled; the New Year's purchases are made and presents are exchanged. One modern intolerable task in Japan at this season is to address hundreds and thousands of cards of New Year's greetings. I have sent out four hundred of them but expect to answer two hundred more when the New Year postal deliveries bring in my friends' cards of the same import.

From this time on I write on the New Year's Day. The world is completely changed. Absolute calm reigns over the capital. The national flag is put out at every door or gate, which is decorated with pines and bamboos. After eating their time-honored New Year's food, the stewed glutinous rice cakes, etc., people dressed in their best begin to make their New Year calls. Hundreds and thousands resort to the shrine of the late Emperor or some Buddhist temples to pay their earliest respect of the year and ask blessings on themselves and their own families.

Girls play shuttle-cock and battle-dore and boys fly their inevitable kites. Young men and women play Uta-Karuta, the classical poem-card game. Theatres and movies are crowded, while the well-to-do people dash off to the fashionable seashore or mountain places of pleasure to spend the three New Year's days—we have three days instead of one, as in America.

My wife and daughter most heartily join me in sending you very sincere New Year wishes and the kindest regards. Will you kindly remember me most cordially to Mrs. Grammer?

Very sincerely yours,
J. H. Kobayashi.

The Sunday School

Mr. Carrigan, our Verger, tells us that the night of our Christmas Festival, Tuesday, December 29th, 1925, he put all the available chairs, 410, in the Auditorium, besides 15 or more people stood. We had fifty in the play, so that all together we had 475 present, when we presented, after six weeks of strenuous rehearsal, our Musical Christmas Play of "Happiness." Of course, all in the play were made happy by the hearty reception given to the performance. We are more than grateful to all who so kindly assisted us, particularly Mr. Sparks for his beautiful scenery and Mr. Clarke who with our young men produced such fine effects with it. As an accompanist, Helen Patman pleased and surprised us all. The nigtt was fine and the players in fine fettle. The good spirit that prevailed and the voluntary consecration of all that took part, successfully carried our Christian Christmas Spirit that we wished to convey and incidentally tell the Road to Happiness. Below we give its outline with thankful appreciation to all who took part.

Marriage has taken two teachers from us recently, Miss Nodine and Miss Grammer, whom we sincerely wish all happiness and success; others will take their places and help us fulfill our mission. The immediate call is the bringing of scholars to Confirmation, and we believe we will have the usual good class to present to the Rector.

Faithfully yours,
George H. Streaker, Sup't.

ELLA HEADMAN, Treasurer.

The Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

The chief event of last month was the Liberal Conference. It was a greater success than I had anticipated, though I was all along, in spite of my inability to secure a Biship for the Communion Service on Tuesday, sanguine that it would not be a failure. Both "The Churchman," and the "Southern Churchman" publish laudatory accounts of its proceedings. Here is an extract from the editorial in "The Churchman":

"Altogether about one hundred and fifty of the liberal clergy went to the conference at Philadelphia. Some acknowledged that they had come filled with doubt as to the wisdom of holding such a series of meetings. 'I confess,' said one person, making a typical remark, 'I was afraid that there would be bitterness and partisanship. What impressed me was the utter lack of any such thing; instead, there was a religious spirit which I have never seen surpassed in any group. I now see the value of organization. If the public could have looked in on the sessions, it would have a quite different conception of Liberals, and the things for which they stand.'

"The number of those attending the conference was necessarily limited. It was not intended to be a national but rather a regional gathering. It was not intended to be a spectacular gesture, and wasn't. Dr. Grammer, rector of St. Stephen's Church, and his Vestry, who financed the conference, and who have invited Liberals to a similar conference next year, have done a gracious and constructive piece of service."

From the long and enthusiastic report in the "Southern Churchman," which gives an abstract of each of the six papers, I select this characterization of the spirit of the gathering:

"Every man present felt that he breathed the atmosphere of high adventure. The face of every man there shone with the assurance that he had come into an inheritance of the promise of God; and that some impulse, clear as the call of God to Abraham, impelled him to go out by faith into a place which he should after receive for his own; and that he went out, not knowing whither he went, but certain of the Voice that called and the Light that lit the path. Every man knew that by his presence he would be labeled 'dangerous' by a large body of the Church. One speaker, in the midst of a speech that glowed with loyalty to the truth as it is in Jesus, declared: 'It is fine to talk to you men, for I know that when you came here you blocked forever every road to preferment, and destroyed for ever every hidden hope of becoming a Bishop.' As he said this we thought of what Edmund Burke had said on a great occasion in Parliament: 'I know the map of England as well as any man here present, and I know that the road I am taking does not lead to preferment.'"

These remarks doubtless hold true of some of the clergy in the more conservative dioceses in the Province, but I can not think that any clergyman in the diocese of Pennsylvania felt that he was doing any thing particularly courageous in attending the Conference. Bishop Garland wrote me that he would gladly have made the Communion Address if he had not made all his arrangements before he received the invitation to spend the week elsewhere in special preparation for Lent.

We shall have plenty of time now to prepare for the Conference of next year. I doubt whether we ever can

"recapture
The first fine careless rapture"

the sense of adventure which Dr. Dunn, the Editor of "The Southern Churchman" felt so strongly. But we can have papers, that may perhaps be valuable contributions to current religious thought, worthy to be gathered into a volume. For example, we might take up the question of the New Testament Miracles. People do not accept Christianity to-day, because of the miracles recorded in the gospel; they are convinced either by the fruits of Christianity, or the moral truths of Christianity, or the mystical experience that the Gospel has produced, or by the weight of authority, and common sense reasoning. I am reading a brilliant course of lectures in which an eminent professor of theology undertakes to prove the truth of Christianity without any appeal to miracles. But the question is worth considering, how much of Christianity would be left if the miracles are all eliminated as parables, or legends, or allegories? Strike out all those stories of miracles and how much would we really know of Jesus? What right would we have to say that He went about doing good? Is such treatment of the miracles historically justifiable? No scholar doubts the Pauline authorship of Galatians. St. Paul refers in that epistle to miracles, as a recognized accompaniment of the gospel message. The same is true of Corinthians. There is no sound philosophical objection to the occurrence of a miracle. It is not a credential of a religious teacher that is unworthy of God, or of man. Science, of course, strenuously objects to miracles. Science also strenuously objects to the freedom of the will, and the creative power of personality. The whole endeavor of science is to make man a mere effect of pre-ceding causes, and to treat his sense of freedom as a delusion. If we do not correct science by philosophy, we shall be accepting the crass view of Darrow, that criminals ought not to be blamed or punished for their crimes, since there is really no such thing as moral accountability. For my part I hold that philosophy is here wiser than science. I hold also that the question of miracles is a question of evidence, and I find the accounts of the miracles of Jesus and His resurrection in the earliest Christian records. I cannot understand how faith in a crucified malefactor could have arisen in Judaea, or spread through the Roman Empire, unless there were, as in Philippi, and Ephesus according to the record, some miracles, and I note that at Athens, where Paul worked no miracle, he made small impression. It seems to me reasonable that miracles should accompany the origin of the new gospel before the appeal to fruits was possible, and I can see good reason, when these collective fruits had been garnered in, why the miracles should not be continued. Without some great purpose, miracles would, in their frequent occurrence, show God deficient in system and foresight, and a partial and undependable ruler of the universe.

It seems to me that it might be worth while to make either Miracles, or Sacraments the chief topic of the next Sexagesima Conference. It could be pointed out which miracles lack evidence, which miracles are clearly later growths, which are part of the primitive faith, and also and this is very important, what are the limitations of science in discussing this question.

For my own part I think most men of science are totally ignorant of philosophy, and have no realization that methods of analysis suitable enough for the realm of causes and effects, are not adequate for what has been well named the realm of ends, the realm where the will is moved not by causes, but by reasons, and decides not by past influences alone, but under the influence of ideals which lie in the future. I think it would be fine to have a conference on miracles, their place in Christianity, and from the point of view of Philosophy and History and Science. To my mind, the chief difference between Liberals and Modernists, is in their attitude toward miracles. The Modernist is abjectly submissive to the scientific point of view; the Liberal is more philosophical.

The Lunch on Tuesday was attended by 117 persons—some of our guests could not remain that long. It was a great occasion. It was most refreshing to see how the clergy enjoyed meeting like-minded men, and how they "tasted," as Ian Maclaren would say, the good things of the speakers. I ought to add that there was a general desire that the papers should be published. It was felt, however, that it would be wise to use them first at similar conferences, and in seminaries, if opportunity could be secured, before giving them permanent form.

By the time that this monthly is issued you will probably have in your hands an appeal from the Committee of the Vestry in regard to our meeting the Expectation in 1926. I hope that we may have a general response. I am proud of the record of the Parish for 1925. Never in all the years of my rectorship, and I make bold to say never in all the years before my day, has the Parish given so much for outside causes. In old days, when the Church had a much larger and richer membership, there was no such system, and no such sense of responsibility for the general work as is abroad to-day.

I do not see how people who claim to be seriously endeavoring to lead the Christian life, can assume the attitude of irresponsibility, and act and speak as if they had no duty in helping the Church in which they are members, to carry out its programme. Loyalty is one of the largest elements in religion—loyalty to our family, to the State, and to the Church, all ought to be found in a follower of Jesus. You are entitled to your rector's loyalty. You would have a right to think me a poor rector if I were harping on the faults of individual members of my congregation, or speaking to outsiders of what I considered the faults of my people. Of course, there are times when the rector ought to reprove, rebuke and testify to the truth with all courage. It is his duty to teach and not to try to win the plaudits of his people. Instruction that does not awake emotion is apt to be fruitless, but emotion that is not based on sound instruction is either evanescent or fanatical. On the other hand a rector is entitled to the loyalty of his people. Little can be done when the crew wants to lay the course, instead of trusting the navigating officer. Popular rule here means shipwreck. The right use of democracy is to seek out and then stand by a leader. I attribute the great success of last year, in raising money, to the increasing loyalty of the congregation, loyalty to me as the rector, loyalty to Bishop Garland as the head of the diocese, loyalty to the Church, as the means of bringing in the Kingdom of God, and spreading the knowledge of the truth, as it is in Jesus.

I am particularly grateful to the Vestry for its cooperation in raising the Expectation, and I appreciate the way in which the committee is seeking to systematize our giving.

Our greatest need is to get more people to take the envelopes. It would be fine if we could bring the number up to 300. I wonder if this could be accomplished?

While I write the report of the contributions of the churches of the Diocese lies before me. It is, indeed, most gratifying to see St. Stephen's marked with the asterisk that indicates the parishes that have met their Expectations.

Here is our standing:

*St. Stephen's, Philadelphia: Expectation, $6500; payments on expectations, $6500.03; forward work, $250; specials, $1260.00; total, $8,010.03. Through accounting wardens, $5,734.52; other sources, $2,275.51.

It is a special gratification to have such a large proportion pass through the hands of the Accounting Warden. This means that it is given through the plate or envelopes and comes from the congregation as a whole.

I notice that one congregation that contributed far more than we—about $17,500—contributed only about $2,000 of this through the wardens. Of course, that means that a few rich people gave the rest directly to the Diocese and ignored the Parish. Such a report as that is a sign of great weakness in the congregation as a whole. I am hopeful that we can raise $7,000 next year by system, and hope that the great bulk of it will pass through the Church's treasury.

We sustained the loss of a regular attendant and faithful supporter in the sudden death of Miss Emma L. Berry. Miss Berry's ill health for years and her arduous duties as a teacher of Latin in the High School prevented her from taking much part in the Church's activities, but she was one of our most loyal and faithful members, deeply interested in religion, profoundly sympathetic with her Rector and the St. Stephen's spirit, and conscientiously helpful of the cause. Her envelopes were all faithfully paid up till the time of her death.

I had the privilege of paying tribute to her memory in a brief service on February 26th at the High School at 17th and Spring Garden Streets, where she was one of the staff. Would that we could have more members in St. Stephen's of the influential class to which Miss Berry belonged. It is, indeed, an honor to have, as we have, some five or six high school teachers on our roll.

The Confirmation Class meets on Saturday in the Vestry Room from 8 to 8.45. But the Rector would be glad to have private interviews with any who cannot attend at that time. Confirmation will be at 11 o'clock on the morning of March 21st. May God bless our Church and make us a recruiting station for His army.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

PEW RENTS

Be pleased to take notice that the rents of pews and sittings in St. Stephen's Church will become due on the 25th inst. If paid by cheque, make payable to the order of I. Smith Raspin, Accounting Warden, and remit to M. Brantley Ellis, 1717 Packard Bldg.

ST. STEPHEN'S AID SOCIETY

St. Stephen's Aid Society will hold its usual meetings on Friday mornings during Lent, at 10 o'clock, in the Parish House. The making of baby garments should appeal to every woman and we are asking the women of the congregation to help us with their interest and co-operation.

E. K. CAMPBELL, Chairman.

Lenten Speakers

March 8 to 12, inclusive—Rev. Percy G. Kammerer, Ph.D., Rector of Trinity Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.

March 13—Rev. Henry B. Kirkland, Pastor-elect of the St. Nicholas Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York.

March 15 to 19, inclusive—Rev. Charles Wood, D.D., Pastor of the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, Washington, D. C.

March 20—Rev. A. H. Haughey, Rector of St. Mary's Church, Ardmore, Pa.

March 22 to 26, inclusive—Rt. Rev. Philip Cook, D.D., Bishop of Delaware.

March 27—Rev. Harry H. St. Clair Hathaway, Dean of the Pro-Cathedral, Philadelphia.

March 29—Rev. Malcolm E. Peabody, Rector of St. Paul's Church, Chestnut Hill.

March 30—Rev. Granville Taylor, Chapel of the Mediator, Philadelphia.

March 31—Rt. Rev. Frank Du Moulin, D.D., Rector of the Church of the Saviour, Philadelphia.

April 1 and 2—Rev. Carl E. Grammer, S.T.D., Rector of St. Stephen's Church.

April 3—Rev. J. L. Hady, Rector of St. Paul's Church, Doylestown, Pa.

All these speakers have proved themselves to be prophetic teachers, men with a message for the times. I renew my request that the men of the congregation make a special effort to be present on Wednesdays and Fridays, and assist in taking up the offering.

The Woman's Auxiliary

Mrs. Woodward, the newly elected President of the Pennsylvania Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary, was the speaker at the February meeting at St. Stephen's Branch.

Two new efforts were emphasized by Mrs. Woodward which she hoped would be taken up vigorously. Each parish is urged to have an appointed person to enlarge the subscription list of the Spirit of Missions, that more members may be educated and interested in missions. Mrs. Frank H. Whiting was appointed to the work.

The second objective is to have shut-in intercessors in each parish.

The next meeting will be held March 18th at 11 o'clock.

On a preaching trip to Doylestown I noticed a stone bridge over a stream, which suggested the following lines:

THE TWO STREAMS

Through white meadows flows the dark stream
  Ice-encrusted are its sides—
Underneath a massive stone bridge
  Ceaselessly the current glides.

O'er the bridge a highway passes,
  Three low arches bear its weight.
In the rushing-eddying waters,
  Stand their pillars, fixed as fate.

Yet how fast-bound are those waters,
  Tho they seem so wild and free
As they dash against the pillars
  Hurrying to the restless sea.

Tho they flood the farmer's meadows,
  Float his hay stacks, drown his stock,
Waves by law are just as close bound
  As the never-shifting rock.

How diverse the stream the bridge bears!
  Stream of human hopes and fears,
Flowing from Creation's morning
  To the day beyond the year.

Leaning on the bridge's low wall
  Mutual faith, fond lovers vow;
O'er it pass the funeral mourners,
  Plowmen weary from the plow.

Postmen, salesmen, hucksters, housewives,
  Children on their way to school;
Some to fail in life's stern struggle,
  Some to climb to seats of rule.

Upward, downward flow these currents
  As rules will or circumstance;
Some mount upward o'er obstructions,
  Some whirl round in aimless dance.

Strong the force that draws the waters
  From their spring-heads to the sea
Stronger far this wilder current,
  Life of our humanity.

Far through space the waters travel
  From their sources to the sea
Swift through time the life-stream hastens
  Speeding to Eternity.

Wondrous streams from wondrous fountains!
  Wondrous course to wondrous goal!
Wondrous is the whole creation.
  Wondrous most the human soul!

CARL E. GRAMMER.

Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

One of our chief attractions is undoubtedly our beautiful music. From its very foundation St. Stephen's has stood for an alliance between art and religion. It was, perhaps, the chief defect of the Evangelical movement, that in its effort to exalt religion to its rightful dominion over life, it neglected our aesthetic needs and often treated our yearnings for beauty and culture as worldly aspirations. It may be that this attitude was inevitable in a missionary enterprise's initial stages. But certainly it was in the long run a great injury to the educational influence of the Church and unnecessarily antagonized powerful instincts and aspirations. When St. Andrew's was founded in 1823 to express the Evangelical spirit and become a great source of religious influence, St. Stephen's was built a few squares away to supplement the Evangelical message by greater attention to the aesthetics of worship. St. Andrew's facade was on classic lines, a modification of Greco-Roman architecture to meet the needs of Christianity, but St. Stephen's sought to emphasize our indebtedness to the ages before the Reformation by adopting a modified form of the Gothic; its battlemented towers, its pointed arches all being regarded in that day of classical architecture in the Churches as quite a return to the atmosphere of the Middle Ages. It is very extraordinary that this preference for the Gothic did not show itself in the memorial tablet of the first rector, Dr. Montgomery. We have a fine example of a Gothic memorial in the canopy over the bust of Dr. Ducachet, but Dr. Montgomery's tablet with its torches is a modification of the pagan memorials.

But this was only a momentary aberration or lapse, the general policy of the Church was to associate Christianity with the Arts, and to bring into prominence the important contribution that the Arts have received from Christianity. St. Stephen's was a Church where religion was on good terms with the Arts; the Church with Gothic Architecture and beautiful highly cultured music.

When the new organ was given about 18 years ago, some people desired to have it built in the south-east corner of the Church and the choir transferred to the east end. I felt that from an historical and antiquarian point of view it was highly inexpedient to change either the doors of the pews or the position of the choir. It seemed to me that it was best to keep as far as possible the general arrangement that prevailed in the Churches built in the first quarter of the 19th Century, arrangements that would in time gain historic interest. So I persuaded the Vestry to keep the organ and the choir in the west gallery. I have no doubt that the Vestry was influenced by a statement which I obtained from Dean Hodges of the Cambridge Seminary, whom I consulted as to the present English tendency in such matters. The Dean advised me that the expert opinion in England favored taking the choirs out of the Chancel, where they distract the attention of the congregation from the minister, and placing them at a greater distance from the congregation, so that the various musical parts might be heard in the right proportions. This opinion concided with my own and endorsed the line of action that our peculiar conditions made expedient for many reasons. I confess that I accepted it entirely on the Dean's authority and in my own experience of English Churches saw no proof of its accuracy.

But the Dean knew the mind of the experts. In the last number of "The Modern Churchman," Canon Leslie Hunter has an article on Music in Worship in which he gives as one of the reasons why choirs do not make congregations sing—the position of the choirs. "They are in the wrong position," he writes. "If a choir is cooped up in a narrow medieval Chancel, as choirs have been since the Oxford Movement, they can not make a congregation sing. To lead congregational singing, choir and organ should be behind the congregation."

I have heard some people speak of the location of our choir as a defect. Let such critics take note of this expert opinion. We have the choir and organ in the right place. Why can't people appreciate rightly their advantages? No music-lover will sit forward in a Church, that has the Choir in the Chancel. Those front seats are made by that arrangement musically undesirable. A high pulpit also makes these seats undesirable for hearers who want to see the speaker as well as hear him. Yet we persist in arrangements that have a tendency to keep the people far away from the front and then wonder that the people won't take the front seats and will force the preacher to call to them across a chilling interval of empty pews.

Surely we have much to be grateful for in St. Stephen's in the location of our choir, in the moderate altitude of the pulpit and in the singular intimacy, which the position of our Chancel and its separation from the choir, give to our celebration of the Holy Communion. I think we have a wonderful interior. I like our delicate suggestion of Gothic in the windows and arches. I prefer the reminiscence of the middle ages to the suggestions of pagan temples, but I am glad that we have escaped the recessed Chancel, with the choristers singing in the faces of the people in the front pews, and watching the people coming up to receive the elements at the Communion; that we do not have the Communion Table, where the Comfortable words are read, some 30 or 40 feet away from the people to whom those cheering assurances and invitations are to be tenderly announced. One of the glories of St. Stephen's, in my opinion, is its Chancel and its choir gallery.

May God grant us the grace and power to have good preaching in the one, and artistic and uplifting music in the other. Join with them the spirit of cordiality, hospitality, fellowship, and service, and you have the chief elements in the continuance and prosperity of our beloved Church.

Inasmuch as the issue of the repeal of the Volstead Act has been raised by the candidacy of Mr. Vare for a seat in the Senate as a candidate in favor of repeal, it is just as well that we should have the 18th Amendment before us.

Here it is with the pertinent portion of the introduction as given in the World's Almanac:

ARTICLE 18

Liquor Prohibition Amendment

(The following amendment was proposed to the Legislatures of the several States by the 65th Congress, December 18, 1917, and on January 29th, 1919, the United States Secretary of State proclaimed its adoption by 36 States and declared it in effect on January 16, 1920.

Early in 1920 the validity of the 18th Amendment was upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States in suits to void brought by the States of Rhode Island and New Jersey and various brewers and distillers.)

1.—After one year, after the ratification of this article the manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, or the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States, and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

2.—The Congress and the several States shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation. (The 3rd article is of no significance, since it reduced the time limit for ratification to seven years. An item of no moment now, since it was ratified in about a year and two months.)

The National Prohibition Act, popularly known as the Volstead Act, providing for Federal Prohibition enforcement, and defining intoxicating liquor as liquor which contained one-half of one per cent or more of alcohol, passed Congress in October, 1919.

It is not generally known that one-half of one per cent was selected as the proportion at which alcohol becomes intoxicating, because of the precedent established under the license system, when the brewers and saloon keepers claimed that their licenses would be lessened in value and interfered with if unlicensed sellers of soft-drinks were allowed to sell beverages with more than one-half of one per cent of alcohol. The country thought the saloon people ought to know when liquor becomes intoxicating, and they said at above a half of one per cent.

The question before us as citizens is whether we will loyally carry out the decision of the people as expressed in the 18th Amendment? As Albert Shaw well says in the Review of Reviews, it is an insult to our intelligence to tell us that light wines and beers can be legally manufactured, sold and transported in the United States while that 18th Amendment stands. To repeal the Volstead Act will weaken the power of the law, but it will not make the manufacture of light wine and beer lawful; it will simply make lawlessness prevail.

The only way to get light wines and beers is to repeal the 18th Amendment. That repeal will bring back the saloon. No one will get rid of boot-legging and of speak-easies by repealing the Volstead Act. That repeal will only multiply them and increase the lawlessness. The road to law-abiding lies in the other direction, namely, in the steady enforcement of the present law.

While no one will say that taking a drink of liquor inevitably leads to crime, it is absolutely certain that the manufacture and sale for beverage purposes of intoxicating liquor is a prolific source of crime. That being so, I regard the maintenance of this law as a moral issue. The vast majority of the Christian people of this country advocate Prohibition as a measure of high expediency for the morals and welfare of the Country. Churches do not express opinions on fiscal measures, or administrative measures. Moral questions, however, fall within their province. All the Churches look on Prohibition as presenting a moral issue. I do not see how this feature in the present campaign can be overlooked, avoided, or straddled.

It resembles the issue presented by Kansas. Stephen A. Douglas said that he didn't look on slavery as a moral issue and thought that it was a matter to be decided by each new State as it came into the Union. What each new Community wished, he would favor for it. Lincoln replied that the extension of slavery was a moral issue, and one which the Nation must decide. That is the way that this "wet" and "dry" issue in our Pennsylvania Campaign impresses me; it is a moral issue and a national issue. The question is whether we shall loyally carry out the decision of the Nation in the 18th Amendment by retaining the necessary legislation for its enforcement. If all the drys would unite on an outspoken dry candidate, the State might be carried. On one point I am clear, and that is that this is a moral issue.

I repeat here the appeal for the Benevolent Society that appeared in the Bulletin: The Benevolent Society has many unfinished garments in their closets and about five more weeks to work, but lacks sufficient funds to carry on. They have 18 sewers and do work for 15 hospitals. About $200 is needed and the Society will be most grateful for any contributions which will enable them to close in May with a successful season as usual. Miss Isabel Davis, Treasurer.

This number will come into your hands on Easter Sunday. I wish you all the joys of this glorious day.

There is no Death! What seems so is transition,
This life of mortal breath,
Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portal we call Death.

In our Father's house are many mansions.

—To be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord. Let us cheer and comfort one another with these words.

Perhaps I owe it to the congregation in view of the numerous addresses Dr. Empringham made in our pulpit to make some more extended comment than I have yet expressed upon his extraordinary pronouncements in the newspapers. They are a great surprise to me and came as a great shock. I wrote at once to Dr. Empringham about them and have received no reply. I cannot understand his change of face.

The position that Dr. Empringham took in his addresses at St. Stephen's was that the investigations of the bio-chemists, as he called them, a class of scientists to which he belonged, men who study the effects of chemical elements and compounds upon living organisms, and especially upon the constitution of man, have shown that alcohol is a deleterious habit-forming drug—never helpful, but always harmful, even in the smallest quantities; that the peace and comfort that it gives to its users is always comparable to the quiet that is obtained by disconnecting the telephone; that it is delusive, and not based on any new energy, or any improved conditions. I believe that this is the testimony of the majority of the chemists on this subject. The statements of such eminent men as Dr. Mayo of Rochester, and ex-President Eliot of Harvard, had greater weight with me than the allegations of Dr. Empringham. But I thought his statements true. I was glad to have a chemist make them to the congregation.

I heard many people praise his presentation to the skies as superior to the moral argument. I valued it, but I confess that I never regarded it as anything like as conclusive. In the first place it was an argument that we were not in a position to test; it was an appeal to experts, and every one knows that there are physicians who take a different view. Because of my conviction that alcohol is the source of crime, misery and sin, I was delighted to find eminent experts pronouncing it deleterious to health. I was gratified at the corroboration that science gave to my opposition to the use of alcohol as a beverage. But the original basis of my opposition remained the chief ground. This last was only a secondary proof, a corroboration and not the main line of argument. It was the evil effects of alcohol upon character, upon family life, upon the welfare of women and children, the crimes, and miseries that it produced that were the real grounds of my opposition to the saloon.

These were the evils that created the W. C. T. U. and the Anti-Saloon League and the Temperance Movement, and were the mainspring of the agitations and exertions that led to the enactment of the 18th Amendment.

The economic argument, and the chemical argument were helpful, but they were only secondary. The economic argument was as a rule clear enough, though in the old days of local option I have heard the "wets" argue that saloons brought business to a town, but the chemical argument is not so easily verifiable, and must be accepted by most people on the basis of expert opinion.

Many of us thought that Dr. Empringham's presentation was too exclusively the argument of a chemist, and did not sufficiently emphasize the deleterious effects of alcohol on society, and on character.

Now he comes out and announces that his investigations have convinced him that the present law does more harm than good, and that it will be expedient to permit the manufacture and sale of light wines and beers. On the time necessary to enforce on this Eastern Seaboard in sections of the country hostile to prohibition, the will of the nation on this subject, Dr. Empringham has no special qualifications for judgment. Indeed as an Englishman he is probably disqualified, for in England laws are more loyally obeyed and strictly enforced than is possible in our vast country, with our traditions of lawlessness and our easy-going methods. The only reason why Dr. Empringham's opinion is given any importance is that it is given out as the opinion of the chief agent of a temperance society. It has been clearly shown that it was his personal opinion and that it was an entire misspresentation of a little voluntary society, whose agent he was, and certainly not the opinion of the Episcopal Church. It is folly to talk of having light wines and beers, after the repeal of the Volstead Act. As long as the 18th Amendment is unrepealed light wines and beers will be unconstitutional and illegal. No act permitting them can override the 18th Amendment. The repeal of the Volstead Act is only to give license to lawlessness. The theory that contempt for the law will be ended by legalizing once more the one business which always manifested that contempt is about as tenable as the expectation of gathering figs from thistles.

I liked and admired Dr. Empringham, but his change of attitude is so unaccountable and so little justified by his own explanations, that I have lost entirely my confidence in him. His name is Ichabod, as the Puritans would say.

On this whole subject of prohibition I want to make one additional remark, and that is, that it is foolish to be greatly influenced on a question of this kind by the opinions of clubs or Society, or the metropolitan press. These are the mouth-pieces of privilege. Mr. Gladstone, now acclaimed as the greatest Englishman of the Victorian Era, was, during the latter portion of his life, bitterly hated by Society, and reviled by the clubs. On my first visit to England I crossed on a Cunard steamship and reference to Mr. Gladstone at a celebration called forth many hisses. Now his policies are all approved; Ireland has a certain amount of autonomy and the House of Lords has had its power curtailed and Gladstone, himself, is recognized as one of the chief glories of England, and one of the world's greatest Statesmen.

This great leader testified that all the chief reforms of the 19th Century in England were opposed by what he called the upper ten thousand and the metropolitan press. The removal of Catholic disabilities, of the disqualifications of nonconformists, the abolition of the rotten boroughs, the repeal of the corn laws, the enactment of the laws that made a cheap press possible, the disestablishment of the Irish Church; to all these great and beneficent reforms the children of privilege and their newspapers were bitterly hostile.

So convinced was Mr. Cobden that "The Times" would be obstructive of any wise reform, that he announced that in his judgment the opposition of that paper was an important element in the success of any project, since the majority of his countrymen believed that it could be counted on to be upon the wrong side. I confess that I feel much that way about the opposition of society people and clubmen as a class. I do not understand how Christian people can defer as abjectly as some do to the opinions of the privileged and prosperous who are quite satisfied to let things go in the old fashion.

There has never been a moral issue in this country, whether it was slavery, or gambling, or racing, or intemperance which this element in our population did not antagonize. Of course, there are outstanding exceptions, and these exceptional people are usually leaders of reform, but I am speaking of the privileged classes as a whole. No class so bitterly resents the slightest inconvenience from the law, which, in their opinion, is meant to protect their privileges and not to restrain their freedom in the slightest degree.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

The next meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary will be held April 15th. There was no speaker at the March meeting, but there were an unusual number of reports, letters and appeals. Mrs. Reath would be glad to have some second-hand boy's clothing for the family in Georgia.

Letter from Japan

139 Shimoshibuya, Tokyo.

Japan, Feb. 26, 1926.

My dear Dr. Grammer:

Just as I was going to write you, there arrived the two bundles of the Parish News of St. Stephen's Church. They were so interesting and instructive alike. What a wonderful work St. Stephen's is doing! The erection of the Community House is a great idea, but it must be a tremendous task even for the congregation so noted for generosity and the willing service as that of St. Stephen's.

I was interested to see my letters in printed form; so was my daughter Keiko. Only it was quite amusing as well as humiliating to find queer expressions and grammatical mistakes so glaringly standing out on the printed pages. I was, however, comforted in the thought that perhaps those alien swelling diction and faults made my letters more "authentic" than otherwise, for often in talking with a foreigner here in Japan I actually get disappointed if he speaks a perfect Japanese, whereas I feel a peculiar fascination towards him if he betrays once in a while his foreign origin by slight accents in the course of his conversation.

Women's problems in Japan are always behind America by some decades, for our women are conservative. Just now, they are making demands to the Government to establish women's institutions for higher learning and to open for them more widely the doors of men's universities.

As to suffrage, one of the women's magazines in Tokyo canvassed the opinions of the principals of Girls' High Schools in Japan on the subject. The result was interesting. The editor sent out two questions to them: (1) Shall the Japanese women be given the suffrage immediately? (2) If not, how many years after?

Out of 600 principals, 99 responded. Of the 99, 37 answered the first question in the affirmative; 59 felt the suffrage was premature, while 3 were absolutely opposed to anything like the woman's suffrage. The last class took the ground that Japan's political organization had a family as a unit and that the family is represented by man, not by woman; there the suffrage is wrong.

This is ultra-conservative and this type of men is fast passing away.

Seventeen St. Margaret's girls will be confirmed by Bishop Reifsnider day after tomorrow. I am preparing four for baptism.

Our alumnae will number just one thousand by next March, including the class to graduate them. Of the 1,000 alumnae, nearly 450 are Christians. Of the present 252 girls, nearly 50 are Christians, while 90 are strongly pro-Christian. Others are mostly undecided, while a very few are Buddhists or Shintoists.

My first letter last year referred to the doll festival, and once more the season for this charming feast has come back. The festival day is March 3rd, but already the shelves of the doll shops are gorgeous with lovely little kings and queens or two sworded warriors and comely court ladies in their flowing garments. Keiko is now too much grown for dolls. Besides, her sets were burnt in the recent great fire, together with that guitar!

Plum trees are in bloom. After them come peach. Then the inevitable cherry blossoms in March.

Japan has no robins to herald the returning spring. The poetical nightingale, however, is already come. The lark, too, was heard singing the other day when it was very warm.

Keiko is now working on Clemente's Sonatinen-Album.

Most heartily she joins me in wishing you and Mrs. Grammer and other friends my best wishes.

Most sincerely yours,
J. H. Kobayashi.

The Sunday School

The Easter Festival of the Sunday School will be held this year as usual on the Sunday after Easter at four in the afternoon. This year we will take advantage of our new Community House and hold our celebration in the Auditorium. The scholars are practicing new carols, tableaux and exercises, which should make it the usual gala occasion.

As this has become an opportunity for reunion of former teachers, scholars, as well as our old and new friends, it is hoped notice will be taken of this announcement and extended by all who read it with a hearty welcome to others. At Christmas time we had an attendance of nearly 500. Will you all help to give us the same happy congregation?

Remember, it will be held on April 11th, the Sunday afternoon after Easter at four o'clock.

Faithfully yours,
GEORGE H. STREAKER, Supt.

Victrola Wanted

If any one has a Victrola which is not being used, it would be most acceptable and useful in one of our missions in the southern part of the city, where one of St. Stephen's members is in charge of a young girls' club. The need for music in this work is great, but funds are scarce with these children.

A Prayer Used by Cardinal Newman

Lord, support me all day long of this troublous life, until the shadows lengthen and the evening comes, and the busy world is hushed, and the fever of life is over, and my work is done. Then in Thy Mercy grant me safe lodging, and a holy rest, and peace at the last.

Through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

The Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

This last number of the Parish News has been delayed by the late date of the Parish Meeting, whose proceedings it always reports, and by the session of the Convention, which engaged all your rector's time and thought for the Tuesday and Wednesday of the first week in May.

The Annual Parish Meeting was the largest that we have ever had, and was followed by a very pleasant social hour. The reports speak for themselves and are most encouraging. We met our Expectation and made the best record of giving for thirty years. Indeed, so far as I can discern, the best that the Parish has ever achieved in extra-parochial giving.

The three new Vestrymen elected are all regular attendants of the Church, and interested in our work. Mr. Freeston and Mr. Hauger are well known to the morning congregation by their faithful attendance, and Mr. Hasenpat has long been a kind of vestryman at the Sunday evening services. If we can have our charter amended, we ought to secure for the congregation the right to elect a woman on the Vestry. It is rather preposterous that St. Stephen's, which has for years been regarded as a leader in liberal thought, and a church of progressive ideas, should lag behind in gaining this privilege.

As long as the requisite number of men qualified for a vestry's tasks can be found, I am in favor of calling on the men, who do so much less church work than the women, to discharge these responsibilities. But the largest liberty ought to be procured for the congregation in this election. I hate to see the Church lag behind secular organizations in recognizing the ability of women, in such matters, for I am convinced that it is as administrators and experts in details that women are specially gifted. It is here that their skill as housekeepers displays itself. The Church rightly claims that the exaltation of woman is one of the most manifest benefits of Christianity: let it then live up to its own theories.

The Diocesan Convention was unusually interesting. The Bishop's address rose to the dignity of an Episcopal charge in its broad survey of problems both of the diocese and of the General Church, and the Convention seriously addressed itself to its task of organizing the Church's work efficiently. The defeat of the proposal to have women on the Executive Council was due, not to any opposition to their presence, but to a difference of opinion as to the proper method of choosing them; some favoring Episcopal appointment; some, election by the Convention; some, election by the Executive Council; some, election by the Convocations. This diversity of opinion, and the fact that a committee was to be appointed by the Bishop, under resolution of the Convention, to investigate the Executive Council and the Executive Office, and report its findings and suggestions to the next Convention, are the explanations of the failure of the Convention to take this step, which will inevitably be made in the near future.

Every one was delighted with the ability of the Bishop as a presiding officer, his grasp of parliamentary law, and his insight into the needs of the situation. It is so important that the good name of the Diocese be vindicated and our proper pride in our record be maintained, that every one was gratified to have the Bishop show that the Diocese had done well in its contributions to the General Church. When some one once reviled John Bunyan, that great Christian answered, that though in the sight of God, he did confess himself a miserable sinner, as compared to the Divine Righteousness; nevertheless he claimed that he was entitled in the eyes of man and as judged by earthly standards to be regarded as an upright and honorable person. So while we are willing to admit, in the sight of God, that we might as a diocese give more generously for the extension of Christ's Kingdom; nevertheless in comparison of what we give for our own diocesan needs, and in comparison with what the other dioceses give, we are entitled to be regarded as worthy of the respect of our sister dioceses. This was in substance the Bishop's position. I think that it was helpful and wholesome. A just appreciation of effort is a solid encouragement to greater effort. Fault-findings and a grudging lack of appreciation are very disheartening. The Bishop is going to call on us next year for increased gifts to many worthy objects, but he does not want us to be unjustly criticized. He is loyal to us, and such loyalty on his part awakes loyalty on our side. The Executive Council in New York must not be unfair to the diocese of Pennsylvania. Indeed, it will do well if it turn its scrutiny upon its own methods and expenditures and see whether some improvements cannot be effected there.

There are many ways of helping a church. Two of the chief are, of course, contributions and regular Sunday attendance. There are also personal services on committees. Without the sacrifice of time that faithful workers give, the Church would, indeed, be in a sad condition.

But there are other helpers who are not generally recognized, yet who are entitled to especial gratitude. They are the members of our Church who praise it and bring visitors to it, and seek to procure for it new members. I could name members of the congregation who have brought in many new members. They are continually on the look-out. They bring me names of people who are attracted to us. They ask people who come to the city whether they have ever considered St. Stephen's in looking for a place of worship. Such members are not mere passengers, they are part of the crew, they pull their weight in the boat, they are helpers of the cause. If that spirit of loyalty, cooperation, interest, and cordiality can become more and more the spirit of our members, we may be sure that St. Stephen's will be able to adjust itself to all the needs of the future, and continue to render large service to the city and the Church.

During July and August the Rev. Robert O. Kevin, a recent honor graduate of the Philadelphia Divinity School, will have charge of the preaching and pastoral work of the parish. He comes to us with the highest commendations, and we are happy to have such a promising clergyman officiating in St. Stephen's in a summer when the Sesqui-Centennial will doubtless bring so many visitors to this historic city.

There is so much propaganda in the newspapers, and our secular press is so unresponsive to moral aspiration, that I have for several years made it a habit to observe carefully the progress of the Prohibition movement throughout the world. It is most instructive to note how solidly this crusade advances. It is generally admitted that the 18th Amendment will never be repealed. Every election and every investigation makes it plainer that the people of the United States will sustain the laws for the enforcement of that amendment, and will eventually organize efficiently the department to enforce it. But most people do not realize how the movement is spreading into other lands. Local option led the way to Prohibition in America and local option is knocking at the doors of England and Scotland. Norway has greatly restricted the sale of alcoholic beverages.

The following special cable shows how temperance is reaching Holland, the land of "schnapps" and gin:

"The Hague, May 10th.—The Premier, Dr. D. J. Dageer, declared in the second chamber of Parliament that the decrease in State revenue from liquor excises was not due to fraud and bootlegging, but to greater sobriety of the Dutch nation as a consequence of the prohibitionists' activities."

In the German Reichstag local option is being debated. In lower Silesia greater limitations have just been placed on saloons. In Bulgaria the Minister of Education insists that the dangerous effects of alcohol be taught in the school, regardless of the large profits that come to the country from its vineyards. In Bombay, India, drastic prohibition legislation has been passed. Economics and medical science have come to the assistance of the moral reformers. It is only a question of time, and the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes will morally be classed with the trade in narcotics, and will be as much under ban as the slave-trade. Prohibition is not an experiment, it is the conclusion of many experiments.

The Diocesan Convention is very loath to accept the new teaching that it is the duty of the Church to interest itself in the application of Christian principles to social and political questions. But our recent Convention could not refuse to endorse the principle that obedience to law, even if the law is opposed to our personal theories or convictions, is a Christian duty. The justification of offering a resolution on such a subject is not limited to the support that it may give to a special law, unpopular in a certain section and with certain classes; it is also useful as creating a precedent that may eventually become a regular custom, the helpful custom of having the Church speak out frankly and helpfully on moral issues.

How shall the army of the Lord prepare itself efficiently for the battle against wrong if the trumpets give an uncertain sound? Let preachers in the pulpits, and church assemblies in their conventions, speak out boldly on moral issues, and the people will realize that the battle is joined and that the troops are summoned to gather around the standard, and win a victory for righteousness.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

Report of the Benevolent Society

The Benevolent Society started its work for the season of 1925 and 1926 on November 4th and the secretary was pleased to report a large order for towels and dusters from the Poor Richard Club and the Phi Delta-Theta Fraternity.

We have had a most successful season, the articles made reaching a total of 9,343.

On our books are twenty hospitals and institutions from whom we receive many letters of appreciation for the work done for them. At the present time we have eighteen sewers, a new member five years old, comes regularly carrying a basket 6 by 8 inches, which she says contains her week's work, and before leaving she again fills it with small pieces, her new work.

We made two hundred and fifty rompers for the children's ward of Jefferson Hospital, but as three new wards have recently been opened this number was not nearly sufficient for their requirements and the Board of Managers gladly paid for making an additional six hundred.

I am sorry our funds or rather lack of funds would not permit us to do this extra work without charge, as is always the custom of the Benevolent Society.

In response to Dr. Grammer's appeal $100.69 was received for which we thank the friends who came to our assistance. The treasurer regrets being unable to acknowledge all contributions, having the names only of those who sent to her personally.

We have missed the genial presence of Mrs. John Coates Browne from our meetings this winter and look forward to her being with us again in November.

The Society is most grateful to Mrs. M. Phillips Appleton who has so ably filled her place.

By the death of Miss Hutchinson the Benevolent Society has lost a most faithful and loyal member.

The closing meeting will be held May 5th at which time a luncheon provided by the members will be served; this will be followed by an entertainment of moving pictures shown by Mr. Streaker.

Isabel P. Davis,
Secretary.

The Woman's Auxiliary

The usual number of meetings, seven in all, have been held during the season, beginning with a corporate communion in October, and a reorganization of the committees. Several deaths have occurred and one new member has been added to the list, with an average attendance of twenty-three out of eighty names.

The first news from the General Convention was received at the meeting in October, from Mrs. C. William Spiess, Secretary of the Woman's Aid of the North Convocation, who wrote from New Orleans a full account of the daily proceedings, and especially stressed the thrill and devotion shown at the wonderful United Thank Offering Service. Further news was brought in November by Bishop Garland, who honored the Auxiliary by repeating the report he had made to the convention on the status of affairs in Mexico, not only in regard to the Church, but existing conditions as well, illustrating his address with various specimens and pictures brought from this neighboring republic.

Mrs. Henry Dillard, Jr., was to have given her impressions of the convention at the December meeting, but a sudden illness and operation prevented her from being present.

In January Dr. and Mrs. Ancell both spoke of their work at Mahan School, Yangchow, China, and of the progress made with the women. The student movement and general unrest had caused St. Stephen's Hall and in fact, the whole school to be closed, and it remains to be seen how matters may be adjusted when these missionaries return to China this autumn.

As new Diocesan officers of the Woman's Auxiliary were elected last fall, it was fitting that so far as possible the various auxiliaries should have the opportunity to meet these officials in their own parishes, so Mrs. George Woodward, the new President, was welcomed at the February meeting, and Mrs. H. F. Baher, the Diocesan Treasurer of the United Thank Offering, with consecrated fervor, spoke most inspiringly at the April meeting.

Mrs. Woodward urged the increased circulation of the Spirit of Missions, that most interesting illustrated monthly magazine which keeps one in touch with the extension of God's kingdom, and Miss Mary M. Roberts was appointed to ask for subscriptions for this object, and has been quite successful in procuring several new subscribers. Mrs. Woodward also advocated having shut-in intercessors in every parish, who, by their prayers, would not be shut out from active participation in Christian work.

When there is no specified speaker at a meeting, there are always numerous letters and appeals to be considered, which have been received during the month, and it is pleasant to record that these appeals are for the most part generously responded to, by sending boxes of clothing, money, books, cards, toys, Christmas gifts, etc., to different parts of the city and country, thus adding a link to the endless chain of fellowship.

Although it is to be regretted that St. Stephen's was not among the sixty-five parishes holding Mission Study Classes during the year, yet it is most encouraging to learn that ninety-two classes were formed, and one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one persons attended the sessions.

On Educational Day, conducted by Mrs. Hill, successor to Mrs. Pilsbry, two hundred and fifty more people were present as visitors, so that over two thousand were instructed about Latin America; a splendid record.

The aftermath of the convention has been felt throughout by the message brought back in regard to the financial situation of the Church, showing a serious deficit which had been allowed to continue so long that it threatened to undermine the very foundations of the programme adopted, which it is impossible to carry out in its entirety while handicapped by such a tremendous accumulated debt, and great alarm has been occasioned by a knowledge of this fact.

Therefore, the Woman's Auxiliary at New Orleans resolved that they would ask all the Auxiliaries to urge first, the payment in full of all general Church and Parish quotas; second, to overcome a luke-warmness by deeper spiritual understanding and greater consecration through prayer and the sacraments; also the awakening of the women of the Church to more effective service for Christ, united parish effort, the strengthening of our rural and foreign-born work, closer relationship with the missionaries in the field, furthering in every way the spirit of united Christian effort, and finally, the carrying out of a constructive programme of education for peace and the use of our best efforts and strongest influence toward the promotion of international and inter-racial good-will.

May the women of St. Stephen's Auxiliary be enabled to live up to this high standard.

Laura Bell, President,
Woman's Auxiliary of St. Stephen's.

Report of St. Stephen's Branch of the Girls' Friendly Society

Fifty-one years ago the Girls' Friendly Society was started in England. At the first meeting five people were present. St. Stephen's Branch in Philadelphia counts itself fortunate in being a unit of this great Society which now extends over the world, having about fifty-nine thousand members in America alone.

The opening meeting of the Branch for the season of 1925-1926 was held on October 12th, and, with the exception of one Monday evening when the Community House was being used by the Clergy, meetings have continued regularly each week.

Two services have been held in the Church, one our Corporate Communion when the Rev. Percy Stockman was the celebrant and the other our Annual Admission Service.

A new Working Associate, Miss Anne R. Daley, has taken charge of the younger girls and has been of great help to the Branch.

Weekly classes, under the care of competent teachers, have been held in elocution and millinery.

The suppers are a much appreciated feature of the Branch life. The food is judiciously purchased and well studied combinations are served. The girls who come regularly always enjoy an hour of good fellowship.

Our Christmas work of dressing dolls and filling stockings for the children in the Philadelphia General Hospital is one of our greatest pleasures, and each year a larger number of little ones have been made happy by gifts from the Girls' Friendly Society. This year 108 large stockings, 47 dressed dolls, 50 net stockings filled with candy, scrap-books and toys were sent to the hospital and 4 stockings to individual children.

One Band made 64 comfort-bags for the Seamen's Church Institute while another sent gifts of clothing and food and contributed toward the over-due rent of a family in distress. This same Band has secured a new and much more suitable position for the father of this family and since last November has sent a quart of milk each day for the two under-nourished children. These children had never tasted milk and at first refused to drink it, now they call it "our quart of milk;" the mother of the family says that for the first time she has enough clothing.

Still another Band continues its gifts and visits to a "Shut-In."

Hand-knitted sweaters, baby-sacques, etc., to the value of $86.00 have been sent to missions through the Diocesan Supply Bureau, and Lenten sewing valued at $76.65 to the Church of the Holy Spirit (Indian) at Paudlet, Utah.

During Lent the married members held six meetings when 36 baby sacques were made for St. Martha's House, 69 bibs for the Sheltering Arms and 6 dresses for St. Michael's & All Angels.

The Branch has given in money:

At Hallowe'en there was a costume party and in Christmas week the Elocution Class gave "The Christmas Story" in pantomime. This was accompanied by singing of carols led by the Branch chorus.

Later in the season the Elocution Class presented two one-act plays and, at the suggestion of Mrs. David Wood, the class, accompanied by their teacher, two associates, and several other members of the Branch, went one evening to the Chapin Memorial Home for the Aged Blind where these plays were repeated and ice cream and cake provided for the old people there. One might think that the blind would not care for plays but they proved a most interested and appreciative audience.

In January Dr. Douglas Forman gave an interesting illustrated lecture on India.

In March there was an illustrated talk on Italy.

On April 5th, Mrs. Marie A. O'Donnell, Secretary of the Registration Commission, gave an excellent talk on "The Importance of Registering."

April 19th, Miss Beulah Fenimore, Principal of the Kensington High School of Girls, spoke on "Books and Reading."

We are deeply grateful to these friends who took time from their busy lives to bring us their message of interest and help.

There has been much sickness this season among our members and their families and the attendance has not been quite as large as usual, but the work has gone steadily forward and we pray God that He will grant us such a measure of His spirit that the aim of our Society may continue to be not self-gratification but unselfish service.

Grace V. D. Lucas, Branch President.

Aid Society

Having carried on the activities of this little Lenten Society for over thirty years in the old Parish Building, it seemed very strange to begin our work this year in the new Community House. On this account we should have liked to report a record year, but, although those who attended worked most industriously, we only succeeded in finishing 86 baby garments and 135 other articles. Half a piece of flannel was left in the closet with which to begin the work next year.

Burd School

The past year at the school has been one of much interest and good results. Last summer the experiment of separating the older girls from the younger and sending them to different camps worked out extremely well. This will be repeated again this year, but the holiday will be confined to one month's camp instead of two as in the last two years. The older girls were especially delighted with their experience and returned in the fall with the happiest recollections of their vacation and full of praise for the camp, yet all acknowledged they were glad to be back at the Burd School again. During the winter the school has been almost entirely free from sickness, with the exception of one child who developed scarlet fever two weeks after being admitted. She was sent to the Isolation Hospital and remained there for five months. After her discharge from the hospital she did not return to the school. Apart from this the general health of our girls has been excellent, an evidence of the benefits derived from a summer spent out of doors and of the constant care bestowed upon them at home. Considering the great amount of sickness prevalent in the city during the winter, this is remarkable and a source of congratulation.

It has been decided to postpone the annual celebration until fall. The house requires many repairs and painting, so it was deemed advisable to defer the entertainment until after the renovating and fall house cleaning.

The girls are doing well at school. It is gratifying to report that Helen Fulton entered the Training School for Nurses at the West Philadelphia Woman's Hospital as a probationer a few weeks ago and is doing well, greatly delighted and interested in her work.

Isabelle Harmon is now a student at Northfield, Mass., having been sent there on account of her health. She is quite happy in her present surroundings and the more bracing climate has effected so marked an improvement in her physical condition that all those concerned feel justified in having given her this advantage.

At present we have 37 girls in the school. During the year five have left and four have been admitted. Two were confirmed during Lent. Nowadays the visitor to the Burd School is always met with bright faces and cheerful voices, and the spirit of happiness and good will which prevails is a reflection of Miss Tappen's attitude to all her children.

I have again to thank my fellow members of the Board of Women Visitors for their loyal co-operation.

Respectfully submitted,
Emily K. Campbell.

Report of the Young People's Club

We have just completed a very successful season with a present membership of 63, and an average attendance of 34.

The first Wednesday of each month we have an informal supper, followed by our regular business meeting. We devote one Wednesday in the month to work, in preparation for our Annual Fair. The other evenings are used for social entertainment.

In September, through the kindness of Mrs. Henry Walton, we had a very enjoyable picnic at St. David's, which was well attended.

During the winter we have had two very attractive dances.

In November we held our Annual Fair, which was most successful owing to the cooperation of the members of the Club and our friends in the congregation. Out of the proceeds we purchased dishes and silverware for the use of the Club, a piano for the third floor, and gave a sum of money to the Community House Fund; the balance we are using for our charitable work.

With the part of the proceeds from the Fair, which was set aside for our charity work, we took forty children to the Zoological Garden in May, and in June we entertained forty-five mothers at Willow Grove. On December 30th, we had our Christmas party, entertaining 103 children, with moving pictures, refreshments, and toys distributed by Santa Claus, impersonated by Mr. Carrigan. On February 24th we entertained forty-six mothers with a supper, dance and games.

We feel that with our improved surroundings and equipment, we have been fitted for better work, and we hope in the future to increase our usefulness.

Hannah G. Reifsnyder,
President.

Mothers' Meeting

The Mothers' Meeting has 155 names on the roll—18 new members and four deaths.

Owing to illness our attendance has not been so large as for several years past, averaging about 50 for the season. Our collections, however, have been larger than ever before, amounting to $53.66.

Our contributions to the activities of the Church have been:

$ 5.00 for decorations for Palm Sunday.
10.00 to the Benevolent Society.
10.00 to the United Thank Offering.
200.00 the result of our Fair, to Dr. Grammer for the Community House.

We are grateful to Dr. Grammer for providing us a delightful evening once a month of moving pictures. We also wish to express our thanks to Mr. Carrigan for so cheerfully giving us his time and attention in getting the reels and showing the pictures.

Our Outing last July, a trip on the Wm. Penn to Delaware Beach, was one of the most successful we have had. Dr. Grammer, Mr. Streaker, Miss Lewis, Mr. Carrigan and some other members of the congregation were with us and all present pronounced it a most enjoyable day.

Respectfully submitted,
Blanche M. Harper,
President.

Report of the Parish Visitor

Another winter has passed in the chain of years of continuous work, work that we love and rejoice in, for although the tasks sometimes seem endless, and there is constant repetition, yet in looking back over the past year, we can see a great deal accomplished in the work of St. Stephen's Parish.

There is the duty of visiting patients in the hospitals. A great deal of time is consumed in this task, yet it pays, as it helps to brighten the day for the sick one, and makes the patients feel that we keep in touch with them. There are many opportunities to help the sick, first with sympathy, and at times with much needed material help as well.

A family whose illness and trouble have caused us much anxiety, is composed of a comparatively young woman and her two sons, the oldest about eleven years of age. While in health she attended our Church and Sunday School. We had her in the Jefferson Hospital for a time, hoping they would be able to ease her suffering. After some weeks her case was found to be hopeless, and she was sent home as incurable.

For the last four years she has been sitting in her chair, day and night, perfectly helpless. At last they have succeeded in getting her on a cot. I try to visit this family every two weeks, but the invalid always tells me how long it has been since she has seen me, and how anxiously she looks forward to my coming.

Her mother is with her, and takes full charge of the family. She is getting quite old, and the care of the household and the sick woman is too much for her. On my last visit I found the young woman lying alone down stairs, her mother up stairs, sick in bed, and her husband away in a hospital. Her sister came and stayed with them a week, but she has her own family to care for, and the sick mother was therefore compelled to be up and around long before she was able to be. The question now with us is what is the best thing to do for her, as they have very little money.

One of the hard things in life is loneliness, and we find it everywhere, for everyone is more or less lonely at times, and it is harder when coupled with poverty. There is one case of particular interest, a woman who at one time had a nice home and all she needed and wanted within reason. She is not fitted for any employment, and her mental state is pitiable, as she has been obliged, through lack of funds, to seek shelter in some of our cheaper rooming houses. She constantly writes me such pathetic letters; for instance, "I am sensitive in regard to my poverty and trouble. I hope a change will come for the better, after having suffered so many months among strange people."

She is totally without means, and is relying solely on friends to help her from time to time. It would be a source of great happiness to me if I could do more for this "gentlewoman."

We have not been able to give out any coal orders this winter, owing to the strike and the great scarcity of coal, and what suffering and privation I have witnessed on account of the lack of fuel! Many families who have never before been compelled to buy coal in small quantities, have been only too glad to purchase it by the bucket. One home in particular I visited on several occasions, and have seen a coal peddler carrying in two buckets in each hand (you can readily imagine the size of the buckets) and the saddest part of it was that the buyer was obliged to pay eighty cents for the four scant buckets. In former years such peddlers were restricted, and had to have a standard size.

Special thanks are due to the ladies who made the Layettes during the Lenten season, as we are expecting some little newcomers this summer.

Miss Gebhart's annual memorial, which has been given us regularly for years, has been a great help to us in the past winter, as in former years.

One hundred and thirty-five generously filled Christmas baskets gave joy to as many needy homes, for there were so many families that found it almost impossible to exist under present conditions, due to the enormously high rents. A house which rented a few years ago for $12.00 a month is now held at from $40.00 to $45.00 a month, with some of the men of the family working only part time. Mrs. John Coats Browne has been most generous toward the care of three special families.

On a bright clear day in June we had our Sunday School picnic. We had 160 in the party, which started to Atlantic City to spend the day. We each carried an individual lunch, and found it was better for all concerned, as it gave us more time to "see the sights."

In the afternoon Mr. Streaker made arrangements for our party to go on and off the pier at will (as we were all tagged). After a very enjoyable day, we met at the end of the pier; ice cream and cake were served, after which we went to the train, homeward bound.

Later in the summer "The Mothers" had their outing, a delightful ride down the river.

The Parish Visitor wishes to thank Dr. Grammer and all who assisted in her work by their gifts and sympathy.

Gratefully submitted,

K. H. Lewis.

King's Daughters of St. Stephen's Church (Whatsoever Circle)

This society has held fifteen meetings during the past season, with an average attendance of ten members. We meet about 6 o'clock and have supper together. This not only allows us more time for our sewing, but also gives us the opportunity for pleasant social intercourse. We have added one member to our list this year.

We started the season by making some articles for the Fair given in the fall by the Young People's Club.

At Christmas, in addition to contributing toward the baskets given by St. Stephen's Church, we gave 25 well-filled stockings to the Hope Day Nursery. We also made and gave to this Day Nursery at Easter 10 bloomer dresses, 6 muslin scrap books and a number of Easter novelties.

On February 26th we held our cake sale, which has come to be an annual affair. We had a very pleasant and profitable evening, earning $103.00—nearly $50.00 of this was given to us in money, and the remainder was the proceeds of our sale. On Easter Sunday we presented our contribution of $100.00 to the Community House Fund at the early service. We have also presented to the Community House a bridge lamp, in loving memory of our former President, Mrs. Vanderslice.

We are at present finishing a number of infants' garments to be given to the Sheltering Arms.

Our work changes from year to year, as various needs present themselves; but we are always trying to do "whatsoever" we find to be done "IN HIS NAME."

Bertha T. Walshe,
President.

Shoe Fund

A generous friend of St. Stephen's contributed three packing boxes of new shoes and three boxes of rubbers.

Sixty-eight pairs of new shoes; eighteen pairs of partly worn ones; seventeen pairs of new rubbers; and $4.50 in cash were given out during the winter.

A WIFE'S SECRET

You know what I look like.
You know what I say.
You know where I go during the day.
You know what I spend.
You know what I keep.
You know when I wake.
You know when I sleep.
You know what I eat.
You know what I drink.
But there's one thing you don't know.
And that's what I think.

Church Periodical Club

The basic idea of the Church Periodical Club is personal service, and it offers to every member of the Church an opportunity for such service. Its work is so varied that there are few indeed who cannot do something for it. The regular forwarding of a magazine is in itself a simple thing, but at the receiving end it may mean comfort in sorrow, relief in pain or light in darkness.

Back in the eighteen-eighties Mrs. Mortimer Fargo began sending her Church paper to a clergyman who could not subscribe for himself. Realizing that unlimited opportunity existed for such service, Mrs. Fargo, on January 10, 1888, called together a few of her friends and with them organized the Church Periodical Club.

In time that grain of mustard seed "grew and waxed a great tree," until now the work increases so rapidly that even the generosity of its friends cannot keep pace with its needs.

If everyone in the Church would give just such simple service as lay easily within his power, the Church Periodical Club would grow up to its opportunities.

For he "who serves his neighbor serves God."

At first the service to our missionaries meant only a magazine or two, possibly a book. Today it may include anything and everything in the way of printed matter for the use of the missionary, his family and his work. The books and magazines must fill the place of public library, theatre, congenial companions and the intangible influence of dwelling in the midst of the larger things of life.

Mrs. Missionary has very practical needs as well. One writes: "We shall be glad of garden and poultry magazines, for we raise our own 'eats' in this Chinese city."

A teacher, in asking for a fashion paper, explained that if her little Japanese girls must wear American clothes, such clothes should be good looking and up-to-date.

When it comes to provision for the missionary's work, the needs are of endless variety. Church school teachers must have reference books and there is a call, steady and persistent, for something for the children to take home, a paper, a little story, a card.

The deaconess trudging up the mountain trail and the general missionary motoring over the plans find equally that a supply of reading matter adds warmth to their welcome where already known and acts as open sesame in strange homes.

Forty-two members of St. Stephen's continue to send regularly 102 current magazines and 40 subscriptions are entered in the names of the recipients.

Our Sunday School leaflets are passed on to others in need of them.

Calendars go out at New Year's and cards are sent at Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter.

Money was given to buy books for the reference library to be used by the pupil nurses of our Episcopal Hospital; and to purchase books for the library at Kuling, the mountain resort in China, where our missionaries spend their vacations.

This is usually the only time of year allowed them for reading or study.

We still send magazines to the soldiers at Camp McClellan, near Anniston, Alabama, and to the men of the lighthouses along the coast.

Above all, the work of a Church Periodical Club librarian calls for patience and perseverance in no small degree; for a vision that sees in the material counted worthless by its owner a medium for showing forth the Divine Love; and for constant prayer that through the increase and strengthening of the work the light of the Gospel may shine more perfectly in the dark places of the earth.

The Report of the Daily Vacation Bible School

The Vacation Bible School opened June 29th, 1925, and closed August 7th, 1925. The enrollment was 108 with a daily average attendance of 50. Nationalities represented were Americans, Italians, Irish, Greeks, Albanians and Hebrews.

The children were between 3 and 14 years of age. There were the usual number of children who had never attended the school before, together with children who had attended the school year after year, in fact ever since the school was organized, which was in the summer of 1913. A more interesting group of children could not have been found anywhere.

For many of these children of many creeds and nationalities, the vacation spent by attending the Bible school is a happy time. It is during that time spent in the school that the children are not on the streets exposed to physical and moral danger. Here is where manual work—such as sewing, hammock making, basket weaving and raffia work, together with Bible study and organized play went hand in hand.

The religious training and Bible teaching that these children get is the supreme need of all childhood. At the end of six weeks the children not only heard thirty Bible stories but they were able to retell them. They also had memorized five Psalms and over thirty Bible verses.

There were many useful articles on display during the last day of school. The children were exceedingly proud of these things they had made and went home on closing day eager and happy to show their parents what they had so carefully made.

So the Vacation Bible School season of 1925 was most successful.

The Sunday School

Our School closed last June, on the 28th, after an excursion on the previous day, Saturday, to Atlantic City. On this successful and happy occasion we took with us 117 of the Sunday School and 43 relatives and friends. Reassembling in September, after the summer holidays, we in October were happy indeed to go into the New Community Building with its most comfortable quarters.

Our "Rally Day" and the fall season had a good attendance. We have averaged through the winter an attendance of about 100 each Sunday. Our Christmas festival and its musical play of "Happiness," held on Tuesday, December 29th, 1925, at 8 P. M., filled our auditorium to the number of 475. We felt that it was a big success.

Our number brought to confirmation was not so large as usual, as many of the scholars approaching that important event in their spiritual growth were hardly mature enough then, but will look forward to the next class.

While marriage has taken from us two of our teachers, others have come cheerfully into our work and brought sincerity and hope into our teaching force; so that the Lenten season found us all active and the Easter Carol Service, of the usual Sunday afternoon after Easter, was an unusually happy event. We departed from the old habit of holding it in the church and held it in our new building, comfortably filling the auditorium and its gallery. The Rector gave us a good address and seemed pleased with the change, as it gave the scholars a better chance to express themselves, which they did in song and Easter recitations.

The little ones of the primary were particularly pleasing. The dialog and tableaux of "Life and Death," was made very effective by the older girls in the characters of Life, Death, Truth, Mother, Pages, Witnesses and Justice. They excellently portrayed a strong Easter lesson of Life after Death. Our traditional flower-decorated cross was as resplendent as ever. The curtain drapery, so kindly loaned by Mr. Sparks, added to the beauty of the tableaux. Mrs. Snyder with her cornet, and Helen Patman at the piano gave us excellent musical leadership, as we repeated the Carols of the 1925 program.

We have found it very much better to use lantern slides to center attention as we sing our Sunday morning hymns. It does not litter the room with books and brings a much more musical response from all. Our contribution to Missions as per our treasurer, Mrs. Nissen's report, as shown below, exhibits a larger amount given by the scholars this year than last. We will join the Sunday School procession at Rittenhouse Square on Sunday afternoon, May 9th, when in the services at Holy Trinity, the Sunday School offerings to Missions will be made.

Faithfully yours,

George H. Streaker,
Superintendent.

United Thank Offering

At the annual presentation of the United Thank Offering at St. James' Church, on April 29th, thirty-five parishes were heard from and the offerings reached $12,752.15. After the service it was announced that $450.00 more had been added by telephone, making a total of $13,202.15. To this St. Stephen's contributed $300, this representing her offering for 1926; as it is her custom to collect only once a year, while many of the other churches do so semi-annually.

After the service a meeting of the parish treasurers took place in the Guild House.

Mrs. Baker, our Diocesan Treasurer, made a strong plea for the use of the little blue box—the use of which she believes adds greatly to the interest of the subscribers. I can supply them to any one wishing me to do so.

Elizabeth C. Washington.

Garden Party and Fair at Wyck

The participation of St. Stephen's as one of the parishes of the North Convocation is requested in the annual garden party and fair at Wyck. This event is scheduled for Thursday, June 3rd, from 2 until 8 o'clock, at 6026 Germantown Avenue, the colonial home of Mr. Caspar Wister Haines.

This year St. Stephen's will be associated with other parishes at the food table, and contributions of money or food, groceries, home-made jellies, cakes of all kinds, etc., will be gratefully received and acknowledged if sent to the Community House marked for Miss Laura Bell. If any one would prefer to send fancy or domestic articles as before, they will be very acceptable, as all proceeds go to the missions in the North Convocation, particularly St. George's, Venango.

St. Stephen's will also have charge of small articles to be sold for five, ten and twenty-five cents as packages sent by express, this to take the place of the grab-bag and laundry packages of former years, and if securely tied and value marked it will greatly oblige. Tickets may be procured of the verger, at twenty-five cents apiece.

There will be music and dances on the lawn, and a cafeteria supper, and it is hoped the rose garden may be in bloom.

Laura Bell, President,
Woman's Aid of the Convocation of North Philadelphia.

A Prayer for a Friend Out of Sight

O God, the God of the spirits of all flesh, in Whose embrace all creatures live, in whatsoever world or condition they be; I beseech Thee for him whose name and dwelling place and every need Thou knowest. Lord, vouchsafe him light and rest, peace and refreshment, joy and consolation, in Paradise, in the companionship of saints, in the presence of Christ, in the ample folds of Thy great love.

Grant that his life may unfold itself in Thy sight, and find a sweet employment in the spacious fields of eternity. Amen.

Letter from Japan

139 Shimoshibuya,
Tokyo, Japan.

April 12, 1926.

My dear Dr. Grammer:

On March 30th, St. Margaret's School sent out from its walls seventy-three girls, some into the higher institutions of learning and some direct into the world. They were all of them splendid young women.

At the commencement exercises, Dr. Mizuno, Ex-Minister for Home Affairs, and formerly Vice-Governor General of Corea, addressed the graduates. It was a simple speech but his moral earnestness moved the audience a great deal. Although he was not a Christian, the whole tenor of the address was Christian and he paid a tribute to the educational work done by the American Missions.

About a hundred new girls have come in, so that we have gained nearly thirty. Last year, more girls went out than those who came in, but this year already the tide has turned. As the school gets better known in its new neighborhood, applications for entrance will more and more increase, and the future of the school is very bright. Even this year there were thirty more than we could take in.

The rapid growth of this region is simply marvelous, especially since the earthquake. Ten years ago a string of thinly populated villages, it is now a group of fast-growing towns with a total population of about 160,000. The bulk of the people are educated and our new girls come from their homes.

McCormack, the great American tenor, has just arrived in Tokyo. He will go to China first and come back here in May and sing. Already there is a great enthusiasm over him. I don't know whether I can go to hear him. They charge enormous admission fees for such occasions.

Cherries are again in full bloom. Today it is windy and the blossoms are beginning to fall. They are so exquisitely beautiful but short-lived. It was because of this last feature of the cherry blossom that it was often compared to the life of a loyal Samurai in the old feudal days, for he was ever ready to die for his lord and never expected to live long.

"If you ask me what the spirit of Japan's man is, I answer, it is the cherry blossoms that smile in the morning's sunshine,"—that is still the ideal of Japanese loyalty and patriotism. The new tendencies in thought and spirit, however, have seriously affected this time-honored ideal.

Just now I am reading "Science, Religion and Reality," edited by Needham. It is very useful to me, especially one of the articles closely bearing on the History of Religion.

My daughter has just gone out to take cooking lessons from a Japanese man who served as a cook in a very wealthy French family in Paris. Her training in this line has much improved our own dinners, simple as they are. She has gone far in her music book, Czerny. She asked me to give you her kind regards.

I hope this will find you and Mrs. Grammer and other friends all well. Wishing you every good wish,

Most sincerely yours,

J. H. Kobayashi.

2 Cor. 5:1.

Our Father, Who art in Heaven, we thank Thee for the mercies of the past day and night; for food and clothing, for sleep and shelter; for the companionship of our fellow men, and for daily opportunities for usefulness.

By our receiving these mercies may we also recognize the duties which they imply. May our love to Thee and our love to our fellow men ever grow stronger by their daily exercise.

Give us grace to face the future with equanimity. We profoundly believe in the future life and that Thou hast not created the wonderful minds of the past and the present minds so fruitful in searching out the secrets of nature and of the human mind and body, and in devising the many means and methods by which man's comfort, intelligence, and general welfare are so wonderfully promoted—only to vanish into oblivion at the death of the body, which is mortal.

We believe that Thou hast given to each of us an immortal Soul, capable of dwelling with Thee in everlasting bliss. May we so order our lives in this, our temporary home, as to be fitted by Thy grace to inhabit our eternal home. Help us by precept and example to influence our fellow men to accept Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour, and to enjoy this same faith in the future life.

All of this we ask in the Name and for the sake of our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

Pleasant is a vacation with its freedom from routine, with its opportunities for closer intercourse with nature and for reading favorite books, and new books, with its social joys, with leisure for loafing and inviting one's soul; and pleasant is a return to the regular work and to one's customary responsibilities and environment, to one's nitch in the world and service in the cosmos. The summer was welcome with its abundant flowers and foliage, and now the autumn is equally welcome with its parti-colored leaves and its bracing air. Let us greet its tasks with a cheer.

They are, indeed, not few, nor light; but then as Wordsworth tells us we,

"have great allies,
Our friends are exultations, agonies,
And love, and man's unconquerable mind."

People who take shallow, heartless, cold, worldly views have all the deep experiences of life against their thin philosophies, barren negations and superficial cynicism. God is on our side. "If God be for us who can be against us. He that spared not his own son, but delivered him up for us all how shall he not with him freely give us all things." He who began will not give up until He attains his end.

Let us then not be discouraged by the spectacle of lawlessness and selfishness that we see in the government of our city in the conduct of the Sesqui-Centennial, in the public disregard of finer instincts, in the tone of the press, in the sensational use of crime as valuable news. God is working his purpose out through his faithful people and in spite of the Philistines and their allies. It is good to be in Philadelphia right in the midst of the battle. Politics need the Church, Social Life needs the guidance of the Church. Sport will grow more and more brutal without the criticism of the Church. Business will place the dollar above the man, without the teaching of the gospel. The diocese of Pennsylvania is one of the strategic centres of the Protestant Episcopal Church; if we can fill it with the right spirit, we shall help our whole Communion. The city of Philadelphia is the birth place of the nation; if we can cleanse it, we shall benefit the whole Republic.

If the purpose of a Church is like that of a lighthouse to spread its light far and wide especially over dangerous places, then our down-town Church is well situated.

As I announced on the last Sunday in September, the Reverend Robert Oliver Kevin, S.T.B., has accepted a call to be the Assistant Minister of St. Stephen's. An honor graduate of our Philadelphia Divinity School, with wide experience of our city life through his former connection with the press, Mr. Kevin is uniquely equipped to help extend the work of our down-town Church. He has already gained the affection of the members of the congregation with whom he has come in contact this summer, and I hope that his connection with the parish may be long and happy. He is planning to organize a class for Sunday School teachers.

The congregation will learn with regret of the resignation by Mrs. H. Spencer Lucas of the Presidency of St. Stephen's Branch of the Girls' Friendly. Succeeding in this important post the late Miss Maria S. Wilkins, Mrs. Lucas discharged its responsibilities with great fidelity. She leaves behind her one of the most flourishing and numerous branches in the city. While she will be greatly missed I feel certain that the emergency will call forth the loyalty and reserve strength of the members, and that the Branch will in its new and fine quarters be able to continue the old activities.

On July 22nd, one of the hottest days of the year, with the thermometer standing at 100 in the shade, "The Mothers" went on their annual outing. The place was Riverview Beach, on the Delaware, which was reached by a pleasant boat ride on one of the Wilson Line's fine steamers. Mrs. Harper and Mrs. Higham had 150 of the members with them. Mrs. Grammer and I came down from the highlands of New Jersey to participate in the excursion.

Mr. and Mrs. Carrigan, Miss Lewis and Mrs. Nissen were also of the company and we had a fine day. The great steamship carried an immense crowd of excursionists. All its passage ways were choked with chairs. The day was excessively hot, yet the order, good humor, good behavior were wonderful. All the arrangements for the dinner were admirable and every one voted the excursion a great success. Never was the Mothers' Meeting larger and more useful.

In the death of Mr. William B. Campbell who died suddenly at his summer home at Bass Rocks, Massachusetts, St. Stephen's loses one of its staunch members, one of the members that I found when I came to the parish. In late years his health obliged him to restrict his activities, but he never narrowed his interests, and it was through his cordial sympathy that Mrs. Campbell was able to participate so helpfully in many activities of St. Stephen's. A descendant of one of the most famous Scotch clans, he always kept in close contact with Scotland and his Scotch relations. Like so many Scotchmen he had a special predilection for the language and literature of France. He was a man who rejoiced in the amenities and sociabilities of friendship. A Christian gentleman, he was widely loved and will be greatly missed. The sympathy of many friends goes out to Mrs. Campbell. Severe, indeed, must be the loss of such a husband and the separation from such a comrade. It was one of those marriages that seem to have been made in Heaven.

May God comfort her with a hope full of immortality.

The death of Miss Florence Sherrard occurred in June, and an oral tribute was paid to her in the Church the Sunday after the funeral, but it is only right that there should be some memorial here of such a loyal daughter of our Church. Although the separate numbers of the Parish News seem very ephemeral, nevertheless bound together as they are in memorial volumes, they contribute an enduring record of the activities, vicissitudes and achievements of this historic Church. In the role of its faithful workers Florence Sherrard has an honorable place. I found her, when I came to the Church, a scholar in Miss Denny's class in the Sunday School, she was afterwards a teacher in the school, a prominent member of the Girls' Friendly with unusual dramatic gifts, at one time President of the Young People's Club, and always a devoted and co-operative member of St. Stephen's Church.

Her last illness came upon her suddenly. In her invalidism she was full of courage, and greatly comforted by the attentions of her friends. Her faith was a great support to her in those trying days.

Greatly loving St. Stephen's she was greatly beloved in the Church. Her funeral in her home was largely attended.

The Burd School is one of the great ornaments of our parish as well as one of the chief responsibilities of the Rector and Vestry. The congregation will therefore be interested to know that the school continues to receive the most unstinted praise from Dr. Ellen Potter of the State Welfare Bureau. At the camp where our girls spent August an intelligent visitor praised most highly the excellent manners of "the Burd girls." Three of the girls who graduated last year at the City High School are now receiving further vocational training under the auspices of the school: Shirley Edwards in West Chester, Pa., and Dorothy Ziegler and Lillian Bovell at Farmville, Virginia. This distant school was chosen because no room could be found for our girls at our overcrowded State College. Virginia Downward will conclude this year her course in the University of Pennsylvania.

There are in addition to these graduates from the High School who are supported by the Burd School while completing their preparation, undergraduates who are being trained under the Burd School's supervision such as Isabel Harmon, whose health made it advisable to have her in the bracing climate of Northfield, Massachusetts, where she is studying in the famous Moody School, and Helen Fulton who through the influence of Dr. Mary Lewis, the physician of the School, has obtained a position in the West Philadelphia Hospital for women where she is training to be a nurse.

I ought to have spoken in connection with Virginia Downward of the honors that have been conferred on her by her classmates. She is President of her Sorority and Vice-President of the University Y. W. C. A., and has been selected by each of these organizations as their delegate to their respective annual conventions.

On October 27th advantage will be taken of the presence of the Rt. Rev. Dr. Ingram, Lord Bishop of London, to combine a reception to the Bishop of the Metropolitan Diocese to which Pennsylvania belonged in Colonial days with the celebration of the 15th anniversary of the consecration of Bishop Garland. There will be a service at Holy Trinity in the afternoon and a reception in the evening in some suitable hall. It will be an occasion of great dignity and will undoubtedly stimulate loyalties and strengthen the sense of diocesan solidarity. It will doubtless prove a valuable precursor of the great campaign that will be inaugurated this winter to put our diocesan institutions on a modern footing of efficiency.

I shall not undertake at the close of this editorial to speak of the shame that all high-toned citizens, not to say Christian citizens, must feel in the way in which our Sesqui- Centennial was opened and is being conducted. Those poor Shriners how deceived they must feel at having been persuaded to hold their meeting in Philadelphia because of the Sesqui, when at the time of their convention the Sesqui was a mere sketch and suggestion. How every patriot must shudder at a celebration of the foundation of our government, that disgraces itself by breaking the laws of the State, and by accepting money upon conditions that are not observed. Culture and enlightenment were to be fostered as well as patriotism, and to that end two big brutes batter one another for the prize of immenese purses. No love of glory here. The Greek athletes strove for a wreath of laurel or bay; but no such disinterested love of glory for our bruisers. Sordid in its arrangements, sordid in its literature, sordid and brutal in influence, this prize-fight is the crowning infamy. Do not be deceived by sophistry in behalf of this "manly sport." The arguments by which it is justified are the same that were used in defence of the gladiatorial shows which the humane and cultivated Cicero commended as schools for courage, and that exacting moralist Epictetus referred to without reprobation. The sentiment that this prize fight outrages with its brutality, rowdyism, betting, and money getting, is the same Christian sentiment that put down gladiatorial shows, the mutilation of criminals, and the old time flogging in the army and navy. A man, Christianity teaches, is too sacred a being to be pitted against his fellow in this brutal fashion, like fighting cocks or bull-terriers. If the spectacle is uplifting how is it that it attracts such a tough crowd and has such brutal chief actors. No, it is a crying shame that such a spectacle should take place in the city founded by that saint of God, William Penn, and adorned by the life and labors of the great humanitarian and sage Benjamin Franklin, and at a fair in honor of the founding of our enlightened and Christian Republic.

But according to the reasoning of the Sesqui officials anything is proper that brings in money. Perhaps they may yet try the pecuniary value of a great bull fight in the arena.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

Extract from a letter to Miss Mary Richards.

"Miss Holton, physical supervisor at Plymouth Schools, visited Miss Boyd's camp while the Burd School girls were there. She said the counsellors at the camp were loud in their praise of the behavior of the girls of the Burd School. Every one seemed to think their training to be superior. The Burd School girls made a good impression on all visitors at the Boyd camp."

BURD SCHOOL PUPIL WINS

What is called remarkable tribute to the character building and efficiency of the training of the Burd School, 43d street and Baltimore avenue, was witnessed yesterday, when a 14-year-old girl from that institution was declared the most popular of 300 graduates of the Shaw Junior High School, 54th street and Warrington avenue.

She is Adelaide Stewart Mastick who, following the death of her father, entered the Burd School in 1919 at the age of 7.

She is president of her class and for the last three years has won highest honors for proficiency in study. Her father was a lawyer and her mother a school teacher.

She will enter the West Philadelphia High School for Girls next fall, and she hopes later to enter the University of Pennsylvania.

Rev. Carl E. Grammer, S.T.D.,
1008 Clinton Street,
Philadelphia, Pa.

My dear Dr. Grammer:-

Our representative recently visited the Burd School and her report shows that the same high type of service is being rendered the children there that we have nored on previous visits.

The opportunities and help afforded for higher education are especially noteworthy, both in themselves and because they connote careful training through the preceding school life. Your able superintendent, Miss Tappen, seems to have an especial gift for bringing out latent talents and the best qualities in each individual child.

Wishing continued success to the Burd School and assuring you of our real respect for the work that is being done there, I am

The Woman's Auxiliary

St. Stephen's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary will hold its first meeting in the Parish House Thursday, October 21st, at eleven o'clock.

Sunday School

Our annual excursion was held on Saturday June 26th, at Atlantic City. About 30 relatives and friends of the scholars went along. We filled two special cars. In all, 152 had a happy day at the sea-side. The Rector and Mr. Kevin enjoyed the day with us.

The next day, Sunday, we adjourned for the Summer holidays and on Sunday morning September 19th, we reassembled with 100 present at roll call.

We will begin our regular winter course of lessons on the first Sunday in October. We cordially invite our friends of St. Stephen's to visit and see what an earnest enthusiastic group of young people we have in our Sunday School room each Sunday morning at 9.30.

Faithfully Yours,
George H. Streaker

Letters from Japan

Tokyo, Japan.
June 15, 1926.

My dear Dr. Grammer:

We sent out questionnaire blanks to our graduates asking them what the religious education they received while in the school had done for them since they left their Alma Mater. Here are some of the answers.

Wife of a doctor who has a large hospital of his own in the south of Japan writes: "I was brought up in a Christian family. It was because my father wanted to have Christian influence upon me that he sent me to St. Margaret's. After graduating from the school, I married and had to live far away from my home people. Many a thing has happened to me which has tried my faith and courage and every such time my religious training in St. Margaret's has so much helped me. I have no worldly ambition and the only ambition I have now is to bring up my children as real good Christian men and women. I am grateful for my Christian education in the school."

A girl graduated in the year of the earthquake and still unmarried says: "My life since the commencement is a sort of an extension of my school life. My religious nature was so carefully and effectively nurtured in St. Margaret's. The friends in the Church which I visited often advise me to be baptized but I am waiting the time when I feel a real yearning for it. Studying in a different school I realize more and more how fortunate I was that I spent my five years in a good Christian school. In the earth-quake fire I lost all my things, but I never complained of the calamity. I owe this frame of mind to my religion. My parents often told me that the sight of my uncomplaining submission more broke their hearts than otherwise.

Another girl sticks to her faith bravely in spite of her unfavorable circumstances; "Both at home and at the school I was brought up in a Christian atmosphere, for which I am always thankful. After graduating I was thrust out into a rough world. At present I am working in connection with a business enterprise of my relatives. Here, the people are quite anti-Christian, but God has always strengthened me in the midst of all the opposition and unfriendliness. Christianity makes me contented wherever I am. That seems to me to be its greatness."

A girl who recently married a noble's son writes thus: "As you know, I was so poor in my health all the time I was in the school. After graduating under many difficulties and frequent delays in 1921, that same year I lost my father and my mother was so ill. With my sick mother to nurse and with my little sisters and brothers to look after, I often spent sleepless nights in tears. But through all these years of trial how Christian faith supported me! Mrs. Hickson's healing ministry did wonders to my health, which has been completely restored. Whenever I was in trouble, my thought of Christ and the cross strengthened and comforted me. I am now happy and always thankful for what the school did for me."

She will be a Baroness some day, and we all wish her happiness.

Many of our graduates have worked and are still working for the Church and lots of them married ministers. If many of them were not baptized while in the school, quite a number received baptism after leaving the school. In consideration of the difficulties connected with marriage, many of the girls are kept from baptism by their parents though the girls themselves are desirous of it. If they are not baptized, they often send their own children to Christian Sunday Schools. Without a single exception, the non-Christian pupils leave the school with all the prejudice against Christianity removed and almost always with a favorable feeling towards the new religion of which they were so ignorant before they came to St. Margaret's.

The amount and extent of Christian influence in a land like this must not be measured by the number of baptisms which came out in the Mission report.

I am afraid this is too late to be of any use for your Parish paper before the summer. I am very sorry, but I have been so very busy these few weeks.

If you are not tired of these "Japan letters," I will keep on for years to come.

Hoping you and Mrs. Grammer will have a pleasant summer vacation, with my kindest regards,

Yours sincerely,

J. H. Kobayashi.

139 Shimoshibuya, Tokyo,
July 13, 1926

My dear Dr. Grammer,

Your kind letter and the post-office notice of the money order for thirty (30) dollars from you came to my hand in a rapid succession. Thank you.

Yes, that completes the amount which you so kindly promised me to raise for me to help my securing a piano for my daughter, Keiko.

Once more, I beg to tender my heart-felt thanks to you and to the good friends who so kindly joined you to do us this great act of goodness. Every one who has been told of how we came to be in possession of the piano is greatly impressed. Keiko's mother and brothers as well as herself have so often spoken about the wonderful kindness of her American friends.

I hardly need to repeat what I have already said—how the piano has revived my lonely daughter and how our desolate, furnitureless home has been brightened up. We are truly grateful.

Keiko's musical training has been proving useful in religious lines. Since last April, she has served as the regular organist of Trinity Church, formerly the pro-cathedral of the American Church Mission. We are all glad that she can do some service to the Christian cause even in this humble way.

We will close St. Margaret's School on July 15th. The vacation lasts until Sept. 10th. The summer here this year looks to be going very hot.

The new American Ambassador, Mr. MacNeab has so many friends in Japan, and his stay, I hope, will contribute towards a better mutual understanding between the two nations. As I said before, I shall always be glad to write on things Japanese for the Parish News, that is, if you would wish so. It would give me the greatest pleasure to be allowed to do so, as that would be one way in which I could express my appreciation of what you and the kind members of your church have done for me.

Hoping that the summer is not so hot there as it is here and with my kindest regards and good wishes to Mrs. Grammer and you in which my daughter most cordially joins,

Yours most sincerely,

J. H. Kobayashi.

If a man does not make new friendships as he advances through life, he will soon find himself left alone. A man should keep his friendships in constant repairs.—Samuel Johnson.

A Shrine

I do not know of a better shrine, before which a father or mother may kneel or stand, than that of a sleeping child. I do not know of a holier place, a temple where one is more likely to come into closer touch with all that is infinitely good, where one may come nearer to seeing and feeling God.

From that shrine come matins of love and laughter, of trust and cheer to bless the new day; and before that shrine should fall our vespers, our grateful benedictions for the night.

At the cot of a sleeping babe all man-made ranks and inequalities are ironed out, and all mankind reverently kneels before the living image of the Creator.

To understand a child, to go back and grow up sympathetically with it, to hold its love and confidence, to be accepted by it—without fear or restraint—as a companion and playmate, is just about the greatest good fortune that can come to any man or woman.

—Old Fogy's Inglenook.

The latchstring's hanging from the door;
A pathway's worn for many feet
Have traveled that same way before.
Though it be morn, or noon, or night,

Be True

Thou must be true thyself,
If thou the truth wouldst teach;
Thy soul must overflow, if thou
Another's soul wouldst reach!
It needs the overflow of heart
To give the lips full speech.

Think truly, and thy thoughts
Shall the world's famine feed;
Speak truly, and each word of thine
Shall be a fruitful seed;
Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed.

—Horatius Bonar.

I think these verses should be engraven on the heart of every child of man.

I regret that the Churchman favors our entrance upon diplomatic relations with Turkey without any safeguarding of the rights of the Christian minorities. Here is a significant comment on the Lausanne Treaty, which we are asked to sign:

THE LAUSANNE TREATY

Bishop Edward Blake of the Methodist Episcopal Church referred to the Lausanne Treaty some time ago as a striking instance of "dollar diplomacy" and the disregard of human rights. He wrote:

Not a word was said at Lausanne about the protection of the Christian minorities. . . . Oil and tobacco were the big issues, and oil and tobacco were saved. The Christian minorities were left to shift for themselves.

Bishop Blake added the following characteristic instance of the American method of dealing with the Turks:

When Smyrna was sacked by the Turks, 100,000 people were put to death. We had four American destroyers in the habor at the time, but we never lifted a voice or raised a gun to prevent the massacre. Absolute neutrality was the order from Washington.

The American consulate was burned, the American Y. M. C. A. was burned, the main building of the American school for girls was burned, and the American school for boys was looted. No effort was made to save these properties. But a company of American sailors was landed to protect the plant of the Standard Oil Company, and that was the only American property of any importance within a mile of Smyrna that was saved.

Former Ambassador Morgenthau writes that Christian nations do not deserve to be called Christian, if they enter into diplomatic relations with Turkey without any regard to that nation's treatment of the Christians in its dominion.

Asked the secret of her loveliness of body and soul, an old lady replied:—

The Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

The inevitable theme of my letter is the Diocesan Campaign that will be inaugurated after Thanksgiving Day in behalf of the proper equipment of our Diocesan Missions and Institutions. Early in his Episcopate Bishop Garland was asked to allow first one institution and then another to canvass the Diocese for contributions. His answer was that this piece-meal method would weary the Diocese, and work hardship to some of the smaller but very deserving missions and institutions. Accordingly after taking counsel with the Executive Committee and clergy, the Bishop inaugurated a thorough survey of the needs of the Diocesan Missions and Institutions, if they were to be put into a fit condition to render useful service. There was a time when the Pennsylvania institutions of benevolence, such as the Episcopal Hospital, were recognized as the best in their class; but nothing has been done for a generation and they have fallen behind. The goal of the survey is simply to put them into good condition, not to meet their needs for development. This last would be too much for our resources; but the other goal, it is believed, can be reached, if the period of raising the money be extended to five years.

By the survey, it was ascertained that three million and a half would be sufficient. The Diocese has about 68,000 communicant members and many friends and adherents. The campaign is to provide for human needs in this Diocese. There will be no quotas assigned to the parishes and missions. The watchword is "Every Parishioner a Member." It is to be a cooperative enterprise. The parish will be the banner parish which has the largest proportion of its communicants subscribing. The raising of the money will be turned over to the parish authorities under the leadership of the Deans of Convocations and the Convocational lay leaders. In the Convocation of North Philadelphia, Dean Levis has beside him as leader of the laymen, Mr. William White and as leader of laywomen, Miss Laura Bell. Each Rector is expected to appoint as leaders of the Campaign in the parish a layman and laywoman and to associate with them on the committee some laymen and laywomen. Mr. I. Smith Raspin, our Accounting Warden, and Miss Ella Headman have accepted the headship of this committee and with them some ten or twelve others will be associated. Every one in the Diocese will be asked to contribute according to his ability. Surely there will be no one who cannot contribute a dollar a year for five years. Certainly there are few who cannot contribute five dollars a year. Many, I hope, will see their way to pledge hundreds or thousands.

There are some people who refuse to pledge themselves for more than they can pay at once. They do not like to be bound; but surely this is not a brave and self-sacrificing temper. It is clearly not co-operative. If this were the general attitude, none of our campaigns would be possible; the Welfare Federation would have to close its doors at once. I am confident that such will not be the spirit in St. Stephen's. While I want every one to do his best, my chief concern is that every one shall participate in this greatest cooperative effort of the Diocese since the day when it founded the Episcopal Hospital.

He must be hard to please who does not find an appealing object in the Episcopal Hospital, or the Church Farm School, or the City Mission for consumptives, or the Galilee Mission; in the Home for Aged Women, for Crippled Children, or our Mission at State College, where we join with the other dioceses in the State in providing for our boys' religious nurture in this state school. I mention a few of the subjects that especially appeal to me. Every authority in the Diocese is behind this campaign, from the Bishop and the Convention, down through the Convocations and parishes to the smallest mission. I have only heard of one rector who will not cooperate, and he is probably one of those men whose likeness is given in the son in the parable, who said, "I will not," and afterwards obeyed. All the Convocations have their appointed leaders. The opening guns of the campaign will be fired from all our pulpits on November 21st. The action will be opened by a dinner on Friday, November 26th, to which the Diocesan Campaign Committee will invite all Parish Committees, including the Rectors. This will doubtless be one of the outstanding Diocesan events of the year, perhaps of a generation. At that time final instruction will be given, and the names of the persons to be solicited will be divided.

On the Sunday following, addresses will be delivered in all the churches, on the need and the opportunity. During the next week the personal solicitation will follow, each Parish Committee being expected to report every day from Monday to Friday on the subscriptions procured by his committee. On Monday, 29th, the final meeting will be held. It is confidently hoped that it will be a victory dinner, such as marked the end of the campaigns for the Divinity School, and the Japanese Reconstruction Fund.

We have a worthy cause, the religious and physical needs of our own people; a community of sufficient numbers and wealth, our 68,000 communicants; a well devised method, and inspiring and intelligent leadership. The cause is God's Cause, the objects are most of them universal in their appeal, and all of them dear to many of our people.

May God give us all the spirit of fellowship, of self-sacrifice, and of loving generosity. Jesus said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

I hope that in my December letter I may write in thankfulness to God, and in gratitude to a loyal congregation for the unanimity with which they have responded to this appeal for the glory of God and the welfare of the missions and institutions of our Diocese.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

DR. GRAMMER'S ADDRESS OF CONGRATULATION

On the Fifteenth Anniversary of the Consecration of the Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Garland, D.D., LL.D., D.C.L., Bishop of Pennsylvania, October 27, 1926, Holy Trinity Church, Philadelphia, Penna.

My dear Bishop:

The Committee of the Clerical Brotherhood has honored me with the responsibility of expressing on this interesting occasion the Diocesan sentiments of loyalty, affection and respect. I do so with peculiar pleasure because I feel so strongly personally what I shall say in a representative capacity.

Well do we recall your consecration fifteen years ago. The post you were elected to fill, the Suffragen Bishopric in this Diocese, was a most difficult one, for the Suffragan Bishop though consecrated with the same impressive rites as the Diocesan Bishop, is in fact inducted into but little definite authority. He is one of whom much is expected, while little is given. Into this difficult position, you entered with none of the glamour that is apt to surround the unknown or exotic. Your ministry had been almost entirely spent in this Diocese, and you were intimately known by the clergy and laity. Without withdrawing yourself from the old comradeship, you rose simply and naturally to the level of the new responsibilities.

It is unnecessary to speak at any length of your service as a Suffragan Bishop, since the unmistakable seal of approval was set upon it by your election in 1924 to the Bishopric of the Diocese on the first ballot, a testimonial that was especially noteworthy in the Diocese of Pennsylvania, where frequent ballotings, and long dead-locks, have often marked such elections. The enthusiasm with which our choice was welcomed by the city, proved that your labors in behalf of a better organization of charity, and your outspoken advocacy of social and political righteousness, were widely appreciated; that you were recognized as an outstanding citizen, as well as an ecclesiastical leader. The Christian ministers of the Churches that cooperate with us in civic and philanthropic enterprises, the Protestant ministers, were especially gratified that one who had always shown himself fraternal and cooperative, who stressed agreements, and not differences, should be our Bishop in the City of Brotherly Love.

Auspicious as were all these features of your election, none was so full of promise as the fact that you were not the candidate of any one school of thought. A comprehensive Church like ours contains many widely divergent schools of churchmanship, and where men are earnest and outspoken, it is only natural that they should endeavor to have the theories and methods that they believe in, gain the approval of the whole body, and control its corporate action. Unfortunately these differences are sometimes so emphasized, that the unity of spirit is destroyed, and the efficiency of the Church is impaired. Fortunate is the Diocese whose Bishop can be looked upon as Friend and Helper by all schools—High and Low, Broad and Ritualist; this is our happy condition to-day. The candidate of no one party, your election was a great harmonizing influence, and every one who knows the inner working of the Diocese appreciates that this propitious beginning has been continued, by your just and wise administration. In the region of thought where truth and reason must decide, we do not want authority to seek to control our understandings. We are glad to have a Bishop who is willing to let men think for themselves; who is content with a unity of spirit in the bond of peace, and relies on the power of the truth to protect the Church's message.

This Diocesan harmony has borne rich fruit. Your unique knowledge of Diocesan needs and problems has enabled you to direct wisely the awakened energies of a harmonized Diocese. The great achievement of raising one million dollars for our Divinity School whose miserable equipment had long called for energetic measures, found in you a mainspring of inspiration and energy, as well as a wise pilot. Its success was a cheering augury. Still more remarkable and heartening was the successful drive for a quarter of a million dollars in behalf of our Mission in Japan, so prostrated by the earthquake, and so little considered by our Church until this Diocese under your leadership set a splendid example.

The great Campaign that you are inaugurating for the better equipment of our Diocesan institutions and missions sets before the Diocese a cause in which all schools of churchmanship can unite under your constructive leadership, and meets a fundamental responsibility of the Christian Church. Well do you appreciate that the care of the flock takes precedence of the decoration of the shepherd's crook; that charity and evangelization have claims superior to aesthetics. I am confident that the response will be hearty and unanimous. Already we feel the groundswell of the tide that will lift the Diocesan missions and institutions of benevolence from the shoals and bars where they are stranded and set them afloat for careers of larger usefulness.

My venerated teacher of theology used to ring the changes on the heart searching theme, that the basis of the ministerial character is the Christian character. We are grateful that the fierce white light that beats upon exalted seats, has only made it more manifest, that the basis of your life is a Christian character. Stanley Baldwin, the English Prime Minister, in his eloquent tribute to Lord Curzon, characterizes that great statesman as a man who erected a facade about himself. We are grateful that you are a man who meets people without any such barrier, which is, we realize, often the product of shyness, but is always a limitation in a leader. Nothing draws our people to you more than the impression that you make on all men, that you realize deeply the truth of Browning's great line—

"All service ranks the same with God."

Nothing gives you greater influence in this community than the conviction that you appreciate that no man can be a faithful minister of Jesus Christ, at the same time seek to please men; that you realize that Jesus came into this world not merely to comfort the sorrowing and forgive the sinner, but also to bring deliverance to the captive, and destroy the works of the devil; that His gospel has a message for society as well as for individuals, for business as well as for worship, for amusement as well as for benevolence.

Not light nor easy is the task of him who has to steer the Christian bark amid the hidden reefs and shifting currents of our civilization, still so largely Pagan, still worshipping so largely wealth and success, position and power. We are grateful that we have in you a leader so wise, large-hearted, tolerant and just, such a loyal follower of our great Captain and Saviour, Jesus Christ. Our prayers go up to God on your behalf. May He bless you, and your loyal hearted wife, so deeply interested in your work. Long may you preside over this Diocese, and may the other years of your Bishopric be like unto the beginning.

As a closing word, may I be permitted to anticipate the introduction of our distinguished guest by saying that it is, I am sure, especially gratifying to the whole Diocese to have the Lord Bishop of London with us at the celebration of this anniversary. We want the people of England, and especially the Bishop of the See, which in Colonial times exercised Episcopal supervision over this infant colony, to know by the unmistakable testimony of this occasion, how wisely and lovingly this portion of the old province of Pennsylvania is shepherded, and how loyally our leader is followed. By the presence of the Bishop of London today, our words are made to carry far, and the dignity of the occasion is enhanced, and we rejoice to have him with us for this as well as for other reasons personal to himself.

70th Anniversary of The Burd School

The celebration of the 70th Anniversary of the Burd School on October 23rd, was a great success. The program gave a most interesting contrast. First the modern school was shown through shadow pictures, that exhibited the life of the school from rising in the morning, through inspection, and so on to the evening dancing after supper. These scenes were announced by calling them out in a Broad Casting Station. Then the early school was portrayed through tableaux which showed the first twelve pupils, (a reproduction of a photograph), the chapel services, and so on. No pains had been spared to make the rendition life-like. In the chapel scene the windows were portions of the windows in the old chapel. These scenes were announced by a crier, who rang a bell and called them from his high post. Great credit is due to Miss Tappen for the scenario, so to speak, and to the girls for the spirit with which it was carried out.

One of the interesting incidents of the celebration was the presence of a member of the first band, the youngest child in the picture, that Mrs. Burd gathered around her, seventy-five years ago. She is Mrs. Anna B. Kenelhart, of Gettysburg. Being introduced to the audience, she paid a brief and well conceived tribute to the institution as it was in her own time, and complimented the Principal on the changes and improvements.

The great feature of the celebration was undoubtedly the address of Dr. Ellen C. Potter, Secretary of the Department of Public Welfare of the Commonwealth. Nothing could be more gratifying to the Board, to the Principal and her staff, and to the friends of the School, than the judgment that Dr. Potter passed on the School, an opinion that she justified in detail. That judgment was that the School was entitled to a grade of 100 per cent. This estimate, she explained, was based on the report of her experts for four years. The items that she specified as meeting the requirements was a Board of Trustees that took an interest in their trust and had regular meetings; the participation of women in the Board deliberations; the qualifications and ability of the Principal, the tests for admission, the medical care, the food, the clothing, the bed-rooms, the bed-covering, the teaching, the religious training, the social vision. In every thing the School reached the grade of 100 per cent.

In spite of the inclement weather the dining-room hall was filled to its utmost capacity. I wish that the whole congregation and all the clergy of the diocese could have heard that tribute.

The Bohlen Lectures

Mr. John Bohlen of Trinity Church, Philadelphia, founded in 1877 the Bohlen Lectures, which it was hoped would in time take the place in the Protestant Episcopal Church, which the Bampton Lectures have in the Church of England. Not the most ardent American would claim that the lectures have attained that high distinction. But they have undoubtedly contributed to the advancement of our Church's scholarship, and the quickening of religious thought. Most of the lectures have been delivered by professors, but a few were given by Rectors. The only Philadelphia rector was Phillips Brooks, who delivered a course on "The Influence of Jesus" in 1879.

The congregation of St. Stephen's will, I am sure, be interested to learn that I have been invited to deliver these lectures in the spring of 1927. The honor is enhanced by the distinction of the electors, who are the Bishop of Pennsylvania, the Rector of Holy Trinity Church, and the professors in the Philadelphia Divinity School occupying the chairs of Biblical Literature, Systematic Divinity, and Church History.

With the understanding that, if in spite of my best efforts, I can not get my material into shape in the spring, the delivery of the lectures may be postponed till the autumn, I have accepted the election. The design of Mr. Bohlen was to have the lectures published in book form, and I should much prefer to get them into the final shape before delivering them, although sometimes the lectures are delivered from notes, and the publication waits till a more convenient season.

The theme that I have selected for the course is "Christianity's Appeal to Reason." I hope that I can squeeze what I want to say into five lectures.

Young People's Club

The Young People's Club will have their Annual Fair on Thursday, December 2nd. A chicken and waffle dinner will be served from 5.30 to 7.30. Come and bring your friends. Gifts of money or articles to be sold will be appreciated, and may be sent to the Community House any time. Fancy and useful articles will be on sale.

Fourth Annual Mass Meeting

The fourth annual mass meeting designed to promote interest in international peace will take place on Armistice Sunday, November 7th, at 3.30 o'clock, at the Aldine Theatre.

Twenty-five organizations, including religious, social, educational, men's and women's civic clubs and labor unions, are participating in the mass meeting, and it is expected more than 2,000 will attend. The meeting is free to the public.

With Mrs. Lucretia Blankenburg as Chairman, the Armistice Day Mass Meeting will have a program that is calculated to stimulate wide interest.

Dr. Alexander Lyons, Rabbi of the largest temple in Brooklyn, New York, will address the assemblage on "Our Supreme Need," and he will be followed by Dr. Jesse H. Holmes, of Swarthmore College, in an address on "Imperialism." The Lit Bros. Chorus will render the musical program under the leadership of Henry Hotz, a well known Philadelphia musician.

Both speakers are widely known, having lectured in every part of this country, throughout Europe, in the near East and in the Orient. Dr. Holmes has just returned from a year's travel and study of social and economic conditions in England, Germany, Czecho-Slovakia, Switzerland, Greece, Egypt, India, China, Korea and Japan. His activities included a series of lectures in the universities of some of these countries.

The following notice has been sent to the Parish News:

In one of the rooms of the new building of the Germantown Hospital, a tablet has been placed bearing the following inscription:

> This room was built in affectionate memory of the Rev. Frederick B. Keable, by his friend, Edward Wynne Moore.

I am sure that all of us are gratified that this memorial will perpetuate the memory of Mr. Keable and of the friendship between him and Mr. Edward Moore. St. Stephen's has a right to feel that it has a part in the matter. It was through their connection with this Church that they were brought together. I can but feel that I, who personally brought them together, have a special reason to be pleased.

NORMAN ANGELL TO DISCUSS CURRENT PROBLEMS

English Author and Lecturer Returns to Lead Conferences

Norman Angell, whose previous lecture tours throughout America have made him a familiar and welcome guest, is to conduct the series of conferences on world affairs arranged by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, for five Monday afternoons beginning October 18th, in the Friends Meeting House at 20 S. 12th Street, Philadelphia.

His cosmopolitan education and experience make Mr. Angell's opinions on such topics as "The Rising Tide of Dictatorship: Where Democracy Fails in America," one of the subjects for discussion, particularly valuable. Born in England, he received part of his education in France, part in the United States where he later became a journalist. He left to go abroad as foreign correspondent for American newspapers, and became general manager for the "Paris Daily Mail." Meanwhile he had been writing extensively on international problems, turning much attention to America and her part in the World War. His most successful book was "The Great Illusion" which underwent translation into twenty-five foreign tongues and has sold well over half a million copies.

Mr. Angell is particularly well known in this vicinity, having lectured at Bryn Mawr, Haverford and Swarthmore Colleges on previous visits to this country, whose point of view he is so uniquely able to grasp. In England his popularity is shown by the fact that when he was asked to stand for Parliament, a group of eminent Englishmen of all parties, including Dean Inge, G. Lowes Dickinson, Bertrand Russell, G. P. Gooch and Arnold Bennett, signed a collective recommendation for his adoption on the ground of the prevision which he had shown in his writings.

Monday, November 8, at 3:30 P. M.—Nationalism. The Organization of a World Society.

Monday, November 15, at 3:30 P. M.—Education for World Citizenship. Our Fear of Freedom.

The Sunday School

The Sunday School is in full winter swing. We are happy to report, all classes now have teachers. Most cordially do we welcome the following new teachers: Mrs. Birney, Miss Davis, Miss Silberberg and Mr. Robinson. In spite of our business location it cheers us very much to have added to our roll a number of new scholars. The Sesqui Exhibition bringing so many guests to the nearby hotels, has added to our visitor's list this past month. They are usually good Sunday School people away from home, who wish to keep up their reputation of "every Sunday being in attendance somewhere," and so they drop in at Old St. Stephen's. A Sunday School Superintendent as well as teachers and scholars have done this.

We managed to save some money from our last summer's outing of the school at Atlantic City, so at the Teacher's Meeting at the Rectory, it was decided to use this fund for a trip to Valley Forge. By the kindness of one of our teachers, Mr. Hopkins, we were able to secure two large autobusses at a price within our means, and we had a delightful outing on October ninth to this historic place. Rev. Mr. Burk was more than hospitable and gracious, so we spent over two hours at the Memorial Chapel. As all the teachers could not get away, we were able to take along a number of the older scholars and a few of our church people. The fall foliage was gloriously brilliant, and our mountain top view from the observatory was a nonforgettable vision of loveliness. Some such hill-top scenes must have inspired the Master, as He climbed the Lebanon Mountains or the hills of Nazareth and contemplated life's mysteries in God's great out-of-doors.

Faithfully yours,
GEORGE H. STREAKER,
Superintendent.

Woman's Auxiliary

The first meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held on October 21st, after a corporate communion service. Dr. Grammer made a short address of welcome and the various committees gave reports of work finished during the spring and summer and a new plan for the winter. The next meeting will be on November 18th at 11 o'clock.

The Community House

The Community House has had an attendance of 1719 since October, which does not include the Sunday School. Besides the usual Parish organizations, the building is being used by the "Taylor School," who use the gymnasium two afternoons a week, and occasionally the auditorium; a small group of girls from a nearby factory meet once a week; a dance class is held on the second and fourth Thursday evenings of every month, and the gymnasium is in demand every night. The Community House Association enrollment is 29.

As sure as ever God puts His children in the furnace, He will be in it with them.

The Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

To write the same things unto you is not irksome to me, and for you it is safe. So I begin this my December letter with the usual Christmas counsels.

Do not, I beg you, postpone your shopping until just before Christmas, when all the stores are crowded, when all the goods have been picked over and all the clerks are tired and rushed and over-worked. Do be forehanded and thoughtful of others—shop early.

Let me commend to you our Christmas baskets. They are a beautiful custom of the Parish. Miss Lewis has gone over the list carefully. Let us see that Christmas cheer is widely diffused.

Let us do our best this last month of the Church's fiscal year to send in all our envelopes. What a fine system these envelopes are, I never had as much comfort in giving, as has been mine since the acceptance of this carton. It enables one to give regularly, systematically and intelligently.

I think that the congregation does not realize generally that we have a mid-week service on Wednesday from 12.30 to 12.55. There are many people outside of the parish who attend this brief service of devotion and exposition. Many testimonies are received that it is found helpful. But I can but notice that many of my own people who are in the Church about that time never think of participating in these services. Can it be that the value of united prayer and praise is not realized? Can it be that we do not understand that one of the most efficient ways of aiding a Church is to join in its devotional services?

Another service of exposition has been inaugurated by Mr. Kevin in his Bible Class on Friday at 8 o'clock. Primarily intended for teachers in the Sunday School, it is open to all.

It is good to see how widely our Parish News is read, and how much it is valued as a means of keeping in touch with the Church, by our scattered congregation, that contains so many "shut-ins." A gentleman in Baltimore, who visits St. Stephen's occasionally, sends us $5.00 as his annual contribution to the Parish News. A missionary's wife writes from Alaska for it. Parishioners whose engagements take them for extended periods of time to other sections have the Parish News as a monthly visitor. A group of students in a Theological Seminary, not of our own Church, ask one of our people every month, to let them see St. Stephen's Parish paper. The Church papers ask to be on our mailing list, and frequently quote our news or our views. I have great confidence in the power of the little Press, throughont the country, the little publications like our Parish News, not under the influence of advertisers like the great dailies, whose refusal to allow any criticism of the "Movies" is such a convincing proof of the control of the advertisers over the news; not whipped into line by party-regularity, like the metropolitan press; not unfriendly to the great Prohibition movement like the city papers (our rural papers are almost all "dry"), but alive to the moral issues involved in the 18th Amendment. Mighty is the witness, and powerful the influence of this little independent press. This paper goes to Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, Florida, Washington, D. C., Maine, Nova Scotia, Alaska, California, Illinois, Michigan, Japan, Serbia and Switzerland.

I should like to give a new meaning to the familiar sentence, "My times are in Thy hands." Why should we not in our appointments, and dates, and distribution of time take cognizance of the work and needs of the Church? There is a regular schedule of services, and meetings, why should we not order our life and engagements with an eye to God's work and worship? Take, for example, the Woman's Auxiliary. It has only eight meetings a year. Those meetings fall on the third Thursday of the month from October to May, inclusive. Why cannot those dates be marked in engagement books or calendars? Then "another engagement" would not be made for that morning and the meeting could be cheered and sustained by your presence. Your times, your arrangement of life would be made under the guidance of your duty to God and His cause. Your times would, indeed, be in His hands.

Elsewhere are published the statistics that show how the use of our Community House is being extended. Every month there is in it a meeting of Liberal clergy, and in Septuagesima week, the Annual Conference of the Liberals of the Province of Washington will be held in it. The attendance was over 100 last year, and it is hoped that this year it may be even larger.

The meeting of Anglo-Catholics at Milwaukee showed conclusively to what alarming proportions the Tractarian Movement has grown, and how much of Romish doctrine has been assimilated by our Church. The lovers of the Protestant Episcopal Church who lull themselves into security by dwelling on the staunch Protestantism of the Anglo-Saxon stock, are building on the sand. Already in such a conservative Diocese as ours, and I note the same phenomenon in Virginia, people talk of "the American Church." I cannot bear that arrogant and unreal title. The only Church which has any show of a claim to that name is the so-called Christian Church, organized by Alexander Campbell, of West Virginia. It is the only Church of American origin. If size is to be considered in the claim, it excels there also, for it has more communicants than ourselves. But, of course, size cannot be the basis of our assumption of the title, for in that aspect, the Methodists and Baptists are so far ahead that the rest of the Protestant Churches are nowhere, and if non-Protestant Churches are to be considered, the Roman Catholic Church in the United States has an incontestable claim. There is no Church in the land that is so numerous, that so dominates the Press, that is so mighty in Politics, that works with such solidarity. I was glad to hear Mr. Montgomery advocate the needs of the "Hospital of the Protestant Episcopal Church." That is the Church in which my father and my grandfather were ministers; it is the Church in which I was baptized, confirmed and ordained. When it drops that title, except to make a union with other Protestant Churches, I shall be out of place in its ministry. I never could abide the arrogance of calling ourselves Churchmen, and excluding from that designation the members of other Churches, our fellow-citizens in the Kingdom who speak a different dialect, but are loyal to the same Master. In England where there is a Church established by law, its members belong to the National Church, and are naturally called Churchmen and others are Non-conformists. But these distinctions are not applicable to the United States. They are inaccurate, and they are arrogant and discourteous. I cannot abide them and never use them. This is only a little matter, a mere facon de parler, a mere straw, you may say, but I answer it is a straw that shows which way the wind blows. More and more the Ritualists are striving to undo the work of the Reformation. The crux in the English Reformation was the doctrine of the Lord's Supper. Cranmer changed the sacrifice of the Mass into the Communion Office. The martyrs under Mary were burnt for denying Transubstantiation. Yet it is back into the Mass that the Ritualists are striving to alter our service. Their doctrine of the Real Presence, by which they mean corporeal presence, is for all practical, and devotional purposes the Roman Doctrine. On a Lenten afternoon I dropped into a Ritualist Church, to ascertain whether I could profitably worship with them for a half hour. The Rector was lecturing on the Lord's Supper and explained, that when he entered the sick room, bearing the consecrated elements, he never spoke a word for he was only an animal bearing their God! Such a view of "these thy creatures of bread and wine" is far from the teaching of our Communion office, as expounded by Cranmer, as historically understood. If that had been the view of the Edwardean and Elizabethan Divines there would have been no Reformation. As one hears such materialistic teaching, the words in Colossians 2-8, come to mind, "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world and not after Christ," which that great scholar, Bishop Lightfoot, paraphrases and interprets thus, "Be on your guard; do not suffer yourselves to fall a prey to certain persons who would lead you captive by a hollow and deceitful system, which they call philosophy. They substitute the traditions of men for the truth of God. They enforce an elementary discipline of ordinances fit only for children, belonging to the sphere of material and external things. In Christ you have been exalted into the sphere of the Spirit; do not plunge yourselves again into the atmosphere of material and sensuous things." Similar crude materialistic teaching is being promulgated today by the Ritualists, with a fervor that speaks much for their courage, however little it may be justified by Biblical scholarship or right reason. The only way in which the Protestant Episcopal Church can be preserved against this infection is by a similar zeal and courage on the part of the Protestant and Liberal elements in it. Nothing can be accomplished by vague talk about preserving the comprehensiveness of the Church, if, as is so often the case, these advocates of comprehensiveness think it necessary to refrain from expressing outspokenly, earnestly, pointedly their own liberal sentiments. The Anglo-Catholic does not think that courtesy requires him to refrain from the use of his Romish Nomenclature his "Father this" and "Father that," his chasubles and albs, his Masses, pontifical, high and low, his benedictions, and processions and so forth. While this propaganda is constantly going on, usually conducted by clergymen and laymen who are recent accessions to our ranks, who have no tender associations with our Church's Protestant usages, now centuries old; who exalt extravagantly the grace of its ordinances, and yet have little deference to the opinions of those who have had the advantage of those ordinances and of the Church's training from their earliest years; while all this is going on in Holy Cross Leaflet, Catholic Congresses, and Confraternities of the Blessed Sacrament and so on, I hold that the Protestant element in our Church shows itself either disloyal, or indifferent, or cowardly if it does not endeavor to stem the tide and to awake our people to the peril of our Church. We can never check the movement by borrowing its ritual, copying its ceremonial and seeking to rival the Ritualists in aesthetic richness. What we need is not to copy their rites, but to emulate their outspokenness, their zeal, their moral courage, their team-work. We must organize, we must spread diligently, sound Biblical views. We must supply spiritual needs by a spiritual message and exemplify the teaching in our lives. Against the arrogance of their claims and the materialism of their means of grace, let us set the fellowship of the Saints and the spirituality of the Gospel. Let us copy St. Paul's methods in dealing with the legalistic Judaizers and the superstitious Gnostics. Let us fight the good fight of faith and preserve the freedom and simplicity and spirituality of the religion of Jesus.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

The Campaign to Put Our Missions and Charitable Institutions in Good Condition

It is too soon to make any report on this campaign. On the first day $649,435 was reported as pledged. The reports from the Convocations showed how the wealth of the diocese has migrated out into the suburbs. The poorest of our Convocations, according to the Monday returns, are the Convocations of North, South and West Philadelphia.

I was gratified by the showing made by St. Stephen's—both at the amount pledged, in the number of the pledges, and especially at the number of the committee who attended the opening luncheon. No church had a larger delegation nor one that is more loyally cooperating. My great ambition is that every one in the Parish shall contribute. Let us all have part and lot in this great endeavor to minister to those who are in need spiritually or physically. The Mothers' Meeting has made a splendid pledge of $600.00, to be paid in five equal annual payments.

Why should not the members of every organization follow their example? Religion will not mean much to us unless we sacrifice for the cause.

Daily Bible Readings

On the night of the first Sunday in Advent I asked the members of the congregation to join with me in using the Churchman's Kalendar of Daily Bible Readings. Copies are on sale in the Vestry Room at 5 cents apiece. Phillips Brooks has a great sermon on the text, "The Law of the Spirit of Life in Christ Jesus Hath Set Me Free from the Law of Sin and Death," in which he shows that the spirit has its own proper laws and methods, and it is by using these methods that we can obtain deliverance from the power of evil habits, and the entanglements of our past and of our lower nature.

One of the laws of the spirit is that good habits require system and cultivation.

One of these essential habits for Christian living is the habit of reading the Bible devotionally, reading it not to obtain texts for argument, or for historical investigations, but in order to gain spiritual energy or guidance—reading it as an assistance in our prayers and a subject of meditation for the day.

It is believed that just as united prayer has a peculiar fervor so united Bible reading will be especially effective.

With this end in view a group of which Dean Rousmaniere, of Boston, was the leader, devised a system of daily Bible readings for the Church Year. Now that Dean Rousmaniere has journeyed on to the better land the selections for this year are dedicated to his memory, and I can see on reading over the selections, that they have been chosen in sympathy with the spirit of his ministry.

My suggestion is that the members of the congregation take this booklet and use it regularly. Some times I shall preach on the Bible readings of the week past or the week to come.

Here are the lessons of the First Week in Advent:

S. Nov. 28—Rom. 13:8-14. To walk honestly is to fill our thoughts with God.

M. Nov. 29—Rom. 12:1-21. To live honestly is to make our life an acceptable sacrifice.

T. Nov. 30 (St. Andrew's Day)—St. John 1:35-42. To serve honestly is to bring some one to the Master.

W. Dec. 1—Eph. 6:10-24. To fight honestly is to put on the whole armor of God.

T. Dec. 2—I Cor. 3:9-23. To work honestly is to build on Christ as the foundation.

F. Dec. 3—St. Luke 12:22-34. To develop honestly is to co-operate with God.

S. Dec. 4—I Tim. 2:1-8. To pray honestly is to lift up holy hands.

Here are the lessons for the Second Week in Advent:

S. Dec. 5—Romans 15:4-13. The Scriptures are a vital part of our religious education.

M. Dec. 6—Isaiah 9:1-7. Messianic Prophecy is one of the Old Testament riches.

T. Dec. 7—St. John 5:36-40. The Master knew the Scriptures and their witness to Him.

W. Dec. 8—St. Luke 24:44-49. The risen Lord expounds the prophecies concerning Himself.

T. Dec. 9—Heb. 4: 12-16. The Bible a spiritual weapon, searching the heart.

F. Dec. 10—II Tim. 3:14-17. There was an open Bible and family altar in Timothy's home.

S. Dec. 11—II Pet. 1:16-21. God's message through holy men illumines every dark corner.

Thirty-six people have already taken the Kalendar. Would that 200 would take it.

The Christmas Baskets

I have three requests to make about this time-honored custom of the parish, which confers so much happiness on many homes at Christmas time.

The first is that amid the other demands of the season this fine custom be not forgotten. Expenses mount steadily and it grows harder and harder in many homes to diffuse Christmas comfort. Read our Dickens' Christmas Carol and then make up your mind about these Christmas Baskets.

Second. I would appreciate it if the Committee would exert themselves to secure more helpers in the stocking of the baskets, and their distribution. There are some who can give service and who cannot give much money and there is a joy in personal work that ought to be diffused.

Third. If there are any persons who have been recipients of baskets in former years, but are now more prosperous, I would appreciate it, if they would notify us, if they do not really need the baskets. For it is quite possible there are new members whose names ought to be put on the list. The gift of a basket at Christmas is not a right. Yet we are all loath to drop names of those who have been long on the list. So I put it up to those who are on our list, to help us in this matter. The number of our contributors has diminished and we need to husband our resources.

The committee is: Mr. Howard Reifsnyder, Mr. T. Monroe Dobbins, Mr. Howard Freestone, Mr. William Hasenpat, Mr. James Carrigan.

The Woman's Auxiliary

The speaker at the November meeting was Miss Frederica Smith, of St. Agnes School, Kyoto. This school, the Japanese name of which is "The Light in Darkness," was founded fifty years ago by Bishop Williams, with a few pupils. It now has about five hundred girls enrolled in the high school and one hundred in the junior college. Many of the graduates become kindergarten teachers and business women. Of a faculty of forty, nine are graduates of St. Agnes.

The school has several buildings, among them two fine dormitories where one hundred and forty resident pupils live.

It is no longer a question of getting Japanese girls to come to a Christian school but the problem is how to accommodate all those seeking admission.

A new building with assembly room, extra class rooms and a gymnasium is now being constructed and the United Thank Offering is giving $25,000 to help complete this building, as one of its Corporate gifts.

Thirty dollars was given to this cause by St. Stephen's Branch of the Auxiliary.

The next meeting will be held December 16th.

The Benevolent Society

The Benevolent Society held its first meeting Wednesday, November 3rd. Hundreds of articles to be made have already been received from the hospitals. The following is one of many letters received:

Philadelphia, May 29, 1926.

My dear Miss Davis:

We wish to extend to you and through you to the other members of your group, our sincere thanks and appreciation for the continued interest which you manifest in this hospital. I wish I could tell you just how much your assistance with the sewing means to us, for I am sure, you will realize that with sixteen hundred patients, it is a rather difficult task to have all needs along this line met.

Sincerely yours,

S. Lillian Clayton,
Directress of Nurses.

You never can tell what your thoughts will do,
In bringing you hate or love,
For thoughts are things and their airy wings
Are swifter than carrier dove.
They follow the law of the universe,

And they speed o'er the track and bring you back
Whatever sent from the mind.

"De tendency ob de world," said Unble Eben, "am to improve. But, same as in Aunt Jinny's houskeepin', de improvement can't go on wifout de whole place seemin' kind o' tore up once in a while."

What I saved I have not.
What I gave is forever mine.

Interesting Letter from China

Extract from a letter to Mr. Clair from the Rev. E. H. Foster, of China:

You will be glad to know, I am sure, that Mahan School was able to re-open this Fall without any difficulty, after having been closed for a whole year. Furthermore, we feel that our position among the patrons is higher than it has ever been, because they now realize, as some of them did not realize before, that our action in closing the school last year was taken for the sake of law and order. Our old students were scattered among a great many schools. In practically every case they were able to get a promotion of at least one year, and in some cases, from two to three years, above the standing in our school. For this reason a number of them did not come back to us as we would not credit them with more than one year's work; they preferred their higher class standing to sound scholarship. Others were not permitted to come back on account of their activities in the strike of last year. But in spite of all we took back about sixty of our old boys. Over one hundred new students applied for entrance, more than half of whom were younger brothers of our old students; but we thought it wise to limit the number of the new students to that of the old this term. So our enrollment this year is approximately 130 boys. Although the school is smaller than before I think we have done the wise thing. We have eliminated those who were undesirable and, while we regret losing those who were eligible to come back but didn't, those students who have enrolled represent the ones who appreciate the school and mean serious business, and that is what we want. More and more as time goes on, the wisdom of our action in closing for the year becomes apparent. One father, when he enrolled his son, said that he had five sons and all should come to our school and no other because we stand for sound scholarship and sound discipline.

This year I am teaching only three afternoons a week in Mahan in addition to looking after various other duties in connection with the school. It is pleasant and interesting work, especially as one realizes the tremendous possibilities of it all. Our Mission has often been criticised for putting so much emphasis upon institutional, especially educational, work instead of upon the directly evangelistic work. Our institutions bulk so large in comparison with our church membership. I think the criticism is partly fair, but I cannot help feeling that the future will prove the wisdom of our policy. When one comes to estimate what one institution can accomplish directly and indirectly, the tremendous value is immediately apparent. The effects have been very far-reaching and, by and large, of permanent value. Our schools have been the means of educating a select group of students, and through them have also inaugurated movements and created opinions which are bound to bear rich fruit as time goes on. When I compare what one of our institutions has been able to accomplish with what purely evangelistic work as it is generally carried on in China, had done in the same period of time, I feel glad that I have been connected with an institution like Mahan School.

I suppose you would like to know about conditions in the country in general. The only phrase I can use to describe them is "chaos supreme." This is certainly true politically. The militarists are wantonly satiating their desire for personal gain by precipitating a civil war. The Canton government, which has been saturated with Soviet principles, has declared war against the north and sent an army that has been trained in modern warfare by Russian officers. The important cities of Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang, in the very heart of China, have been the objectives. The southern general, Chiang Kai-shek has had a meteoric success. Everything has fallen before him except Wuchang, which he has been besieging for over a month. Hankow has fallen into southern hands. It is on the north bank of the Yangtse River and is the commercial emporium of Central China. Wuchang is directly opposite on the southern bank. The situation is becoming more acute each day. There are periodic air raids, which have killed and injured many, destroyed much property, including some of our own Mission buildings, and started a number of fires raging inside the city. The shortage of food is steadily increasing. Bishop Roots tried to get the besieging general to permit the women and children to leave the city. They agreed to do so but gave such a ridiculously short time for their exit that only a small percentage was able to leave, and some of these were fired on from the city as they were crossing the Yangtse in small boats. We have about fifteen missionaries still in the city who are valiantly carrying on. The Church General Hospital is full of wounded civilians, and doctors and nurses are busy day and night operating upon those who have been wounded by shrapnel from the bombs that have been dropped from airplanes, etc.

The Wuchang Chamber of Commerce asked Bishop Gilman and Dr. Wakefield to be peace delegates. Bishop Gilman, carrying an American flag, and Dr. Wakefield carrying a bed sheet, left the city while it was under fire and advanced amid shot and shells to the headquarters of the southern army, where they presented the terms upon which the city was willing to surrender. The terms were rejected and the siege has continued since all peace parleys have failed so far.

MOTHER LOVE

Calm be thy sleep as infant slumbers,
Pure as angel thoughts thy dreams;
May every joy this bright world numbers,
Shed o'er thee its mingled beams;
Or, if where pleasure's wing has gilded,
There ever must some pang remain,
Then be thy lot with me divided,
Thine all the bliss and mine the pain.

SCANDAL

A little scandal trickled through
  Where gossip cracked the wall;
And rapidly the volume grew
  That was at first so small;
They strove with truth to fill the rent,
  To heal the ugly breach, but spent
Their efforts all in vain, for like
  The stream that steals out through the dike,
Foul scandal's volume swells and spreads,
  Beginning with a subtle slur,
It quickly wrecks and rips to shreds
  The splendid walls of character.

The happiest people are not those who are loved much, but those who love much—those who give of themselves and rejoice to serve those they love.—Baltimore Sun.

There's joy a-plenty in this world
  To fill life's silver cup,
If you'll only keep the corners
  Of your mouth turned up.

THERE'S NO POCKET IN A SHROUD

Use your money while you're living,
  Do not hoard it to be proud;
You can never take it with you—
  There's no pocket in a shroud.
Gold can help you on no farther
  Than the graveyard where you lie,
And tho' you were rich while living,
  You're a pauper when you die.

Use it then some lives to brighten,
  As through life you weary plod,
Place your bank account in Heaven,
  And grow richer toward your God.
Use it wisely, use it freely,
  Do not hoard it to be proud,
You can never take it with you—
  There's no pocket in a shroud.

May every soul that touches mine,
  Be it the slightest contact, get some good,
Some little grace—one kindly thought—
  One inspiration, yet unfelt,—one gleam of faith
To brave the thick'ning ills of life,—
  One glimpse of brighter skies beyond the gathering mists
To make this life worth while, and Heaven a surer heritage.

Your friend is the man who knows all about you, and yet likes you.

The Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

I wish you a Happy New Year. Now that the Earth begins another swing around the Sun, and we celebrate this new revolution by re-dating our calendars, let us face frankly the great reality that we are traveling through Time as well as through Space, that we stand upon "a bank and shoal of time" and will soon leave it for Eternity. It is a mistake to be so much occupied with the life beyond the grave that this life's duties and pleasures are minimized and overlooked. But that is not a common error to-day. The fashion now is to emphasize the Present, "one life at a time," as Thoreau said. But if this life is the whole concern, then existence loses much of its meaning. We need a future hope, as well as a present task, if we are really to be happy.

"I have endured," said Archbishop Whately, "an amount of anguish in trying to overcome my native shyness, that would be absolutely stupid if this life ended all." Believing himself destined for immortality, he made a heroic struggle to fit himself for continued existence. Let us enter the New Year in that spirit. There can be no happiness with a divided heart; two souls dwelling in one breast, as Faust says in Goethe's masterpiece, the one striving heavenward and the other clinging to earth and sensual joys. What peace and happiness can be the possession of the arrogant, the envious, the bitter, the unloving, the self-seeking, the slave of passion or greed or appetite? "Myself am Hell," says Satan in Paradise Lost. Those distracted by discordant desires are, indeed, already experiencing some of the pains of Hell. With such natures continued existence can only mean continued anguish. Let this, then, be our New Year resolution, that we shall try to die to sin and seek to live in the spirit, that will make life hereafter a life of blessedness.

For I take it, that there is really no solid reason why we should distrust our deepest instincts in this matter. There are some people who are afraid to believe. They dislike to be found on the side of the great mass of mankind. They are afraid that they may be regarded as un-intellectual. But really if we are to be guided by fear the more sensible fear, as Pascal pointed out, is the fear lest there should be a Hereafter, and we should enter it unprepared. If the skeptic proves right, the believer is none the worse off for his belief; but if the believer is right, the skeptic will be proven a blind mole, denying the reality of the sun and utterly unequipped for the higher life. The progress of knowledge has in no way invalidated the sources of our belief in the Hereafter. At the Convention of Scientists in Philadelphia in the last week of the Old Year, an eminent Astronomer declared emphatically that it was inconceivable to him that the vital energy of a personality should cease: to him the great lesson of Science was that continuity runs through and binds together all things.

Don't be afraid to commit your life to so noble a belief, and to scorn the self-indulgence of the timid and ease-loving souls, that shrink from the heroic task of preparing themselves to live in Eternity, to live in a closer and more deeply realized intercourse with our Creator, Sustainer, and Ruler, who is also the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the hater of sin and the lover of mercy and justice.

As it was impossible to get the Parish News out on the first Sunday in the month, I published in the Bulletin, a little New Year's Greeting, which I republish here for the sake of its practical suggestions, and also for the appeal in behalf of the Expectation, which we encouraged the Diocese to entertain as the probable contribution of St. Stephen's to Diocesan and General Church purposes in 1926. Let each contribute as he can to this fund.

A New Year Greeting

Precious beyond price are good resolutions. The man who fails to make a good resolution on New Year's day has either despaired of himself, or is entirely self-satisfied. Here are several resolutions that I recommend to every one:

1. To be more faithful in setting aside a time daily for Bible reading, meditation and prayer. I am much gratified that so many have taken the Churchman's Kalendar of Daily Bible Readings—But remember a memorandum book is of no service unless it is consulted and a Kalendar is worthless unless it is used.

2. To be more regular in Church Attendance. "The strength of mutual purpose pleads more earnestly our common needs." There is a peculiar power in united prayer. By keeping close to the Church, we participate more fully in the life that throbs in the body.

3. To join in the activities as well as in the worship of the Church. Join some class, or society, or organization that is helping on the cause.

4. If you can not render personal service be sure that you take the package of Envelopes. The Diocese is hoping to receive $7,000 from St. Stephen's for the Diocesan and General Church work. Yet I learn that thus far we have only given $4,402.08! Miss Headman informs me that the December envelopes will certainly bring in $400 more. This will bring our contributions up to $4,802.08—But this is a terrible slump from last year, when we contributed $6500. The congregation surpassed itself in the great campaign. Let us not fall down here. I hope that by January 18th, we can raise at least $1,697.92 more and bring our total up to $6500—I should love to reach $6500. It was a mistake to attempt $7000.

I invite all our attendants who have not taken the envelopes to accept a package. The envelope list is the working list of the Church. Those on that list receive all our literature. The services will mean more to you if you are joining in the activities. The package helps to transform a visitor into a member of the household. We believe that you need this closer fellowship and we know that we need you.

According to my promise I publish a list of the subscribers or contributors to the Diocesan Campaign to put our charitable institutions and missions in good condition. St. Stephen's pledged $30,000. The official count of the number of subscriptions is 215. But inasmuch as many of these subscriptions came from a husband and wife, and often times one subscription represented a whole family, it is plain that the actual number of subscribers is many more than this number. Bearing this in mind and remembering that one subscription of $600 represented 120 Mothers and another of $100 forty children at the Burd School, and another the children of the Sunday School, and another a group of young people, and so on, I find that the total of subscribers is equal to the total number of communicants reported by St. Stephen's. Inasmuch as the reports of all the Parishes were published, I think it not unbecoming to give the reports of some of the chief churches in the city. It will be noticed that both in the number of contributors and in the total amount St. Stephen's has a most creditable report. It is, in truth, far beyond my highest hope, and I am profoundly grateful to God for this proof of the vitality and unity of spirit of the Congregation. Especially thanks are due to the unusual efficient and co-operant committee

Perhaps the most significant feature of our Church life in the New Year is the alliance that has been entered into with the Business Women's Christian League. For the last few years these women have been conducting noon-day services on Third Street. The location is, however, too much out of the centre of things. So they are going to join the Business Men in using St. Stephen's Church for their noon-day meetings. They will attend as they may be able, all the noon-day services, but the Tuesday service will be in their charge to provide speakers and hosts and music. They have also joined our Community House by paying the fee for their members and will be given desk-room for their secretary during the day, in the main room on the ground floor. St. Stephen's is glad to assist these earnest-minded women in all their social and devotional endeavors according to its ability. We believe that the alliance will be reciprocally helpful. Mrs. Clarence Harper is the President of the group.

I cannot close without a special greeting to my shut-in members and our distant friends, who keep in touch with our work through this little parish paper. Wherever you may be, it is good to know that there is a unity of spirit that binds us all together. When I was a Seminary professor, I attended at a session of the General Convention, a conference of representatives of all our Church's Theological Seminaries. I did not expect to discover much fellowship with ritualistic Nashotah or conservative Berkeley. The Conference had hardly opened, before I found to my surprise, that in most things we had a common point of view: all of us tried to control over-eager Bishops, anxious to get men for their fields; all of us struggled to make the students master the subjects, regardless of the special interests of Examining Chaplains—and so on. Our common aim to train an educated and godly ministry proved a wonderful bond. So it is with the earnest seekers after Godliness and Truth. They may gradually frame diverse theologies, different theories of the Church and of the Bible, but if we are really in earnest to live the Christ life, then we have the great tie of a common purpose. Of us it can be really said, "We share our mutual woes, our mutual sorrows bear." Each knows the experience of the other, the disappointments over failure, the sorrow for sin, the struggle to rise above the lower self, the Christian's warfare and the Christian's comfort. Thus we have the consolation of knowing that we do not tread the wine-press of life alone, but belong to a great army of strugglers, sufferers, and realize that in these experiences we are only treading the path the Master trod.

With renewed greeting,

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

Make Room for Him

There was no room for them in the Inn.
—St. Luke

Room for the babe new born,
  On this bleak wintry day
In swaddling clothes and manger lorn
  Childhood begins its sway.

Room for the heir, give place;
  He comes to claim his own,
The sweetness of his baby face
  Is radiance from the throne.

Room for the hero, room;
  He comes to dare the worst,
To rush undaunted on his doom
  And triumph, while accurst.

Room for the Saviour, room;
  Angelic hosts on high
Will soon dispel the sad earth's gloom
  And fill with choirs the sky.

Room for Em-man-u-el,
  Oh Earth, so mean and small,
So far from Heaven, so close to Hell,
  Make room for the Lord of all.

C. E. G.

The Woman's Auxiliary

The December meeting proved one of the most interesting the members have had. There was no speaker but the hour was filled with reports of boxes of books, Christmas cards, toys and small, useful articles being sent to Indian schools and shut-ins.

A wonderful box of clothing and bedding has been sent to Rev. David Swan and his wife, Indian workers in South Dakota, by the Missionary Box Committee.

There was the story of an industrial school in Dante, Va., managed by Deaconess Williams, in which girls from the families of miners are taught domestic science and other useful occupations. Many of them return to their mountain homes as nurses and work among their own people.

Miss Thackara related the story of Miss Elliott's work at St. Mary's School, Springfield, South Dakota, where after three years of drought the Indians are so poor the children have very little to eat and the mothers make baskets and carry them to the school to exchange for food.

At the November meeting Mrs. Grammer made a plea for bedding and second hand clothing which could be made over for the daughters of a mission worker in Idaho.

At the December meeting comes the report of a nice box of clothing being sent and a hundred dollars for bedding.

It is amazing how much the small band who attend the Auxiliary accomplish, but think how much more could be done if more women of the congregation would attend.

Secretary.

Young People's Club Entertains

On Wednesday evening, December 29th, the Young People's Club entertained twenty children and eight mothers in the Community House. They had a moving picture in the Auditorium which both mothers and children thoroughly enjoyed, after which they went down to the room back of the office, and had a supper of sandwiches, cocoa, ice cream and cake. As they were ready to go home each child was given a nice warm coat. two suits of underwear, two pairs of stockings, and a pair of shoes, all new.

These poor children came through the social workers of the Jefferson Hospital and their cases had been thoroughly investigated, and were all very much in need of the help. A number of our young people were there and did very good work among them. One of the mothers had a little two months' old baby, and some of our girls took it in care for the evening, giving the mother a chance to have a good time.

The Club is giving two hundred dollars to Dr. Grammer for the Community House, which with the money used for the children, came from the proceeds of the Fair held in December. We wish to take this opportunity to thank all who helped us to make the Fair a success.

Hannah G. Reifsnyder,
President.

The Sunday School

Our Christmas Festival was held Tuesday evening, December 28th. It was a stormy evening, but we had a "full house." Our audience of friends and relatives was very appreciative and would have overcrowded the Auditorium had the weather been clear.

The play, as per program below, was well rendered by some fifty of our scholars. We have only praise for their faithfulness, loyalty and excellent co-operative spirit. Through the weeks of hard rehearsal, they finally demonstrated in their performance that "Love," as taught by the Master, is the Real Santa Claus.

Faithfully yours,

George H. Streaker,
Superintendent.

Business Women's Christian League

The spirit and purpose of the Business Women's Christian League will be gathered from this circular they are sending out:

Dear Fellow Member:

At the regular meeting of the Business Women's League held Friday evening, December 3rd, in the Auditorium of the Community House of St. Stephen's Church, Tenth Street above Chestnut, Dr. Grammer, the Rector, invited the League to co-operate with the Church and the Christian Business Men's League in the Interdenominational Noonday Services held in the Church daily except Saturdays and holidays. He also invited the League to make the Community House their headquarters, offering the use of the Community House and the Parish House of the Church for the League's activities, which includes the Bible Classes, the B. W. C. L. Club, etc.

At this meeting the following actions were taken:

"Moved by Miss Olds, seconded and carried, that we reaffirm our desire to stand by the purpose upon which the League was founded in 1915, viz.: 'The purpose of this organization shall be to associate business women in personal loyalty to Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord; to promote growth in Christian character and service through physical, social, mental and spiritual training; and to become a social force for the extension of the Kingdom of God.'

"Moved by Mrs. Grice, seconded and carried, that the Business Women's Christian League accept the opportunity to co-operate with St. Stephen's Church and the Christian Business Men's League in the noonday services held daily in the Church; that the League assume responsibility for one day a week.

"Moved by Miss Rogers, seconded and carried, that the Business Women's Christian League express its appreciation of the invitation of Dr. Grammer and the House Committee of the Community House, and accept their generous offer of the use and privilege of the Parish House and the Community House in co-operation with other groups."

This hospitality is extended to the League through a business arrangement so generous and whole hearted and extending such a cordial welcome and good will that the League in accepting this opportunity and privilege will only be able to show its appreciation by the reciprocal good will and co-operation of each individual member availing herself of the privilege offered.

The Community House, in the rear of the Church, is always open. Your B. W. C. L. membership card will entitle you to the privileges of the house. Get the habit of stopping in at your lunch hour or after supper to rest and wait for your evening engagement. It is expected, very soon, that some members of the Board or Committee will be present each day during the noon hours.

With regard to the daily noonday services, from 12.30 to 12.55, under the auspices of the League, arrangements have been made for the Tuesday services as follows:

January 4—Rev. Carl E. Grammer, S.T.D.
January 11—Rev. Edward Burgett Welsh.
January 18—Rev. Orlando T. Steward, D.D.
January 25—Rev. Walter F. McMillin, D.D.
February 1—Rev. Joseph Fort Newton, D.D.
February 8—Rev. Edwin Heyl Delk, D.D.

Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday speakers will be announced later.

The opportunities which are thus opened to the League, in being permitted to have a part in these noonday services, are vast. If we use them rightly God will surely give His blessing. It will need the interest and support of every member.

There Will Be Many Ways to Help

We may attend the services as often as possible and receive refreshment and blessing ourselves.

We may bring others to the services.

We may talk about it with enthusiasm at home, among our friends and business associates, both men and women, girls and boys.

We may distribute literature in the stores or office buildings in the near vicinity of the Church.

If, or when, we cannot be present at the noon hour, we can take a few moments to pray, that God's Holy Spirit will bless the service, the speaker and those who hear the message. We might form small prayer groups and pray together in our own Church or home at other times.

Every one can have a part.

COMMUNITY HOUSE

The Community House attendance for the month of February was 1968.

The Sunday School

All who are now or have been through the many past years members, or interested in our Sunday School, please remember the Sunday afternoon of April 24th, next. The usual Sunday after Easter, when at 4 o'clock we have our Annual Easter Carol Service and Pageant.

Last year we gave it in the new Community House, but the desire seems to be universal that we return to the Church, where, as of old, it will be held this year. It is hoped that all former teachers, scholars and friends will make this as formerly, our big festival re-union of the year.

We are expecting to give a beautiful Pageant that afternoon by the scholars and hope to have the church filled—so pass the word along. Faithfully yours,

G. H. Streaker, Supt.

Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

It is hard to realize that we shall be in Lent, when you receive this number of "The Parish News." While Lent is this year almost as late as it can be, nevertheless it seems very near Christmas-tide. So swiftly do the days with their many tasks glide by. I wish that we could have had one more Sunday before Septuagesima, that we might have had that glorious collect for the sixth Sunday after Epiphany; for it is one of the finest Collects in the Prayer Book. The incomparable beauty of our Collects has been brought home to me afresh recently by my daily readings in Dr. McComb's compilation of "Modern Prayers." Not that these last are not good in their way and often suggestive of helpful petitions, but that they attain not to the excellence of our Prayer Book's Collects. I realize, of course, that the collects have the charm of old associations, especially for those who have heard them from childhood, for whom the "matchless music of their ordered words" awakes many sacred memories. But I am not referring to this quality. It would be manifestly unfair to depreciate the new prayers for lacking these overtones of sentiment. It is the compositions themselves, apart from these associations, that I am comparing. It is their substance and form that I have in mind. I hold that both in depth of feeling and reality, and in words and structure of sentences, the Collects have a marked superiority. The new prayers do not view life's problems sufficiently in the light of Eternity, and to my ear there is a note of preciosity and, at times, of sentimentality in their phraseology. They abound too much in colorful adjectives and lack the lofty simplicity and manly directness of the Collects.

Perhaps I should justify this opinion. It is so easy to dogmatize in questions of taste. So I will quote an excellent prayer, No. XXXV in Dr. McComb's collections, italicizing the words on which I intend to make comments. "O Sanctifying God! Inspirer of great and saintly souls, who hast given us discernment of the Divine trust of life! Fill us with a true and faithful spirit, ashamed to sleep, while Thou lendest light for another duty, resolute to work Thy will, till our strength be spent—prepared for cheerful rest when Thou wilt have us wait and be ready to depart. Never in the crush and storm of life may we quench Thy sweet spirit; but so cherish it that amid earthly and transitory things it may fill us with the glow of heavenly affections and the light of tranquil faith. Amen."

That is a beautiful and moving prayer. On looking up the authorship I discover that it is the composition of that eminent philosopher and noble Christian thinker James Martineau. I have always been a great admirer of his graceful and fluent style, though it has at times seemed to me somewhat Asiatic in its richness of ornament. Am I mistaken in thinking that this prayer would have gained by the omission of some of the adjectives italicized, as for example of the word "great" in the phrase "great and saintly souls," for what man looms up as great, when we have God in our thoughts? As so much of our rest is brought about by sickness and pain, and lazy people find it so easy to rest cheerfully, would it not have been better to say "Content to rest, when Thou wilt have us wait"—As not all waiting is postponed till just before death, would it not have been an improvement to have left off this clause which seems to confine the contemplated waiting to the end of life? Since the prayer is addressed to the "Sanctifying God," it would surely be better to continue to address the indwelling Spirit directly and not speak of the Spirit in the third person. But would not this be an improvement? "In the crush and storm of life may we never quench Thy guiding light, but so cherish it, that amid the darkling scenes of earth it may fill us with the light of faith and the glow of heavenly affections." (Perhaps it is presumptuous to improve on such a sage, seer and stylist as Martineau.) I must confess that after the majestic Collects of the Prayer Book, (and it is with them that I am comparing this petition), the phrase "Thy sweet spirit," later spoken of as "it," instead of spoken to as a personal guide is displeasing. It seems to me the obscurity rather than the transitoriness of this earthly scene is the characteristic of life that makes us particularly cherish the light, so I would substitute "darkling" for "transitory."

Perhaps you are inclined to exclaim, as you read my criticism, "Surely this is over-refinement." I would quite agree with you, if I were speaking of an extemporaneous prayer. But I am now about to show you a perfect model of a prayer. It is quite possible that you may not realize the perfection of its beauty. So by way of contrast I took a prayer that makes a very favorable impression and showed how a careful scrutiny can detect flaws.

Here is a liturgical gem, The Collect for the Sixth Sunday after Epiphany. No flaws here. "Oh God, whose blessed Son was manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil, and make us sons of God and heirs of eternal life; Grant us, we beseech thee, that having this hope we may purify ourselves, even as he is pure; that when he shall appear again with power and great glory we may be made like unto him in his eternal and glorious kingdom; where with thee, O Father, and thee, O Holy Ghost, he liveth and reigneth ever one God, world without end. Amen." That is indeed a glorious prayer. It does not limit its view to earth, but lifts up our eyes to the eternal hills, and our immortal destiny, and then seeks to make our high calling effectual in our daily tasks. How majestically it rolls along! I like, too, the pointing of it. Why should the pronouns that refer to the Deity be capitalized? Surely the usage of the Bible and Prayer Book is best; a pronoun is a time-saving and attention-saving device; it simply indicates that the noun just heard still controls. It is usually the last word in the sentence to be emphasized. So this collect pleases me both in its pointing, and in its words, so balanced, so simple, so unadorned by adjectives. I don't believe that I can give better advice to those who are trying to develop habits of devotion than the counsel to make the Sunday Collect a part of their private devotions all through the week. Don't forget this prayer for purity. It is an excellent morning prayer. Especially do I commend it to those who are thinking about Confirmation.

The date of the administration of this helpful rite is April 3rd, at the morning service. Till that date the class for Confirmation will meet in the Vestry at 8 P. M. on Friday evenings. Attendance commits no one. It only signifies that the attendant is considering the step. The decision will be asked only at the close of the course, after the position and teaching of the Protestant Episcopal Church have been explained and the meaning and value of the step have been made clear. Adults who cannot attend at that hour will be given private instruction, and, if it is desired and enough candidates find another time more convenient, another class may be arranged to meet at a different hour. Please speak to the Rector or Mr. Kevin on the subject, and every effort will be made to suit the hours of leisure of those considering this important step.

The Church stands in no need of half-hearted people, who can't make up their minds to struggle against debasing influences and tendencies, and simply want to get through life as comfortably and safely as possible. The great need of the Church is not so much a numerous membership, as a consistent and earnest membership. The Church is not inviting people because it needs people, so much as for the reason that people need the Church. Consider what the Church has to give; the companionship of like-minded men seeking to serve God, the guidance of its experience, the help of its tested methods, the inspiration of its great tasks, the uplift of its united worship, the teaching of its prophetic leaders. Don't ask yourself patronizingly whether you should not help the Church. Ask yourself whether you don't need its aid. Those who come thinking that they have much to bestow on the Church and little to learn or receive from it are usually in their self-sufficiency neither helped themselves nor helpful to others. A sense of need and a desire to learn are the tempers that lead to the most fruitful Christian experience. It is to those who feel themselves poor in things of the spirit, to those who hunger and thirst after righteousness, that the invitation is extended.

Sunday evenings at 7 o'clock there will be a meeting for devotion and Christian friendship in the room above the Vestry-room. All are invited, but it is meant especially for the needs of the young people of the Congregation. On the fourth Sunday of the month there will be a subscription supper in the Community House at 6.30. Those wishing to attend, are requested to send their names to Mrs. Keable by the preceding Friday. The charge will be 25 cents.

As I aim to make these pages a prospectus of plans, rather than a record of events, I can not spare much space for the Septuagesima Conference. It was a great success and surpassed both in numbers and enthusiasm the first Conference a year ago. It is true that we missed the faces of many attendants who contributed much to the previous Conference, particularly the attendants from Washington and Baltimore and the editor of the Southern Churchman, Dr. Dunn, who wrote such a glowing account of that initial meeting of Liberals in his Virginia paper. But we realize that the Bishop's Crusade prevented their attendance, and that they will be with us at our next gathering. It was wonderful that, with this Crusade keeping so many away, our attendance should have been larger than last year. Over 200 clergy were present, 130 registered and 127 sat down to the luncheon, which the Vestry of St. Stephen's provided on the second day of the Conference. Our first gathering was not graced by the presence of any Bishops of our Church; but this session had the Bishop of the Diocese as the celebrant and preacher at the Holy Communion. He also attended all our sessions, and had beside him two of his brothers in the Episcopate, Bishop Johnson of Missouri, and Bishop Atwood, the retired Bishop of Arizona. Moreover, we now have as the President of the National League, Bishop Harris of Marquette, whose paper, admirably read in his absence on account of sickness by Dean Southworth, was a trumpet call to the Liberal and Protestant members of our Church to organize, unless they are willing to see the Protestant Episcopal Church lose its Protestant and comprehensive character, and all the modifications and purifications of the Reformation cast aside as mutilations of the Catholicity of a Church, so conformed to Roman doctrine, and so bedizened with Medieval rites, ceremonies and ornaments that its Protestant and progressive members will feel out of place in its worship, and its Protestant preachers unable to stand up and prophesy in its narrow and high pulpits. Let these Anglo-Catholics have their way and few Protestant Candidates will be able to get past their custodians of Catholicity and enter our ministry. If we love our Protestant and Comprehensive Church we ought to realize that it is worth our while to bestir ourselves when these Anglo-Catholics are conducting such a campaign of propaganda and organization to control our Conventions, to modify our ritual, and to alter our canons. Bishop Harris's paper with its 14 points was enthusiastically endorsed for substance.

Organization will begin by the gathering together in other cities of groups similar to of the Philadelphia Branch of the National Church League. For it must not be overlooked that while St. Stephen's provided the place of meeting, it was through the help of the Philadelphia Branch of the National League that the Clergy were provided entertainment, and that it was at the invitation of this Philadelphia group that the Liberals of this region assembled.

One of the pleasant incidents of the Conference was this following letter of salutation from Dr. Major, the editor of the "Modern Churchman" that was read at the luncheon:

Ripon Hall, Oxford.
Feb. 4, 1927.

My dear Dr. Grammer:

I am writing a word of greeting and good wishes to you and your fellow Churchmen meeting in Conference on the fifteenth of this month.

I hope and pray that the Divine Blessing may rest on your undertaking and the Divine Spirit unite and inspire your members.

It is in a sane, reverent, and practical Modernism (or Liberalism as I think you prefer to call it) that the solution of not a few of our problems may be found, for it strives to present our Lord and His Gospel as ever old yet ever new; it claims that Christianity is pre-eminently the Religion of the Spirit; it seeks to unite in a higher synthesis the essential elements in both Protestantism and Catholicism in which truth and freedom, beauty and service, antiquity and modernity have their rightful place.

It is obscurantism, sectarianism, individualism, and materialism that we have most to contend against, and I believe a Modernist Christianity provides a better antidote to these evils than does a Traditionalist Christianity.

The greatest danger which besets us is the danger into which those lead us who think that it pleases God to save His people by stunts and sensationalism.

I should like to be remembered most kindly to Dr. Garland, and to those kind friends in Philadelphia who made my visit there such a very pleasant memory.

Wishing you all success in your Second Conference,

Believe me,

Yours very sincerely,
Henry D. A. Major.

I have kept in close touch with Dr. Major, who organized so effectively the Modernists, as the English clergy of the modern learning prefer to designate themselves. He has been deeply interested in the success of our Conference, and has requested that an outline of its papers and discussions, and a report of its spirit and temper be sent over for publication in his periodical. Nothing can be more helpful than a closer association with this wing of the English Church. In organization and in scholarship they have much to teach us. It is my hope and prayer that we may be able to secure next year the attendance of Bishop Barnes, of Birmingham, or Canon Storr, of Westminster Abbey.

Let no one think that these plans are devised in any spirit of personal hostility or unchristian bitterness. Personalities do not enter. We believe that the Reformation was a step forward, and have no mind to retrace the steps that separate us from Medieval legalism and superstition. Indeed, we hold that a second Reformation is desirable. The first delivered the Protestant world from the tyranny of the priesthood and the bondage of tradition; the second must deliver us from many stereotyped dogmas of the past and from the bondage of the letter. Christianity must be allowed to develop its principles and must be conceived of dynamically rather than statically. Against this programme the Anglo-Catholics are arrayed. They are willing enough, in certain camps, to treat the Bible in the modern spirit, but they will not allow these modern methods to be extended to symbols, rituals, and government. There is as clear-cut an issue between them and the Protestant and Liberal school as existed between St. Paul and the Judaizers of his day. If St. Paul was right to resist the Judaizers in the interest of the liberty of the believer and the purity of the gospel I hold that we are justified in resisting the efforts to limit our freedom in the gospel and to legalize rites for which magical potency is claimed, as exclusive channels of grace. It is difficult to restrain such abuses, but certainly nothing ought to be done to place the authority of the Church behind such a practice as the reservation of the elements for adoration. These are not unimportant questions; they affect the whole future and development of the Episcopal Church.

Let any one go to Indiana and Iowa and ask for the Episcopal Church and he will learn through its smallness and impotence the result of presenting it to Americans as a Church that has no use for the Reformation. The people have simply ignored it and looked on it as a mere dilution and imitation of Roman Catholicism. But enough of this here—for I would not have it understood that the whole aim of this Conference is to check Anglo-Catholicism.

Its fundamental purpose is to develop Christianity as a religion of the spirit, that can express itself in new as well as old forms. To that end we met to study new truths and turn our minds in every possible direction. That was the significance of the paper on Psychic Research. There is much division of opinion among us on that subject, but we are willing to investigate. In this spirit we asked Mr. Shoemaker to speak on Conversion and welcomed his opinion on Mr. Buchman. So we considered under Dr. Barton's competent guidance the New Testament teaching on the Lord's Supper and the Use and Abuse of Ceremonial by the aid of Dr. Beverley D. Tucker's experience in the World War. Neither would we restrict ourselves to Ecclesiastical or doctrinal questions, and for this reason on Wednesday we had a paper on the duty of a free Church in a free State.

In the region of the Middle West, and in the sphere of canonical legislation, the menace of the Anglo-Catholic program with its secret societies, confraternities and organization is the pressing issue. Only organization can meet that peril. But there is no reason why we should neglect the other duty of teaching the new truths that criticism has brought to light about the Bible, nor of stressing the responsibility of the Church to set up the Kingdom of God on earth, as well as to prepare its members to join the General Assembly and Church of the first born in Heaven. Our program is essentially constructive; but, for the time and the present crisis, the great need is organization and definite measures to protect the freedom and Protestantism that we have inherited.

Next year, I hope, that our Septuagesima Conference may assume larger proportions and make more of a National appeal. I shall make every effort to secure the attendance of some distinguished English leaders.

There are two Lenten resolutions that I suggest to the congregation: the first relates to the Bishops' crusade, that unfortunately war-like and feudal characterization of a spiritual enterprise, and the second is concerned with Lenten self-denial.

By reason of our position, and the responsibilities of our weekday noon-tide services it was impossible to have any special evangelistic services at St. Stephen's. But there is no good reason why we should not participate in the increased enthusiasm for individual, personal work. These conferences of young people before the Sunday evening service are intended to develop a closer fellowship in things of the spirit. But why should not each of us bear in on his heart that Confirmation will come on April 3rd, and that this month is a time of harvesting. Why should not the congregation assist the ministers in gathering in the listless, careless, straying, indifferent and erring? One way of doing this will be to invite people either to come to Confirmation classes, or to attend the services, preferably the evening service, where the appeal is more direct. But any service will do, as all the services for the next four Sundays will be occasions of recruiting. It will be a great help if all the members of the Parish will make an effort to come to both Sunday services, for the month of March; for the whole of Lent would be better, but till the Confirmation Sunday is the most important.

Wonderful is the additional force gained by the message, when it is delivered to a large congregation of sympathizing people. Much of the power of the preacher's appeal is drawn from the congregation, who testify by its presence its appreciation of the message.

We are able to have but few additional Parish services during Lent. The great Noonday Services seem to suffice for our Parish needs. Yet there are many who cannot attend them. So I make this Lenten suggestion that the communicants of the Church make special exertions to attend the Sunday night services this Lent, as well as the Sunday morning services. Try to bring some one with you. The choir sings with superior verve and skill at the second service. The sermon is of a more popular character. I believe that those who come will feel rewarded.

My other Lenten suggestion refers to the Easter offering. It is a long-standing custom in our Church that Lenten self-denial should be so practiced that it will bear fruit in increased offerings at Easter. In many homes children give up desserts during Lent to obtain the money so saved to the housekeeping. In the country children raise chickens, or do chores to earn money for giving. City children have their own methods, running errands, gathering up and selling paper and trash, delivering newspapers, and so on. Then, there is the great open highway of self-denial; walking and saving street-car fares, cutting out moving-pictures and theatres for the season. Men abandon smoking, and women give up ice cream, sundaes and sodas. All these are fruitful methods. Where there is a will, a way will readily be found. All these savings can be gathered up in a fine Easter offering. I hope that we may raise at that time over a thousand dollars for our Expectation. It is a poor plan to put off the raising of this important fund till December and the first weeks in January, Let us bear it in mind during Lent both working for it, and saving for it.

Another suggestion comes to me. Let us add to our Lenten prayers, a special prayer to God that He will bless St. Stephen's richly with the spirit of service, liberality, friendship, and evangelization—of evangelization, so that we may reach out and win the erring and indifferent; of friendship, so that we may provide for our members helpful associations, and Christian interest in one another; of liberality, so that all good causes may derive support from us; of service, so that we may not only be a band of worshippers, enjoying one another's friendship, worshipping together, and learning together, and praying together; but may also be active agents, giving personal service in the great work of making the church an active agent in up-building the Kingdom of God on earth. Let these be our key-words —service, liberality, friendship, and evangelization. All are not given these graces in the same degree, nor are all called upon to render the same contribution in each of these departments of the Christian life. As old men are said to be best for counsel and young men best for action, so some people can render one form of service best, and other people have different forms of service, some are uniquely equipped to give, some for friendship, and some for evangelization. The Spirit giveth not the same gifts to all, but distributeth diversely, to each as he will. But this is the ideal towards which each should strive, with due regard to his special endowments. Here again the old adage will be found true, that where there is a will, there is a way. Let us ask God to give us the will.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

The Woman's Auxiliary

Mrs. John E. Hill, Diocesan Educational Secretary, was the speaker at the March meeting, of St. Stephen's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary. She outlined the book "Beyond City Limits," which is used in the mission study classes this year, and which was written to stimulate interest in rural work. The next meeting will be held April 21st, at eleven o'clock.

Beulah E. Hollar, Secy.

Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

Two more Sundays and it will be Easter, when I hope that we shall have the largest Easter offering for years. The object will be the "Expectation" of St. Stephen's for 1927. That is to say, the amount that is expected of this congregation for these purposes, namely: 1st—The diocesan missions and philanthropic work; 2nd—The missions of our Church throughout the United States including the Indians, colored people with their industrial schools, and the poor whites of the Appalachian region; 3rd—Our work in foreign lands. In the last years we have made a special effort about Christmas and New Year's day to make up what the diocese hoped to receive from us. But the proper time for this effort is Lent, the season of special self-denial, and Easter, our feast of greatest rejoicing, when Christ brought assurance of his Divine sonship, and of Eternal Life by the Resurrection from the dead. As a congregation we have received much, let us also give much.

Let me enumerate the items that ought to excite gratitude: 1st—There has been an unusual spirit of co-operation and friendship in the parish. There has been real team-work. No Church can prosper, where sullen discontent begets dissatisfaction and criticism. The Church can only be a helpful environment for its members, when it has an atmosphere of friendship, loyalty and mutual deference and respect. This spirit has prevailed to an unusual degree this Winter.

2nd—All our societies are doing good work, as I am sure that the annual reports will show.

3rd—We made an extraordinary record in the Campaign for Diocesan Missions and Charities. Our total pledges amounted to $31,000, and the number of persons pledging equaled the number of communicants in the parish. In both respects the totals exceeded our most sanguine anticipations.

4th—The Community House is used more largely than ever. Not only is our building serviceable for the various activities of the parish, for basket-ball, for the Young People's Club, the Girls' Friendly, the movies for the Mothers' meeting once a month, the Dance Club, the Players' Guild, the Boy Scouts, and the supper once a month on the last Sunday night of the month: but it is also affording opportunities for exercise to young men and young women, working in this part of the city, who enroll for basket-ball privileges, and is providing rest-room and meeting places for the members of the Business Women's Christian League. By the payment of $400, this Association has enrolled all its members among those enjoying the privileges of our Community House. Every afternoon the secretary of the Association may be found at her desk, acting as hostess of the rest-room. On Monday and Thursday evenings its members have their Bible classes. I am recounting only their uses of the Community House. They have an additional meeting in the Parish House on Monday, when they make good use of the fine gas range that Mrs. Clayton has so generously given to the Church.

5th—Now that these Christian Business Women have joined with the Christian Business Men in assisting us in providing speakers and attendants for the Daily noonday Services we have in St. Stephen's a practical manifestation of Christian co-operation and fellowship that is, I believe, unparalleled in the Episcopal Church. I know nothing like it anywhere. It seems to me that this beneficent arrangement ought to be more widely known. The average attendance at these Noonday Services throughout the year is nearly 100, not counting the attendance of about 500 daily during the 40 days of Lent.

Of course, such an arrangement would not be feasible without the permission of the Vestry of the Church, and of the Bishop of the Diocese. Nor would it be possible with these legal and canonical approvals, without the spirit of good-will and mutual toleration and co-operation among all parties. With the Business Men the arrangement is now of some six years' standing, and has long passed the experimental stage. With the Business Women, however, the adjustments are just beginning to show their mutual helpfulness. I hope to see that organization resume something of its pristine vigor, now that it has a bureau near the center of the business section, and I am sure that in all our fairs, entertainments, and social endeavors we shall find the members of this loyal organization our helpful allies.

6th—The Second Septuagesima Conference of Liberals surpassed, in the numbers who attended and in the interest of the papers and discussions, the first Conference, uniquely successful though that Conference was. Already plans are maturing that will make the third Conference of more than Provincial importance. Steps are being taken for a similar Conference in the South.

7th—We have organized a band of Boy Scouts with Mr. Richard Robinson at its head. I hope that it will prove an organization that will not only train its members in helpfulness, efficiency and manliness, but that will also reach out and win recruits.

8th—Our music has been exceptionally good this winter and by its attractive power increased our congregations, especially our Sunday night attendance.

9th—In spite of the numerous inclement Sundays, the attendance at the Church has been encouraging.

10th—The Confirmation Class is the largest for several years.

11th—There is a new dramatic club, "The Players' Guild," which has enthusiastic meetings and expects to entertain the congregation this Spring with a play.

12th—On Friday night, from 8 to 9, Mr. Kevin has a Bible Class with an average attendance of ten to fifteen.

13th—The Noon-day Lenten Services have been splendidly attended, showing no falling off in numbers, but rather an increase, and the addresses have been of a uniformly fine character.

That you may appreciate at a glance the numerous activities of the Parish, I have asked Mrs. Keable to prepare a chart of the meetings for one week, in the Church, Parish House, and Community House. It shows not only how largely the buildings are used, but also ought to make every one realize the necessity of making their arrangements with the office well ahead if the use of the rooms is desired.

These are, I think that you will agree with me, all substantial grounds for gratitude, and hopefulness with regard to the future of this down-town Church.

I regret to announce that Miss Washington has resigned the position of Treasurer of the United Offering of the Women of St. Stephen's which she has held since the death of Miss Anna Magee. She brought to the office such sincere interest in the Missionary work of our Church, and has labored so earnestly to keep our parish to its duty, that it is hard to let her drop this responsibility. But she has imperative duties that make it impossible for her to continue. So her resignation is accepted with gratitude for her faithful service. Both in the Woman's Auxiliary, and in the Benevolent Society, which she helped to reorganize, Miss Washington has during my rectorship made a large contribution of personal service and loyal co-operation.

Miss Mary DeHaven Bright, for some years the secretary of our Woman's Auxiliary has at my urgency consented to accept this important office. I bespeak for her the co-operation of the women of the Church.

Let me make a practical suggestion: Date your letters and postals. By which I mean put the post office address as well as the time of writing. Also sign. Sometimes the initials do not suggest the whole name. I have a correspondent in the U. S. Navy who sends me pictorial postals from all over the world, with only two initials. Alas, they do not convey to me his name, and I am unable to acknowledge. Young couples whom I marry often send me news of the birth of children, just a card and the name of the child, but no address to which I can reply. There lies on my desk, as I write, a letter of congratulation, which I sent to the old address in the hope that it would follow the couple to Washington whither they have moved. But the post office experts, not so persistent and clever as the British Post Office in such matters, gave up the quest, and the letter is back on my desk, and that couple think of me as one who is indifferent to their friendship and unsympathetic with their joy.

The influence of our Septuagesima Conference spreads like wavelets in a pool. In the last issue of "The Churchman" Dr. Barton's important paper, read at the Conference on Tuesday night, was published in full. High Sacramentarians have always contended that the discourse on eating and drinking Christ's flesh and blood in John vi referred to the Lord's Supper. The Evangelicals pointed out correctly enough, that as all schools agreed that John, the Apostle, wrote the Epistle, and accepted its accuracy as the report of an eyewitness, there was great objection to referring a discourse made a year before the institution of the Lord's Supper, to the as yet uninstituted rite of the Eucharist. Still the phrases, particularly the expression, "drinking my blood," seemed singularly inapplicable to the manna in the wilderness, and the miracle of the loaves, which, according to the narrative, were the occasions of the discourse. The historical setting suggested one interpretation and the language another. Now Professor Barton comes forward, as an expert in the Higher Criticism of the New Testament, and overthrows the historical objection. The Fourth Gospel, he holds, was not written by John, the son of Zebedee, but by another John, much later. It comes after the Epistles of Paul, and the Epistle to the Hebrews. The writer realizes that magical elements are seeping into the Church's sacramental theories from the mystery religions around. So he expands the spiritual teaching that Jesus gave about the true bread from heaven, and makes it applicable to the Lord's Supper. The High Sacramentarians are right, the passage does relate to the Eucharist. The historical objection is overthrown. But let not the victors rejoice too soon. For their conquest proves a veritable Trojan horse to its captors. Since the whole purpose of the discourse, according to the New Learning, is to spiritualize the Lord's Supper and make the means whereby the body of Christ is received to be faith, the flesh profiting nothing, and the truth symbolized being the important, life-giving element.

In another part of the same number of the "Churchman" there is a long quotation from "The Parish News," and still a third quotation in the editorial paragraphs. So it looks as if our little parish paper reached a wide circle of influential readers.

Nothing could be a greater mistake than to imagine that the platform of the National Church League aims at exterminating the Anglo-Catholics or narrowing the comprehensive character of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Here is the situation in a nutshell as I understand it. By the Reformation settlement there was room in the English Church for High Churchmen, Low Churchmen and Broad Churchmen. On the basic principle, "In essentials, unity; in non-essentials, liberty; and in all things, charity," a comprehensive Church is a workable organization. Of course, this principle rests on the assumption that essential truths can be trusted to maintain their hold upon men by their inherent vitality, and their own evidence, and will not unravel themselves, and lose their appeal, unless they are bound in by a peculiar selvedge, which edging thereby becomes one of the essentials. Few people can really believe that a particular theory of Orders is necessary to the preservation of a belief in God. Yet this is just the emphasis that the Oxford Movement introduced into the Church of England, and into the Protestant Episcopal Church. Under the Comprehensive theory a bishop could address a confirmation class without inculcating a theory of confirmation which is, indeed, held by the Church of Rome, and our Anglo-Catholic brethren, but which, whether it be true or false, was not adopted by our Church at the Reformation and is not taught in our formularies. Such a bishop would dwell upon the truths on which all parties agree, the benefits derived from prayer, from a public profession of allegiance to Jesus, and from dedication to His service. The debatable nature of the benefit derived from the Bishop's hands could be left in the background where it belongs, as the silence of our Church teaches, and as reason teaches, since the benefit is certainly not dependent upon a dogma about the rite; but upon faith in Jesus Christ. It is a question in my mind whether Comprehension could continue, or would be workable if the Anglo-Catholic theories should become predominant in our Church.

Mr. Sidney Dark, the editor of the "Church Times," the leading Anglo-Catholic journal of the world, is quite frank about it. According to an interview in "The Churchman" of March the fifth, he said: "So far as comprehensiveness is concerned I disagree with the dignitaries of the Church, and a great many of my friends. I agree with Bishop Knox, who, speaking from an opposite point of view to mine, says that Catholicism and Protestantism are two different religions. I do not see how one Church can permanently include both, though comprehensiveness will probably continue for many years."

Mr. Dark understands the men of his school. The peculiar system bulks so large in their theology that they can not tolerate people who wish to express the old truths in new ways. Their conscience clamors for the exercise of despotic authority. The Holy Cross Fathers would not speak at the Garrick Theatre, if cards were distributed announcing along with the Garrick Theatre services, the names and dates of the speakers at St. Stephen's, since this last list bore the name of a Presbyterian minister, who was to speak at St. Stephen's with the approval of the Bishop, and the sanction of the Church's canons. When the Board of Missions sent conferees to a conference at Panama some Catholic champions on the Board resigned their membership.

What will be the result of the growth of this new school that asserts through innumerable publications, all characterized by extraordinary fondness for Roman Catholic phraseology and usages, that it alone expresses fully the mind of the Church; that Low Churchmen and Broad Churchmen are only tolerated deficients in doctrine, permitted by the Church's kind indulgence to officiate for a season at its altars? How can our Church grow if such a school flourishes among us, a school out of which numbers rush to Rome, if we recognize in the slightest way the gifts of God in the Protestant world? Is it not the part of wisdom, does it not make for ultimate peace to point out plainly that this attitude of this school is hostile to the whole spirit of our Church?

There is here no suggestion that Anglo-Catholics, High Churchmen, Low Churchmen, or Broad Churchmen are outside of the limits of our Church's comprehension. I expressly state that the Church tolerates men who prefer a closed system after the Tridentine pattern. It can tolerate them legally and canonically; but I do ask the question whether they will allow the Church to remain as tolerant and comprehensive as it is, if they gain the upperhand in our General Convention. I doubt whether they can or will. Liberals are content to ground their teachings on evidence; but the children of the Oxford movement can not be satisfied unless they have had their peculiar views set forth by the authority of the Church. I ventured the prediction years ago that this school would attempt to fasten their theories on the Church in the revision of the Prayer Book.

A Bishop has the liberty of any other teacher of theology to spread abroad his views; but he has no right to represent them as the official teachings of our Church, if they are not so set forth in our standards. He cannot come down into the arena as the mouthpiece of a certain school, and at the same time expect the sanctity of the lawn to be respected. He can't represent our Church as the hospitable home and future meeting point of those who believe the great essentials, whose lex credendi is the lex orandi, and then turn around on those who take their stand on these essentials and intimate that they are disloyal if they do not journey with him further in a certain direction, where to many people the dome of St. Peter's rises up beyond the towers of Oxford as the logical goal. In a word, our Church can not remain what it is, or become what it should become, if those who admire the closed system gain control. It is our bounden duty, if we wish to see its Protestant character maintained to examine the nature of the theories that are being promulgated in many quarters as the Church's official teaching, and to show how unlike they are in their narrow rigidity to the broad and liberal platform laid down in the spacious days of Queen Elizabeth and how impossible their prevalence will make any large usefulness for our Church.

Cordially yours

Boy Scouts

During the past month a St. Stephen's troop of the Boy Scouts of America has been organized under the leadership of Mr. Richard Robinson, a new member of the Church, but associated with the scout movement since its beginning.

Starting with a group of five boys from the Sunday School, in one month the troop has grown to eighteen members with a Scout Master, an Assistant Scout Master, and younger troop commanders. Meetings are held weekly on Friday night in the Gymnasium where the troop drills and practices the scout movements.

Saturday afternoons, with the help of Mr. Hopkins, one of the teachers in the Sunday School, the troop has been taking hikes in the country. Before Spring, most of the boys will be instructed sufficiently in wood lore to make their hikes profitable excursions in the country.

The first Friday night in March, the troop was formally inducted in the Philadelphia organization, and most of the boys made third class scouts. Some have since taken the tests and become second class scouts. The field work in the summer is essential to becoming first class scouts and that must wait for a while.

The Rector has given the troop a meeting place on the third floor of the Parish House for the business gatherings, and they will hereafter precede the drill in the gymnasium.

Nearly eighteen years ago, when the Boy Scout movement first reached America, the first troop in Philadelphia to be organized was at St. Stephen's Church. After a few years the troop moved from the neighborhood one by one and it gradually disappeared. But it is particularly fitting that the Scout idea should be reborn in the same Church in Philadelphia where it was first organized.

The troop law requires a boy to be twelve years of age before he can be admitted as a Scout. For boys who have not reached that age, there is an organization known as the Scout Cubs. Very soon there will be sufficient boys to organize a troop of the Cubs, a sort of waiting list for membership in the more mature organization.

During the summer one of the Scout-activities is to spend two weeks in a camp, learning there Nature's story at first hand. This is eagerly awaited by the Church troop, although plans are still tentative where the Camp will be held.

The Sunday School

Our Boy Scout Troop, under the Scoutmastership of Mr. Robinson, one of our Sunday School teachers, is progressing finely—some of the boys are now in scout uniform. We are indebted to Mr. Kevin for starting this excellent organization for our younger boys. Before Boy Scouting officially was started in 1910 in Philadelphia, we had six patrols on our old Farm at Warminster, in 1907-8 and 9, and it is a real joy to see it revived with us in regular organized form.

We believe we will have a larger class than usual from the Sunday School this year, to be presented by the Rector to the Bishop for Confirmation, on the first Sunday morning in April, and, of course, this is cheering to all our teachers, as they see our young people take up in a consecrated way the ideals of the Christ.

The scholars are studying "The Life of Christ" and are now in rehearsal of a Pageant for their Easter carol service, written and arranged from the closing scenes in the Resurrection story. It is called, "The Garden of the Lord."

This Easter Carol Service and Pageant by the scholars will be given in the Church at 4 o'clock, Daylight Saving Time, the first Sunday after Easter, April 24th. We most cordially urge all who love old St. Stephen's to be present, particularly former scholars, teachers and friends. Come and help by your presence to make this the happy festival reunion it has always been, through the many past years.

Faithfully yours,
G. H. Streaker, Supt.

ELLA HEADMAN, Treasurer.

Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

On one occasion Henry Clay was entertained at a home where one of the boys was having a birthday. Among the presents was a gun from some anonymous giver. The lad was perfectly charmed with the present, and kept wondering who could be the donor. At last Mr. Clay told him that he must not let his ignorance on that point lessen his pleasure in the gift, since the gun would make its own report. I feel that it is not necessary to write much of an editorial comment on the year's work, for each of the societies makes its own report. Do not fail to read the fine record.

The year has been full of harmonious and cheerful work. Much has been due to Mr. Kevin's initiative and loyal co-operation. To him we owe the Friday Bible Class, and the Players' Guild, and the suggestion of the organization of the Boy Scouts. The most notable development of the winter has been the partnership that has been formed with the Business Women's Christian League whereby 400 of its members joined the fellowship of our Community House. Their secretary is allowed a desk in that building. This organization has also taken over the charge of the Noonday Service on Tuesday, and has secured addresses from a number of the leading ministers of Philadelphia.

It will be of interest to the Congregation to know that in the last number of The Churchman there is a fine appreciation of Henry Haliday, who designed the mosaic in the reredos, and the noble Magee window in the transept. Born in 1837 of an English father and Alsatian mother, Haliday early showed marked artistic gifts, and in 1858, at the age of 21, had a picture hung on the line of the exhibition of the Royal Academy. He associated himself at once with Millais, Holman Hunt, and Burne-Jones, and other pre-Raphaelites. Later on he became the designer of stained-glass windows for Messrs. Powell of Whitefriars. This became his principal lifework. Eventually he set up his own works at Hempstead. Besides stained glass, Haliday did sculpture, enamel, mosaic, and much mural work. He is unquestionably best known by his celebrated Dante and Beatrice, which he painted in 1882. His versatility was marvelous. Music was, next to Art, his great joy in life, but he had plenty of hobbies. One was Astronomy, in which he did such good work that he was invited by Norman Lockyer to join the Government Eclipse Expedition to India in 1871-2. He was also deeply versed in Egyptology. He was an accomplished linguist, speaking Italian, French and English, and had a reading knowledge of Greek, Arabic and Norse. In politics he was an ardent Gladstonian Liberal and friend of Home Rule, a good speaker and writer, and an ardent advocate of Woman's Suffrage. He was urged to enter Parliament, but declined. He was also interested in religious and social reforms and numbered among his friends Phillips Brooks, Dean Kitchen, Josephine Butler and R. J. Campbell. It is good to have the work of such a gifted artist, and such an interesting and many-sided personality among the art treasures of our Church. Mr. Clayton told me that the mosaic was constructed under Haliday's supervision by Venetian workmen, who were brought over to London for the purpose.

One of the blessings conferred by trust in a living God, who not only fills and sustains but also directs and rules the Universe, is that one can take a holiday with comfort. When our "watch" is done, and it is time for us to rest, we can forget the work, knowing that things are in competent hands. Nothing is accomplished by worrying or fretting. The boat that has surmounted safely so many mountainous waves, will be able to climb the onrushing billows. Society, that has cast out so many corrupt elements, will be able to purge itself again. The Church, that has passed through so many years of superstition, worldliness, moral laxity, and unbelief, will be able again to reform itself, and open up new fountains of refreshment by the wayside.

He that watcheth over Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep.

It fortifies my soul to know
That though I perish, Truth is so;
I steadier step when I recall
That though I slip, Thou dost not fall.

Let us comfort one another with these thoughts, in these days of waning idealism and timid conformity to the ways and standards of the multitude.

I wish to all my dear friends and parishioners a happy summer season, with a holiday in it from work for some era, and from worry through all its months.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

Another successful Lenten season has passed, which was marked with excellent and helpful addresses, generous contributions toward the expenses of the services, and an aggregate attendance of at least 18,000 persons. It is gratifying that notwithstanding the number of noon-day services now held during the Lenten season "St. Stephen's" maintains the position which it has occupied for so many years.

St. Stephen's Community Dance

Dismissed on the 28th of April after a very successful season.

We were able to maintain a three-piece orchestra and had an average attendance of fifty friends. During the season we had one party night when refreshments were served and novelty dances were given. Seventy people were in attendance.

We hope to continue same in the Fall.

MRS. R. ROBERTS.

REPORT OF THE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY OF ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH

The first meeting of the Benevolent Society was held on November 3rd, 1926, eight members and twelve sewers in attendance. To the seventeen workers on our list, we have added five, two of whom were in such dire need it was impossible to refuse their request for work.

We frequently receive appeals for extra sewing to help pay for some special object. One woman is supporting a sick daughter, another has a family of eleven children and a husband without work, and still another has been ill all winter and is now trying to earn money to pay the doctor. The help given these women, and through them to the hospitals, would be much greater had we more money.

Eight thousand two hundred and seventy-eight articles were made during the winter. This would have been impossible without the following generous donations:

Miss Ewing	$100.00
Mrs. John Coats Browne	100.00
Mrs. Pancoast	15.00
Mrs. Luffbarry	10.00
Mrs. Ware	10.00
The Misses Davis	10.00
Mrs. Kenworthey	5.00
Mr. Reifsnyder	5.00
Dr. Cooper	1.00
Mr. Freestone	1.00

We cannot expect these friends to come to our assistance every year, and to prevent another S O S appeal, we plan having a rummage sale on the 18th of October, and hope all members of St. Stephen's Church will help us make this venture a great success.

Work was done for twenty-two hospitals and letters of appreciation were received from them all. Five hundred rompers were made for the Children's Ward of Jefferson Hospital, but as this number was not sufficient to carry them through the summer, we made two hundred additional rompers, for which we were paid $100.

We have lost, through death, two of the oldest members of the Society: Mrs. Chas. Kenworthey and Mrs. Armstrong, two dear friends who will be greatly missed.

The resignation of Mrs. Nicholas Petry was received and accepted with much regret. She was an efficient worker and her charming personality endeared her to us all.

We closed May 4th with our usual luncheon provided and served by the members of the Society, to our many faithful sewers.

Respectfully submitted,
ISABEL P. DAVIS,
Secretary.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

There are sixty-nine names on the list, with an average attendance of twenty-two; three resignations and three new members registered.

The third Thursday of every month, from October through April, has found the faithful and interested members assembled to listen to the reports of the delegates, who keep the parish in touch with missions at home and abroad, and also to hear missionaries, in person, tell about their work with such enthusiasm that it seems futile indeed to begrudge the few hours spent at missionary meetings during the season, as is sometimes voiced by the absentees, who prefer some other method of spending their time, and yet they know not what they miss.

A corporate communion was celebrated at the opening meeting in October, and in November Miss Frederica Smith spoke about St. Agnes' School for five hundred girls at Kyoto, Japan, which school is appropriately called by the Japanese the "Light in Darkness" since its foundation fifty years ago by Bishop Williams, and now, a new building being greatly needed, this object is one of the six selected for advance work by the United Thank Offering as the corporate gift, and the sum of thirty dollars was contributed toward this cause.

As is usual at the December meeting, plans were carried out to send missionary boxes and other gifts to Indian schools, shut-ins and children in settlements, St. John's Settlement being one of the beneficiaries of the Diocesan Committee.

In January Mrs. William J. Haines gave a very inspiring talk about the forthcoming Bishop's Crusade, which is a concerted action to stimulate Christian zeal and to influence others to labor in good works not only as a spasmodic effort, but to continue through life.

In February, Mrs. John D. Thomas, an active officer of the Pennsylvania Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary, stressed the importance of having a church worker to watch over the interests of youthful offenders in the Juvenile Court, and St. Stephen's contributed the amount of five dollars asked from each parish toward the salary of this worker.

In March Mrs. John E. Hill, Diocesan Educational Secretary, outlined the book, "Beyond City Limits," the textbook used in the Mission Study Classes this year, so that the members might thus be informed of a few of the problems attendant upon rural parishes, not having had a mission study class to take it up more in detail.

At the April meeting a most interesting account was brought by Mrs. Atmore from the Foreign Committee in regard to affairs in China, and apparently patience must be exercised before conditions are sufficiently adjusted to admit of carrying on the mission work, and even then, not as formerly but with modifications.

When no speaker has been available, the Rector has come forward with remarks of fitting value, anent the Liberal Conference held, and other matters of parochial interest. Many, many opportunities are open to all in the Diocese and parish to attend meetings of all kinds, missionary, educational, social, philanthropic, dramatic and musical, to discuss the work of the church, and how best to perform it in conformance with the will of our Lord, and by so doing, our vision is broadened, our hearts are not hardened, our spiritual life is deepened, and the work of the Lord progresses.

Cannot we women all unite in this purpose, and try to be more steadfast than heretofore and not weary of well-doing in the future?

LAURA BELL,
President.

ST. STEPHEN'S BRANCH OF THE GIRLS' FRIENDLY SOCIETY

St. Stephen's Branch of the Girls' Friendly Society met each Monday evening during the past winter.

The resignation of the Branch President left the Branch without any recognized head, and in consequence the members made additional effort to keep the interests of the Society from waning. The winter's activities were many and varied, and every one shared in the responsibility and result. There was a Furman supper, each course being an advertisement; movies, one of them being a splendid showing of the life and time of Martin Luther; waffle luncheons, and a play and fashion show. The proceeds from these various affairs, together with the individual offerings of the members themselves, netted nearly four hundred dollars for the mission work of the Branch.

During the season Dr. Wm. H. Moore gave an interesting talk on "Hunting Big Game in Alaska," with some stereoptican views; Dr. Old and Dean Johnson spent an evening with us and told of some of their experiences in China and Japan; Mrs. Hill, Educational Secretary of the Diocese, spoke to us of the needs of the Christian Church in Rural America.

We had Hallowe'en and Valentine parties, and at Christmas the Elocution Class, under the direction of Mr. Kevin, presented "Why the Chimes Rang." On our Special Effort night this class gave "The Maker of Dreams." Both plays were excellent.

At Christmas we sent 90 well-filled stockings and 45 dressed dolls to the Philadelphia General Hospital. The Branch pledged $100 to the Diocesan Campaign Fund, and just recently gave $50 for the relief of the flood sufferers. During Lent the members made 25 garments, which, with 10 additional garments purchased from the Church Supply Bureau, will be sent by that organization to the Valley Crucis School in North Carolina. The married members also met one afternoon each week during Lent and sewed.

The Branch was represented at the Neighborhood Conference, held at Holy Trinity Memorial Chapel, and 40 members attended the Annual Service at Holy Trinity Church. One service has been held in St. Stephen's Church.

THE MOTHERS' MEETING

The Mothers' Meeting has 166 names on the roll—17 new members and three deaths.

Our average attendance has been 65, with an occasional meeting of 100.

Our collections have amounted to $52.01. This money is used principally for flowers and fruit for sick members, and flowers for the dead.

The net result of our Fair was $140.00, which was used by Dr. Grammer for the electric sign in front of the Community House.

We have contributed our usual $5.00 for Altar decorations for Palm Sunday, and also $5.00 to the Players' Guild in appreciation of their repetition of the Christmas play for the Mothers' Meeting.

Our principal effort this year has been to raise our pledge of $120.00 a year for the Diocesan Campaign Fund. This cheque was sent to the treasurer, Mr. Frazier, on May 7th.

The moving pictures provided by Dr. Grammer for the third Thursday in the month, and managed by Mr. Carrigan, continue to be a great pleasure and attraction and much help to the officers in providing the entertainment.

On July 22nd we had our Annual Outing, a boat ride to Riverview Beach on the Delaware. Dr. and Mrs. Grammer came down to accompany the group of 150 members, and added greatly to our pleasure.

Although the thermometer stood at 100 in the shade, we had a most enjoyable day.

Respectfully submitted,

BLANCHE M. HARPER,
President.

REPORT OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S CLUB, 1927

The Young People's Club closes its season with a membership of 43, and an average attendance of 35, with all members on the books in good standing. We meet every week, with the business meeting on the first Wednesday of the month; on that evening we have an informal supper, prepared by the girls and well attended. The other Wednesdays are for social entertainment and work.

In May we took 50 children and four mothers to the Zoo. The young people prepared sandwiches for them and we purchased milk, coffee and ice cream at the restaurant in the Garden, where they were served. At the end of the day we sent them home by bus, a tired and happy crowd.

Through the kindness of Dr. Grammer, who gave us a nice check for the "Outing Fund," we had a picnic in June to the Walton Estate at St. Davids, which the young people enjoyed very much.

In October the Club had a Hallowe'en party, which proved a very happy evening for all.

In December we held our annual Bazaar, when we cleared over six hundred dollars, out of which we gave Dr. Grammer two hundred dollars, which he used for mission work. The balance we used for our own charitable work as follows:

At Christmas we entertained 25 children, provided by the Social Service Department of the Jefferson Hospital. The evening's program commenced at 7 o'clock with a movie, then we had refreshments of sandwiches and cocoa, ice cream and cake. Before they went home each child was given a coat, suit of underwear, stockings and shoes, all of which were new. We also gave each one a box of candy. And the members of the Club, by a special subscription fund collected among themselves, provided toys for the children.

On December 29th a turkey dinner was provided by a friend, for the Club. They had as guests an old gentleman and his sister, whose names were suggested by Miss Lewis. We gave them each a Christmas gift and sent them home happy, with enough provisions to last them several days.

In March we entertained 25 women, obtained from the same source as the children. We provided this group with a full supper, prepared by the girls of the Club; then an interesting movie, and before going home each received a new pair of shoes. They thoroughly enjoyed the evening, which gave much pleasure to the givers as well as the recipients.

On March 16th we gave a card party, making a charge of one dollar for a table, to provide for the running expenses of the Club.

On March 23rd we had a rummage sale, making $172.00. Out of this money we purchased an electric clock, and presented it to Dr. Grammer for the Community House.

April 27th we had a theatre party, going to see "Listen, Dearie." We were pleased to have with us as guests, Dr. and Mrs. Grammer and Mr. and Mrs. Kevin.

The Club attended Church in a body on Sunday evening, March 20th. The service was enjoyed by all, and we hope to attend again in the near future.

HANNAH G. RIEFSNYDER,
President.

UNITED THANK-OFFERING

St. Stephen's contribution to the United Thank-Offering for 1926-27 was $200.00, leaving a balance on hand of $5.03. This was given by 39 subscribers.

The Female Protestant Episcopal Prayer Book Society has received from St. Stephen's $18.00.

THE BURD SCHOOL

For many years it has been the custom at the Burd School to celebrate in May or June the anniversary of the founding of the school, and the graduation of the girls who have passed through the High School during the year. Last year the annual celebration was postponed until October, and, as we did not have a graduating class, it gave Miss Tappen more time for the preparation of a commemorative program and enabled her to procure Dr. Potter as our honor guest for the occasion.

Miss Tappen very happily conceived the idea of tableaux vivants, reproducing in this way the portraits, daguerreotypes and memorials belonging to the school and church. One of the most interesting of these tableaux pictured the daguerreotype of the twelve original pupils. In addition to this, incidents connected with the past and present life of the school were portrayed in song and acting. It was altogether one of the most satisfactory entertainments ever given at the school. Dr. Potter made an address which added greatly to the success of the day, giving the school more than a 100 per cent. rating, as the school far exceeds the State requirements. Such acknowledgment is indeed a tribute to the efficient management of Dr. Grammer, the Board of Trustees and our able Principal.

Our girls go to camp in August; the change made last year in the camp for the younger children proved a very successful improvement, and will be repeated again this year, while the older girls will go to Lily Lake, as usual.

There has been little or no sickness at the school this year; some colds and ear troubles and a few tonsil operations.

The members of the Visiting Committee have made weekly visits of inspection and reported favorably on conditions in the school, especially during Miss Tappen's long illness.

Some of our girls in Miss Eccles' Sunday School Class gave two plays at the Community House. They proved well done and amusing. The proceeds went to the Sunday School's Lenten Offering for Missions. It may interest the members of our congregation to know that the girls have sent $15 of their savings to the flood sufferers.

We have at present 39 pupils in the school. Four new pupils were admitted last year and one child was removed owing to the remarriage of her mother, who was able to support her. Our absentees seem to be doing very well in their respective schools and colleges. Virginia Downward, a student at the University of Pennsylvania, has been elected president of her Fraternity. Shirley Edwards is at West Chester Normal School, and Lilian Bovell and Dorothy Ziegler at Virginia State Normal School. Helen Fulton, who was a probationer at the West Philadelphia Hospital for Women, has now been accepted and enrolled as a student nurse. Isabel Harman continues her studies at Northfield Seminary, Massachusetts. All of these girls are sending home good reports and keep in touch with the Burd School through their constant letters. It is gratifying to know that they count the days that bring them nearer their vacations and return to the Burd School; although each one is happy and pleased with her respective school.

Four of our girls were confirmed. The school affords wonderful opportunities to all our children; the beautiful surroundings, bright and happy faces and the excellent régime maintained at the school make the visits of the Board of Visitors more of a pleasure than a duty. I wish to thank all members of this committee for their regular attendance during the year.

Respectfully submitted,

EMILY K. CAMPBELL,
Chairman, Board of Women Visitors.

ST. STEPHEN'S AID SOCIETY

Interest in the work of the Aid Society brought back many of our faithful workers, and some new members have been enrolled during the Lenten season. The demands made upon Miss Lewis for a constant supply of baby garments do not decrease, so it is satisfactory to report that although we have worked only four Fridays in Lent instead of the usual five mornings, the stock on hand is equal to that of last year.

Through the generosity of Miss Cornelia Ewing, we were able to increase our activities this year, and have added to the usual supply of garments, caps, sacques and baby blankets in most attractive colors and materials which will give an increased joy and pleasure to every mother who receives a layette from Miss Lewis.

Thanks are due to all our members for their contributions and co-operation, and especially to Miss Sheaff who, though unable to attend the meetings, sent an able substitute in a very excellent automatic machine, as a permanent gift to the Society.

One hundred and ninety-six garments were made during Lent.

COMMUNITY HOUSE

The House Committee, of the Community House, composed of Mrs. Daniel R. Harper, Miss Bertha T. Walshe, treasurer; Mrs. R. Ethel Keable, secretary, and Mrs. Howard Reifsnyder, chairman, has held four meetings.

From contributions received from the Mothers' Meeting, Girls' Friendly Society, Young People's Club, King's Daughters, and dues from the Community House Association, we have purchased clothes racks, folding chairs, electric sign, kelvinator for the refrigerator, and banquet tables.

The total number of meetings held in the Community House from May 3rd, 1926, to May 6th, 1927, was 439, with an approximate attendance of 14,663.

The committee gave permission to the Business Women's Christian League to have desk room on the first floor. This is the largest outside organization using the Community House, having an enrolment of 400, and using our building to great advantage.

This season the gymnasium has been in use every evening and some afternoons. The rest of the building is in constaut use by the church organizations and community interests.

HANNAH G. REIFSNYDER,
Chairman.

"WHATSOEVER" CIRCLE OF KING'S DAUGHTERS

The "Whatsoever" Circle of King's Daughters has held 16 meetings this season, with an average attendance of nine members. We meet twice each month, and after having supper together, we sew for various objects. This year we have made six dresses for children, which will be given to the Hope Day Nursery, together with some linen scrap-books. We also have ready five layettes, consisting of 14 articles each, to go to the Sheltering Arms. We made a few articles for the Young People's Fair in the fall. At Christmas 24 well-filled stockings were sent to the Day Nursery, together with a couple of dolls. We also gave a donation of money to a sick woman at Christmas. In February we held our Cake and Candy Sale, which netted us over $94.00. We made this amount $100.00 and have given it to the fund now being raised to purchase scenery for our stage. Our meetings are very informal, but always interesting, and we thoroughly enjoy our work.

PARISH VISITOR'S REPORT

The most beautiful season of the year is upon us, and as we raise our hearts with joy and thanksgiving, it seems that all nature is rejoicing, too. The trees put on their most beautiful garments, their tender green leaves and budding boughs all bring joy to us, because it is a foretaste of the relief of many ills that fly away at the approach of spring.

The past winter, while a mild one, has seen a number of people out of work, some of whom have hardly known before what it was to be unemployed.

A number of our men told me of waiting at the newspaper office at night, in order to get the next morning's paper as soon as printed, then going out early in the morning to answer advertisements, only to return home disappointed.

Having visited many people as your parish visitor, let me tell you, friends, the average person is doing the best he can. If you could see and know their struggles, their poverty, their heartaches, you would sympathize with them. There is one family, whose extreme poverty, caused by the father's being out of work, has caused us much anxiety. When the mother first came to our Benevolent Society, she had but one dear little baby boy. Now there are eleven children. Three of the boys are working, and gladly give all their earnings to the mother, but with all they could do there has been of necessity a great deal of hardship and doing without. Mrs. John Coats Browne has been most generous in her help of this special family, and a part of Miss Frances Gebhart's annual memorial gift of $25 has been devoted to their care.

Babies come into homes where there is little work, and often many children too young to do anything toward the support of the family; yet the babies come, but through the goodness of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Stephen's, whose members during the Lenten season made layettes for newcomers, we have been able to make seventeen of these little ones comfortable and fully clothed.

A great deal of time is consumed in visiting the sick, yet it is time well spent, as it helps to brighten the day for the invalids and makes them feel that we keep in touch with them. There are many opportunities to reach the sick with sympathy, and at times with sorely needed material help, as well.

One case especially sad and heartrending was the death of a father and mother, within a very short time, leaving two little boys in our charge. The boys have been placed in a home for the present. Mr. Raspin, one of our Vestrymen, has kindly taken charge of their affairs, and it is hoped that there will be enough money left after settlement to give them both a good education.

A young woman who formerly attended our Sunday School was a few years ago left a widow with four children. She was ambitious, and thought she could earn enough to support them all, but she soon found that this was impossible. She made application to Girard College, and succeeded in having the names of two of her boys placed on the waiting list. They passed the examination, and were admitted.

We hear that the boys, Frank and Robert Brenner, are doing well. The older of the two is a sophomore in the high school. He is keeping at the head of his class, and is desirous of being one of the "honor men," so that he can go to the University of Pennsylvania when through this year. He is also working for the prize given by L'Alliance Francaise, for the greatest proficiency in French. He has been promoted to the post of Sergeant in the military battalion, and it is quite possible that he will reach the rank of Captain before he graduates.

Robert, the younger boy, is in the seventh grade. He enters the high school next September. Before their admission to the College they were both members of our Sunday School, and now attend both church and Sunday School at St. Stephen's when they are home for the Christmas and Easter holidays. When we have our Outing during the summer, we always ask permission from the College to have them join us, and when they finish their course we hope to have them back in the church as regular members.

Every summer Mrs. Albert Pancost has sent one of our crippled women to the Mercer Home at Atlantic City for a specified time. We are very thankful for this great kindness, as it is a bright spot in this afflicted woman's life.

We have on our list five worthy people, too old and sick to work or help themselves, to whom a regular monthly allowance is given, which enables them to obtain some necessaries. I am more than thankful to be able to extend this help to them.

Our Sunday School outing last year was a most enjoyable day at Atlantic City. We were all tagged, which permitted us to go on and off the pier at will, and gave the children the treat of a dip in the surf. We were very happy in having Dr. Grammer with us. All returned home in safety, tired, but very happy.

The number of persons receiving Christmas baskets was as large as ever, and the baskets were as bountifully filled. One woman wrote that when she received her basket, she fell on her knees and wept, but her tears were those of thankfulness. One dear old lady who has passed her eightieth year, eagerly asked me if I thought I could afford just a small chicken for her. She is entirely destitute, and is anxiously waiting to be called "home."

A very generous friend of St. Stephen's has for years contributed three packing boxes filled with new shoes and three boxes of new rubbers, to be distributed among children in need of them. Ninety-six pairs of shoes and thirty-five pairs of rubbers were given out during the winter. For this we give thanks to all who made it possible to make these much-needed gifts.

Visiting the Sunday School scholars, the sick, the hospitals, the discouraged, in addition to the regular routine duties, has made up the year's work.

The Parish Visitor wishes to thank the donors for the gifts of half-worn clothing, and to thank also all who have helped her work in any way.

Respectfully submitted,

K. H. LEWIS.

REPORT OF THE DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL FOR JULY, 1926

The report of Miss Ethel Newman, the principal of the School last summer, I have in its longer form for the perusal of anyone who is interested. I have summarized its statements and condensed them for a brief report, to be submitted to the Parish meeting.

The School was opened June 28th, immediately after the public schools were closed for the summer, and it was ended on July 30th. July 5th was omitted, making 24 teaching days in all. The school was supervised and taught by Miss Ethel Newman, assisted in the instruction by her sister, Miss Isabel. Both were public school teachers.

On the 29th of June, 29 children reported for work. This enrollment grew to 92 before the end of July, although the average attendance was about 40. Of the 92 enrolled, there was but one Protestant child; 74 were Greek Catholics; 7 Jewish, 10 Roman Catholic.

The end and aim of the school was to give the children some knowledge of the Bible, an acquaintance with some of the more familiar hymns, and to equip them with some skill in the manual arts.

I have the list of subjects studied, but prefer to dwell more at length on the handicraft. Seven children made cord hammocks; others baskets of almost every shape and size; sealing wax made jars into flower vases, and unbleached muslin pieces rapidly became aprons.

The kindergarten work was under Miss Isabel, and progressed rapidly. In addition to the Bible and industrial work, special features were added on certain days.

Commencement on July 30th brought with it rewards to many for perfect attendance, faithful attendance, and for bringing the most members. One girl was credited with having added 18 members to the School.

Respectfully submitted,

ROBERT KEVIN.

CHURCH PERIODICAL CLUB

The Church Periodical Club is a clearing-house for books and magazines. The book you have just finished, or the magazine, is quite as valuable as it was before you opened it; its pleasure-giving possibilities are as great.

There are women in lonely little ranch houses, hungry for a new novel or a magazine with fashions and some new ideas in housekeeping.

There are engineers on the outposts of civilization wanting "something to read" in the leisure hour—a magazine with amusing short stories and up-to-the-minute articles.

There are countless remote places all up and down the land where someone is trying to build up a little library for those who have no access to books or magazines at all. So, when you are willing to forward a magazine, tell the librarian and she will secure for you the address of someone who has asked for that particular magazine.

If you have books you are willing to pass on, or if you can make a money gift, tell her about it, and she will take care of it for you.

Forty-five members of St. Stephen's continue to send regularly 100 current magazines, 35 of these being direct subscriptions in the names of the recipients. Five of them go to our soldier boys at Camp McClellan, near Anniston, Alabama.

Our Sunday School leaflets are passed on to others in need of them.

Calendars go out at New Year's, and cards are sent at Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter.

Many magazines are taken to Jefferson Hospital.

Through Miss Washington, St. Stephen's Representative of the P. E. Prayer Book Society, 100 copies each of the Prayer Book and Hymnal and one dozen Bibles were sent to the Rev. Mr. Carson, at Southwest Harbor, Maine.

A package of 12 books went to aid the Rev. Dr. Saunderson in establishing a Community Library in his Parish at Brownsville, Pa.

Another package was given the Seamen's Institute for the use of the men of the Merchant Marine.

A box of books was sent to St. Elizabeth's Indian School at Wakpala, S. D.

It is a pleasure to recall some of the encouraging messages that have come to us: "My boy stays at home evenings now he has something to read."

"Several students have told me their religious doubts were removed by the books you sent." "The personal contact through correspondence has brought us many a good friend." "When we are blue and downhearted, then we hear from someone a long way off, a word of good cheer, a paper, a book, how ashamed we feel to think of discouragements."

In the prayer of the Church Periodical Club we ask that it may be an instrument of service in His hands.

Look at the means, a magazine, a letter, your own book, or perchance the price of one. See what is wrought "in His hands," ease to a mother's heart, faith to a student, courage to a priest. Can any service be more rewarding?

MARY M. ROBERTS,
Librarian.

THE WYCK FAIR

For a number of years a garden party and fair have been held at 6026 Germantown Avenue, corner Walnut Lane and Germantown Avenue, at the home of Mr. Caspar Wistar Haines, for the benefit of missions in the Convocation of North Philadelphia. St. Stephen's has always taken an active part in this, and will have charge of the cafeteria, under the direction of Mrs. John C. Browne, who will be assisted by other parishes, but will gladly receive contributions of money and articles of food. Anything will be acceptable, as all parishes in the Convocation are working to raise the thousand dollars promised to the Diocesan Campaign this year, and fancy and domestic articles, flowers, books, groceries, etc., will find a ready sale on Thursday, June 2, 1927, from 2 until 8 o'clock. Music and dances on the lawn in the afternoon. Admission, 25 cents. One carfare will take you to the gate, and you can enjoy a good supper in a cool garden near the roses which will then be in bloom.

ST. STEPHEN'S PLAYERS' GUILD REPORT

The Players' Guild is one of the youngest of the parish organizations, and because of its youth, possibly one of the noisiest. But in the course of a year or two it will settle down to a sedate middle-age, I suppose, doing its work in a normal way.

It was organized last Fall for the double purpose of engaging the interest of several of the young people of the Church who had not been attracted to any of the other activities of the Church life, but who seemed to have an interest in dramatic expression that sometimes bordered closely on devotion; and, secondly, to put to use the excellent stage and stage effects with which the new parish house was equipped.

At the outset it was faced, however, with the lack of stage equipment that is as necessary as good lighting and a curtain. In the preparation of the Christmas play, "Why the Chimes Rang," many technical difficulties had to be overcome by a little ingenuity. Because no charge was made for admission, the expenses of the production, amounting to about $85, were met by private subscription. Almost the entire expense was for the building and painting of scenery.

Then it was realized that a fund for scenery which had been started by the Girls' Friendly Society and into which $300 had been put, needed augmenting. That seemed a worthy purpose to work for, and with the inspiration of this as a goal the Guild, numbering some twenty young people, got down to work on a three-act farce that was expected to pay for itself and provide an additional sum to the scenery fund.

Since several of the parish organizations, the Girls' Friendly, the Young People's Club, the King's Daughters were planning to contribute to the scenery fund, and manifestly the Guild would have the use of the scenery when it was procured, the Dramatic Society organized itself into chapters. These divisions included Girls' Friendly Chapter, which since has produced another one-act play, "The Maker of Dreams," for Special Effort Night; a Sunday School Chapter, which presented two one-act plays, "Captain Bimbo" and "Evening Dress Indispensable," for the Lenten offering of Miss Eccles' class, and from which over $20 was realized; and then the central chapter itself. The plan permits the organizing of various chapters from the various societies, thus insuring the use of the scenery by all of the parish organizations when it is secured, and the added advantage that the central chapter can be called upon for assistance and help in the technical and mechanical details of play presentation. It is a loose organization at the best, but a flexible one.

The heaviest work of the year was the presentation last Friday and Saturday nights of a three-act farce, followed by a dance. The heavy expenses for copyright privileges and the employment of an orchestra, decreased materially the eventual profit. Further, the sale of tickets at 50 cents apiece, was dictated by the desire to be generally helpful to the young people of the Parish by providing them with inexpensive entertainment. Although all the returns have not yet been made for the sale of tickets, I am approximately correct in saying that about 450 people attended the two performances of the play last Friday and Saturday nights, and about 570 tickets were sold. The expenses for the two nights came to $160, and I believe the profit will amount to over $100. I have an itemized list of expenses and sales for any who cares to examine it.

That $100 will be added to the fund, of course, for the acquirement of scenery. To the same fund, I may add, $100 has been contributed by the Daughters of the King, through the kind interest of Miss Bertha Walshe.

Next year the Guild hopes to present a more serious piece of work in the fall as well as a spring play and dance. The general feeling is that it would like one play to be a contribution to the religious life of the Parish in an elevated way, and one that is distinctly worth while. During the summer it is hoped that the acquisition of scenery may begin to be made.

In closing, may I express my appreciation of the way in which the parish responded to the work of the Guild. It was most generous in its purchasing of tickets, even in cases where it was known they could not be used by the immediate purchasers. I believe that the general co-operation the Guild has received will bear good fruit.

Respectfully submitted,

ROBERT KEVIN.

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

I herewith, as Chairman of the Scout Committee of the Parish, beg leave to submit the following report of its activities and work since organized early in February, under the leadership of Richard Robinson, Scoutmaster.

On January 29th the first meeting took place, with five boys reporting to begin their Scout work. Instruction was given in the fundamentals of good scouting, and the week following the boys reported back with three new candidates. February 12th brought several new boys who were under the Scout age of 12. But they will be organized into the Scout Cubs, a younger group, during the summer. On February 26th the boys went on the first of many hikes they have taken since, when they are instructed in the art of fire building, cooking and the lore of the woods. On March 8th, the Troop was officially admitted into the Philadelphia organization with eight boys taking the Scout oath. It was accompanied by an interesting and impressive ceremony. A brief address of welcome and encouragement was made by Dr. Grammer.

The Troop has steadily grown until now it numbers eighteen. Most of them have their uniforms. They meet on Friday nights for business and drill, and nearly every Saturday afternoon, when the weather is good, for hikes through the suburbs and country about the city.

The Rector has granted the Troop the use of a room on the third floor of the Parish House for meeting purposes. The gymnasium in the basement of the Community House is used for drilling.

Quite recently, because of the mention made of the work of the Troop in the Parish News by Dr. Grammer, a friend of scouting and an old friend of the Rector, has offered several prizes for the successful passing of tests in the development of its work. During the summer the Troop will camp in the country near Philadelphia, although the exact date and place have yet to be decided upon.

In obtaining the services of Mr. Robinson the Rector and I both feel we have received into our Scout work as well as into the membership more recently of the Church itself, a man of many years' experience with boys and their problems, and one who by his devotion and his understanding is well equipped to make Scout Troop No. 2 an important part of the community work of the Parish.

Respectfully submitted,
ROBERT KEVIN.

The Sunday School

Since last May's report of the Sunday School, we had our June excursion to Atlantic City, with its usual happy day for everybody. Owing to the kindness of everyone, particularly the Reading Railroad officials, who are so liberal in carrying so many of our scholars as children, our expenses were made lighter. We took with us about 155, some 35 of these being relatives and friends who paid their own way. We saved enough on the money allotted to us to take the teachers and a few of the older scholars to Valley Forge by auto bus, at the beginning of our fall sessions. We are indebted to Mr. Hopkins for handling the busses and getting them at a low rate.

Mr. Kevin has very kindly helped us much during the past winter. He has revived the Cross and Crown system of awards for attendance and given us a weekly news sheet. He has, through Mr. Robertson, as Scoutmaster, re-established in regular organized form, a good troop of Boy Scouts.

Our Annual Christmas play—The Real Santa Claus—with some fifty in the cast, had its usual hard work and big success.

The "Life of Christ" has been our study, from Mr. Wm. B. Forbush's excellent system of lessons. We have been able to supplement and illustrate these with beautiful, artistically colored lantern slides. The test of a church being Confirmation, we, as usual, showed the value of the Sunday School, in presenting, through the Rector, to the Bishop a goodly number of our scholars.

Our Easter Carol Service and Pageant, held in the church at 4 P. M., Sunday, April 24th, climaxed our year's activities.

On this happy occasion we had a good clear day. The galleries and main body of the church were filled, with not only the school, but many former scholars to whom we had sent invitations, as well as many relatives and friends. For many years this has served as a festival reunion of Burd School graduates and graduates of the school, and all seem to agree that this was the best yet. We have heard nothing but praise of the finished efforts of the scholars in presenting the beautiful pageant, "In the Garden of the Lord," in which the story of Easter was so well portrayed. For the first time we used dialogue, which the different characters well sustained.

As at this time we present our offerings for missions we are glad to report this amounted to some $238.00.

Faithfully yours,
GEORGE H. STREAKER.

Report of the Sunday School Treasurer

The Lenten offering this year totaled $238.49 and it will be presented June 5th in the Academy of Music at the Diocesan Sunday School Mass Meeting.

To the Japanese Reconstruction Fund the Sunday School during the year gave $100. Its balance in the Christmas Fund is $8.36.

The Lenten Offering is composed of the yearly offering of the Sunday School, which was $127.04; the Lenten Box offering, which was $79.45; and the offering at the service in the afternoon on the first Sunday after Easter, $32.00.

Respectfully submitted,

The Rector's Letter

Cragsmoor, New York.

My dear Parishioners:

Before you read this letter, I shall, D. V., be back in my pulpit, and have given you my greeting orally. Still I can not wait till my return to the city to write this editorial letter. So on this rainy day, while streams are running in the motor tracks in the road, and all the sky is gray, and all the landscape seen through sheets of rain, I take my seat on the magic carpet of thought, and find myself standing in the beautiful chancel of St. Stephen's looking into your kind faces. Every Sunday morning I have visited you in this fashion. It has been a comfort to know that you were receiving a helpful message from Mr. Kevin. It has been good to realize that everything has been done well, and that nothing has been slack or slip-shod in the worship. I have often wondered how the travelers among us, the sojourners in resorts and hotels and boarding houses are faring on Sunday. This last Sunday for the first time this summer, there was no public worship, and the lack of Church for one week makes me realize more vividly than ever the immense value of Church-going, for the devotional life and for training in social responsibilities, for bringing home to one's consciousness our membership in the family of man. The Church that I have attended this summer is a Federated Church. On its walls hangs the motto: "In essentials, unity; in non-essentials, liberty; in all things charity." Any follower of Jesus Christ is invited to join. The ministers have all had helpful messages. One was a professor of Yale, a writer of exquisite culture, a great student of Dante, a man whose supreme interest was in beauty and truth. The next month the preacher was of the same liberal school, but his emphasis was different, and the sermon was less of the nature of literature, and in some respects came closer to the practical duties of life. The last preacher was of another turn, and linked the abstract and the concrete close together, never announcing an abstract truth, but always evolving the lesson from some concrete instance. Truly there are diversities of gifts, and the world is richer and life is fuller for them. These men were not rivals nor competitors, the praise of one was no disparagement of the others. Each had his function and part. What was true of these ministers, applies to the different Churches. It would be a great loss to the world, if the Methodists were to lose their fire and fervor, and their spirit of daring and innovation in methods. A Methodist who is the timid slave of convention in his religious life has lost much of the spirit of Wesley. But it would be a great pity if there were no other type of Protestant Christian. It is well that our Church should seek to unite culture and religion, and to emphasize the importance of worship. But certainly it would be unfortunate if there were no simpler services than our own. No one Church meets the needs of all sorts and conditions of men. One of the problems at the Lausanne Conference on Faith and Order was the difficulty of uniting the Churches of Christendom more closely without giving too much authority to the bonds of union and so losing some of the characteristic virtues of the different Churches. Not much can be done while people believe that superstition, that there is only one divinely appointed form of Church government, or that less superstitious but equally invalid doctrine, that the so-called Catholic creeds are the final and ultimate expression of Christianity, obligatory on the minds and consciences of all faithful followers of Jesus. It is one of the basic teachings of the Gospel that we are under the leadership of God's Spirit, who is training the race and leading us into larger truths. When that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away. Of course, the partial will not be lost, the elements of truth, the everlasting Gospel, will abide, but they will be taken up into new combinations, and stated in new ways. None of the old values will be lost, of this I am as certain as of the other truth, that new wine needs new wine-skins, and new truth makes inadequate and misleading old doctrinal statements.

But I must not linger too long among these generalizations, important as they are. They were suggested to me by my summer experience in this Federated Church, and the meeting of that Conference on Faith and Order at Lausanne. They were probably due also to engrossment this summer in theology, in the preparation of the Bohlen Lectures that I am to deliver late in the Autumn. The course has grown into ten lectures. If they prove as profitable and interesting to the hearers and readers as they have been to their author, my fondest hopes will be surpassed.

Christian fellowship in this Federated Church has not been a mere phrase. The chief lady in the Church has the most magnificent home on the mountain, a real palace, with its fine gate-house, its gardens, parterres, lake, and splendid rooms, porches, picture gallery and so forth. Every Sunday in August it was announced in Church that she would be at home on Tuesday afternoon from 2 to 7 and would be delighted to welcome her friends and fellow-worshippers. She was called away in the middle of the month by the death of a beloved grandson, but she gave orders that the reception should not be discontinued. To that great-hearted woman and the Federated Church I ascribe in large measure the unusual geniality of this cultured community. Religion prevented culture from becoming selfish, critical and supercilious.

But I turn from these moralizings to the tasks that lie before us. Of course, one of our major responsibilities is to meet our Expectation. By the new system I receive regular reports of our contributions to this object. The diocesan treasurer calculates the amount that ought to be contributed monthly, if the total is to be raised. According to his calculation we were about $300 behind on the first of September, but inasmuch as most of the congregation were out of the city in the summer, I am confident that this sum will be made up when the summer envelopes come in. I am sure that it will not be necessary to have any special drive about Christmas time to reach our goal. Indeed I hope that we shall go far beyond it easily. I should love to reach $6000. I think that we can do it. I want to do it for the sake of St. Stephen's, as well as for the sake of the cause. Religion can not mean much to people unless they make some sacrifices for it. It is as citizens of the Kingdom and fighters for its dominion that our lives have their chief significance, and we will not work for it unless we both pray for it and make sacrifices for it. No religion is entitled to be called a religion if it is only a convention, or a sedative, or a pose, or a concession to public opinion, that does not control our lives, and make demands on our energy. People who can not give are people who cannot pray, and to whom religion does not mean much.

———

I am sure that the reports of the various summer outings will be read with pleasure. I call especial attention to Mr. Robinson's account of the Boy Scouts. A friend has authorized me to give a dinner to the Scouts at which a prize will be awarded. This will come off in October. This band is one of our most important developments. The Boy Scout movement is one of the great uplifting movements of the century. It is elevating and refining boyhood. I hope that our band will grow in all good things.

———

I am persuaded that a Church ought to offer a field of service to its members as well as an oratory. We hear a great deal of criticism of parochialism. A narrow provincial spirit is indeed a great curse in religion as well as in social and political life. But the parish, rightly viewed, is an immense potency for good. Nepotism is an evil, but we should lose much if in dislike of nepotism we weakened family affection. Loyalty to the parish, and interest in its members and activities are essential to the prosperity of the whole Church. How can a man love his brethren whom he has not seen, if he does not care for his brothers whom he does see? Do you remember Romola's despair when she found that Tito Melema, with his large and generous sentiments and enlightened outlook, had no sense of responsibility, and no conscience in his private and personal relations? Who has not met such people? So liberal in profession, so narrow and snobbish in conduct. True liberality is impossible when the heart is unloving. Love and loyalty go together. Let this be ever in our hearts, that our Church can only prosper as it abounds in love and in service. Where these abound there is prosperity; they are the ultimate test.

It is with a great sense of bereavement that I announce the death of Mrs. Mary F. Kensett Whiting, in the Ravine Hotel, Randolph, New Hampshire, on Monday, September 5th. All that I know of the details is that her death was sudden and unexpected, and that she was buried beside her husband in Bridgeport, Connecticut, where she spent her early married life. The week before her death, Mrs. Grammer received a letter from her from Cape Cod. She seemed in good health and spirits. Greatly will she be missed in the Woman's Auxiliary of which she was Vice-President, and from her place in Church, which she filled whenever she was in town and her health permitted. For though her face was always singularly sweet and placid, she was a great sufferer from rheumatism these last years. She has been spared further sufferings, and has escaped the trials of old age. With her surely to die was gain. Singularly loyal and brave-hearted, consuming her own smoke, ever turning on others a face full of sweet interest, and quiet self-control, she leaves a great vacancy. She was united to me by many ties, having known my father well in her girlhood in Baltimore, where my father was a friend of her father's. One of her favorite nieces was a parishioner of mine in Norfolk, who was brought into close association with me through the chancel chapter. Mrs. Whiting conferred this inestimable gift upon her friends, that she idealized them and expected of them their very highest and best. She was one of those persons of whom it could be truthfully said:

> None knew her but to love her,
> None named her but to praise.

Wherever she is in God's great universe, we pray that she may know that she was valued and is missed.

The loss of such parishioners makes me realize keenly the necessity of drafting in new recruits. Here we have in St. Stephen's a fine equipment, a fine endowment, an efficient staff, and a unique opportunity. We are a Church equipped for service. Surely that ought to be an attraction to those who want to serve. A Church built upon such an appeal will have its walls cemented by the right mortar, and will not easily be thrown down. Churches built on narrow and exclusive lines, whether those lines be ecclesiastical or social, are out of harmony with the spirit of Christ. Let us build on the right lines, and trust in God.

After the publication of the last number of the "Parish News" in May, we lost the senior member of the choir in point of service, Mr. Robert Roberts, who was also for many years the librarian of the choir and the ringer of the chimes on Sunday.

Some musicians are anything but harmonious. Mr. Roberts, however, was not of that class. He knew how to work harmoniously with others, and is missed by all his associates. Much sympathy goes out to his wife, who stood by him so staunchly and is such a useful teacher in the Sunday School and member of our congregation.

Another member who entered into rest since the last number of this paper is Mr. Robert M. Black, who worshipped with us for many years, and never failed to keep in touch with me by postals from his winter quarters in Florida, or from his summer journeyings.

Just as we go to press I learn of the death of Miss Sheaff. In this last case there is no cause for sorrow. Full of years—86 years old—she is gathered to the rest that remaineth for the people of God. She and Miss Haydock came to St. Stephen's from Holy Trinity Memorial, and were for years regular attendants and faithful helpers of all our causes. Wonderful was their friendship. In literature the famous friendships are between men: David and Jonathan, Orestes and Pylades, Damon and Pythias, Henry of Navarre and Sully, Tennyson and Hallam, but in my experience of life, friendships between women have been as noticeable as friendships between men. I never knew of a stauncher and longer friendship than the one that existed between Miss Haydock and Miss Sheaff, for nearly forty years. What a comfort is the assurance "In my Father's house are many mansions." What promise of reunion is contained in the mention of a "General Assembly in Heaven."

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

Benevolent Society

On October 27th the Benevolent Society is planning to have a Rummage Sale, but this cannot be done without the aid of the many friends of the Society. This is the first time that the Benevolent has had a sale of any kind, but this will help in two ways: first, it will afford an opportunity for people to purchase things they need at reasonable prices: second, the proceeds will enable the Society to purchase material and give more work to the sewers this winter. Won't you kindly remember the date, Wednesday, October 19th, and send anything you have to the Community House from now on marked for the Benevolent Society.

The Woman's Auxiliary

The Woman's Auxiliary of St. Stephen's will hold the first meeting of the season on Thursday, October 20th, at 11 o'clock, in the Parish House. All women who can attend are asked to do so.

Wyck Report

The annual garden party at Wyck was held on the first Thursday in June, and owing to the hearty cooperation of the parishes of the North Convocation, one thousand dollars will be given to St. George's, Venango, as the result of the day's entertainment. Acknowledgments and thanks are again due to the members of St. Stephen's, who kindly sent contributions of money and articles of various kinds, as also to those who bought tickets. Much of the success of the fair was owing to the skilful management of the cafeteria by Mrs. John Coates Browne, St. Stephen's being responsible for that department with the aid of other parishes, and everyone enjoyed the good supper prepared.

Mothers' Meeting Picnic

The joys of the open road with the seashore as the goal at the end were experienced by more than a hundred members of the Mothers' Meeting on their annual picnic July 21st.

All the activities of a real vacation were tightly packed into the few hours of the day —automobiling, the beach, the theater, bathing, the boardwalk, and supper.

At 8 o'clock in the morning five large, luxurious busses left St. Stephen's Community house with the mothers and as many of their children and babies as could go. Among the guests were Dr. Grammer, Mr. and Mrs. Kevin, Mr. and Mrs. Carrigan, Miss Lewis and Mr. Streaker. Earlier in the day Mr. Streaker had taken a train to the shore to make sure that all was in readiness to receive the pilgrimage at the end.

On arriving the Mothers repaired at once to Young's Pier where the headquarters for the day were established. Their milk and coffee and ice cream had been provided in profuse quantities. Then the pursuits of the day were begun. Arm in arm the Mothers viewed the boardwalk and the shops. Then some made ready for a dip in the surf while others took advantage of the many attractions the pier offered for the pleasure of the day.

A minstrel show was a high feature of the afternoon for there, too, Mr. Streaker had anticipated the event. The Mothers were the special audience for Welch's black singers. Many a joke and song had one of St. Stephen's friends for its subject, though all could enjoy it.

At 6 o'clock in the evening the group was gathered together and preparations made for the return journey. Tired mothers, happy and radiant, with arms filled with presents for others at home, filled the automobiles again and settled down for the ride back to the city.

A few hours later saw the end of the trip and the day, and the beginning of another happy memory that will last as long as life will live.

"Whatsoever" Circle of King's Daughters of St. Stephen's Church

Meets first and third Tuesday evening of each month at 7.30.

President—Miss Bertha T. Walshe.
Secretary—Mrs. George T. Townsley.
Treasurer—Miss Anna Taggart.

The first meeting for the season 1927-1928 will be held on Tuesday evening, October 4th, at 7.30, in the Guild Room, on the third floor of the Community House. We will welcome any new members who enjoy sewing, or any other occupation which the Society engages in, in an effort to do "whatsoever" we find is needed, "In His Name."

The Young People's Club

With many thanks to Dr. Grammer for his kindness in giving us a check from the "Outing Fund," the Young People's Club had their summer picnic on July 9th, this year going to Valley Forge by bus. It was a beautiful afternoon and after visiting the chapel and driving around the historic park, they had supper in a little picnic grove in back of the chapel. Leaving for home in the early evening, after having had an interesting and happy time. On September 24th, they had their Fall picnic, going to Atlantic City by bus. The first meeting of the Club will be on October 5th, at 6.30 P. M.

Troop 2, Boy Scouts of America

Since the last issue of the "Parish News" our troop has steadily gone ahead. We held our regular weekly meetings until the last of July, when we disbanded to meet again the 9th of September.

During the summer months 8 new boys were added to our troop. We had six overnight hikes at Camp Briar Hill, which is on the Schuylkill River at Miquon, Pa., where the boys were instructed in handicraft, camping, pioneering, and many other useful subjects. This summer has been a very profitable one for our boys.

Then came the big week, 7 days at Treasure Island, one of the largest camps for Scouts in the country. I cannot begin to tell you what a wonderful place for boys it is.

In the morning the bugle sounds and everybody is up and ready to take a swim. Then the day starts, and is so full of activities and tests, such as nature hikes, signaling, bird study, path finding, first aid, swimming, life saving, fire building, canoeing and instruction in many other activities.

Then comes night, when everyone gathers at the ceremonial grounds and a big bonfire is built, and where all kinds of stunts are engaged in. There one can hear the old as well as the new songs. At 10 P. M. taps are sounded and a happy but tired band of boys tuck themselves in for the night.

Mr. Streaker, one of our troop committeemen, was able to spend a few days with the boys. He took a few pictures of our own Scouts in action, and I hope in the near future you will be able to see them.

I wish at this time to personally thank our Rector and all those who helped to make the outing the success it was, for I am quite sure had it not been for their kindness my boys would have been denied this happy privilege.

The following boys advanced to First Class Rank while in camp: Jack Girogasian, Fred Schmid, Fred Neiman, Robert Beckley.

R. M. Robinson,
Scout Master.

The Sunday School

On Saturday, June 25th, we had our usual annual excursion to Atlantic City, with three cars on the Reading Railroad, full of happy scholars, teachers, friends and parents. Young's Pier was our headquarters. All arrived safely home with grateful feelings to our good church people, who so generously made possible a whole day at the seashore for every one in the Sunday School who could get away.

The next day, Sunday, with the awarding of prizes, the Sunday School happily closed for the summer time. On Sunday morning, September 19th, we reassembled for the fall and winter season. We had a good opening attendance with many teachers present and were happy to greet our new secretary, Miss Josephine Hecker. We immediately set to work to have a big Rally Day on the first Sunday in October, when we expect every teacher in her class, with several new ones and all scholars back at their winter studies.

The Teachers' Institute of the Diocese will take place Monday afternoon and evening, October 3rd, at the Church of the Holy Apostles. We hope as many of our teachers as can, will take advantage of this annual event in the Sunday School activities of our church. An interesting and most instructive program has been arranged.

Thanks are due to our Girls' Friendly Society for giving the Sunday School $50 for a silk banner. With it we were able at our opening session this September to surprise and please the school by disclosing a beautiful silk and gold banner and a fine church flag. Nor must we forget the beautiful cyclorama of drapery which, under the direction of Mr. Kevin and the sponsorship of The Girls' Friendly Society and The Players' Guild, now adorns the platform.

We extend a cordial invitation to our church friends to come and visit the school.

Faithfully yours,
George H. Streaker,
Superintendent.

Vacation School

One of the few Daily Vacation Bible Schools in the city that are under the auspices of the Protestant Episcopal Church, was conducted in St. Stephen's Church Community House this summer during the month of July.

The average attendance each day of the sessions was forty. Pupils were recruited largely from the populous section in the foreign neighborhoods south of the Church, thus contributing another of the many community services St. Stephen's Church provides.

The school this year was under the direction of the Rev. Joseph Clair. He was assisted by Miss Esther Hazlett, a teacher in the primary department of the Sunday School. The sessions were in the morning from 9.30 to 11.30 o'clock and were featured by work in manual training, basketry, hammock making, decorating and sewing. The children were taught juvenile songs and given some religious instruction in the stories of the Bible and in the memorization of selected verses.

The last day of the term saw an outing of the school to the Zoological Gardens, where many had their first experience in Nature study at close range. Graduation exercises took place with the awarding of small prizes to the best students and to those most faithful in attendance.

Each year the personnel of the school largely changes because of the rather limited appeal to certain ages; but the changing enrollment adds a growing influence to the lives of many which otherwise would not have been brightened.

Nuggets of Wisdom

Always leave home with loving words, for they may be thy last.

Kind words are the music of the world. They have a power which seems to be beyond natural causes.—F. W. Faber.

He that taketh up the burden of the fainting, lighteneth his own load; the Almighty will put His arms underneath him, he shall lean upon the Lord.

Let us not be ashamed to be friendly or to show any friendly feeling we may have. Let us be the first to give a friendly sign, to nod first, smile first, speak first, give first, and if such a thing is necessary, forgive first and forget first.—Jarvis A. Wood.

I see not a step before me, as I tread on, another year; but the past is still in God's keeping, the future His mercy shall clear, and what looks dark in the distance may brighten as I draw near.—Mary G. Brainerd.

Yesterday is yours no longer; to-morrow may never be yours; to-day is yours, and in the living present you may stretch forth to the things that are before.—Canon Farrar.

The Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioner:

The question "With whom does time gallop withal?" should have as its answer, with a rector, who writes a monthly letter in his Parish News. It seems to me only the other day that, high on the mountain's back, I wrote my letter for the Parish News; beholding, as I wrote, with that "inner eye," which is not only "the bliss of solitude," but also the telescope of the writer, the congregation seated in St. Stephen's, under our glorious lanterns, with our great organ in the background. This last month has flown swiftly, indeed. Last week I had to attend the regular Fall meeting of the Board of Overseers of Sweet Briar. On the way down I caught a cold, which kept me out of my pulpit one Sunday and confined me to my bed several days; when I had a fine time reading books. One was a book about Ireland by a Roman Catholic writer. The magnet that brought together all its scattered facts and observations was a desire to exalt the Celts and put them at the top. The writer quotes with much approval the remark of a Spanish author, that the Spanish people need not be cast down, if they have not assimilated much modern culture, for it may be that this modern culture is not such a good thing after all. The Irishman feels the same way about the Celts. This is very much the fashion in which the Apaches feel about our American civilization. In the case of the Indians, we recognize it as sheer stupidity and a great obstacle to their elevation. The same holds true of these other stupid efforts of people to exalt themselves over others instead of estimating themselves humbly and endeavoring to learn and improve. The Celt has his gifts, and the Anglo-Saxon has his, as the squirrel that can crack a nut, and the mountain that cannot crack a nut, but bears forests on its back, have respectively their gifts. I have no doubt that Ireland has a contribution to make to the world, but, I do not believe that it will ever make it by seeking to climb the backward path to the ancient Gaelic speech, and to childish medieval modes of thought. It needs to get rid of superstition and magic. The other book that occupied me was the reminiscences of a German physician, who is like Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, in being both an eminent specialist in medicine and a poet and literary man. Indeed, the German is also an artist and a musician. The great admirations of his life seem to have been his own father and the Swedish dramatist Strindberg. The most noticeable feature in this warm-hearted and generous writer, Carl Ludwig Schleich, so cordially appreciative of the gifts of others, and so richly and variously endowed himself, is the lack of the note of moral strenuousness. Aesthetic values, social values, literary values, scientific values, musical values, are all dwelt upon, but about moral values not a word. Indeed, he seems to be somewhat morality-blind. For example, he tells how a certain celebrated clinician committed suicide by taking opium, and remarks that the method was not very original, and did not compare favorably with the clever device of another physician who committed suicide by cutting a vein in his throat so skilfully that it took Virchow's keen eyes to detect that the bleeding had been artificially produced. This was a "more genial" device. What a comment! It reminds me of the remark of an eminent Jewish scholar, when the Russian pogroms against the Jews were being discussed. He said that he did not object to the pogroms on moral or humanitarian grounds; what he objected to was their lack of taste! How absurd and unworthy! It is a great pity when morality is thus removed from its throne, and aesthetic values are given the highest place. Perhaps my German book may disclose other values later on, and certainly the author is a person of marvelous versatility and sweetness of nature—but my feeling as I read, is that Germany needs what Puritanism gave to the non-moral Elizabethan civilization. Look at your "Green" and note what he says about the lack of veracity of Elizabeth and her statesmen. Refinement of moral and religious feeling is lacking when a gifted and poetic person like Dr. Schleich can tell this anecdote about his mother's father, whom he greatly revered and honored. "He was," he writes, "a strong character with Promethean defiance at times. I recall that once after a wind had blown steadily for 14 days, so that his boats could not leave the harbor, and he had thereby incurred considerable pecuniary loss, he took down his rifle in a rage and rushed out into the fields and shot at the weathervane, and then up into the sky." "Grandfather," the little grandson queried, "at whom did you shoot up there?" "At Him," was the grimly muttered reply. Dr. Schleich's father was a complete agnostic. On his tombstone the son had carved, "The end of life, but not of love." Among other things, a book like this shows the great value of the simple life. The numerous intellectual pursuits of the Schleich family would not have been possible had they allowed luxury to sap their energies or waste their time. Germany has much to teach us on these lines. On the other hand, America, with its Puritan traditions, has much to teach Germany. Central Europe needs greater emphasis on moral values. Perhaps that is what the adversity of this great defeat may do for Central Europe. In the darkness of its disasters, the heavenly lights of morality as the guide of nations and individuals may shine out more clearly.

I suppose that every one in the Parish is interested in the Septuagesima Conference which we have held for two years in February. The aggregate attendance each year was about 200. One of the papers of the first Conference was published in the Modern Churchman, the theological review of the English modernists, and Dr. Barton's paper on the Lord's Supper, was published last year both in the Churchman and also in pamphlet form. The influence of these gatherings has been wide-spread. One of the most manifest outgrowths is the meeting of the Liberal Evangelicals in Richmond, this October, at the invitation of the Rector and Vestry of St. Paul's. Dr. Beverly D. Tucker, Jr., the Rector, writes me, about 110 clergy, including four bishops, accepted. This is a splendid gathering, for only the four Virginia dioceses were included in the invitation. I am looking with eagerness for the reports.

Already arrangements are making for our own Conference. It was so successful as a provincial conference, that it is worth while endeavoring to make it of larger significance. So I asked the National Church League, to co-operate with me in conducting the next, and its leaders have consented. As their mouthpiece I invited Bishop Barnes, of Birmingham, to attend our next Conference—our group agreeing to pay all his expenses. We have English backing for our request. When I saw in the paper the controversy, if I may so designate the interchange of letters between the Archbishop of Canterbury and Bishop Barnes, I cabled Bishop Barnes that I wanted him all the more for his outspokenness.

This is the situation in the Church of England in a nutshell. The Church of England enjoys as a Protestant Church the privilege of being the National or Established Church. But there has arisen in the English Church a large school, that is nearly Romish in doctrine—and that insists on being nearly Romish in practice. Now large freedom in doctrine, the National Church has always tolerated; but in practice it has required conformity to the Prayer Book. For years this last requirement has been disregarded. There has been an era of successful law-breaking. The situation is so out of hand, that the bishops propose a new Prayer Book, in which large concessions are made to the lawless Romanizing element. The question arises whether these concessions will satisfy the Romanizers and whether the Bishops who have proven such inefficient disciplinarians will be able to control the ritualistic element from further advances or retrogressions toward Romish usages, and observances. Another difficulty also arises, and that is whether the Church that makes these concessions and authorizes such Romish customs is entitled any longer to be called Protestant, and is the proper home for Protestant clergy. The Archbishop of Canterbury is shocked by the outspoken Protestantism of Bishop Barnes's teaching on the subject of the Sacraments; but the proper subject for his Grace's rebukes are the Romish practices of the Ritualists, in a Protestant Church. Thought and speech the English Church has left free, but conduct it has sought to control. The Archbishop is out of sympathy with his own Church's historic policy, he seems to restrain speech and permits conduct to be uncontrolled. Indeed, he has gone further, he advocates rewarding lawlessness by legalizing many of the lawless usages. I admit that his position is a hard one; the sons of Zeruiah seem too strong for him. But the position of the Protestant clergy is also embarrassing. In the old days they could endure the Romish usages of their ritualistic brethren as personal eccentricities which were clearly without the Church's sanction or approval! But from henceforth Reservation, which is the crux of the controversy, since it supplies the opportunity for adoration of the Elements, will enjoy the approval of the Church. It is no wonder that Bishop Barnes speaks out. The marvel is that more do not interest themselves. For my own part, I am utterly unwilling to say, "such controversy does not interest me. If the Episcopal Church is going to be a halfway house to Rome, let it fill that insignificant role." I love the old Church. I have brought people into its membership. I owe it to the truth and to the people whom I have persuaded to join this Church, to see that it is an efficient organization for the spread of the Kingdom of God. I honor the Ritualist for the courage with which he spreads usages and doctrines that he believes in and I shall seek to emulate his zeal by proclaiming the truth as I understand it, and seeking to develop this Church, as I believe that it ought to be developed. I hope that our next Septuagesima Conference will aid in this great work.

Ernest Hamlin Abbott hits the nail on the head in these words in the "Outlook" of October 26th:

As long as the churches insist upon maintaining theories and views of the universe that are inconsistent with what is accepted as true by those who command the best means for establishing facts, so long will the churches, not only repel the most highly trained minds, but will divert themselves from their real task of spiritual guidance.

What are the questions that are really troubling the world today? They are not questions whether the text of the Bible or any other text is to be accepted as literal statements of fact, whether a minister should be ordained by the laying on of a bishop's hands, whether some explanation of the nature of God devised centuries ago is better than some other explanation, whether one ceremony for admission of a candidate to the Church is better than another ceremony. The real questions are questions concerning the very heart of every-day life. Are we human beings mere machines, without any more moral responsibility than a tree or a dynamo? Is the life of the family to be preserved as a precious thing, or shall it be discarded together with old styles in clothes? Is life to be measured by the things we possess? Is the final answer to life, to daily duties, to the obligations as a citizen, to the relations between husband and wife and between parents and children, to the problems of business, the answer of the cynic? Does goodness or loyalty or reverence mean anything? Has man no better object than to get most out of life as it comes along? Is there a place in modern life for the influence of the life and character of Him whom the Church recognizes as its Lord?

People are searching for answers to these questions. They will go to psychology or anywhere else if they cannot find the answers in the Church.

A National Statesman, the Hon. George W. Wickersham, the Attorney-General in President Taft's Cabinet, has agreed to address the Conference on the duty of the Churches to aid in organizing the world for Peace.

I have always regarded the denial of the existence of Jesus as an absurdity and hardly worth discussion. Still some people do deny it. To meet their propaganda, Dr. Worcester has written a delightful booklet on the subject. He is not only convinced that Jesus lived on earth, but also that He wrought miracles. He has a robust faith. The book is published by the Oxford University Press, American Branch.

Some people have the idea that Prohibition has created lawlessness. One might as well say that the thermometer creates the fever whose presence it reveals. Americans have always been a very lawless people. A recent article in the "Atlantic" pointed out how persistently and shamelessly the laws are broken by automobilists. Another article in the same journal showed how we encourage lawlessness by our legal technicalities, so that only a few law-breakers are punished. We need a new emphasis on the moral obligation of Christian people to obey the law of the land. This notion that every man has a right to decide whether the law is wise before obedience is morally obligating, not only leads to anarchy in government; it also leads to dissoluteness in morals. One of the worse breeders of lawlessness and immorality is undoubtedly salacious and meretricious films. How shall we protect our young people from the contagion that results from familiarity with scenes of immorality and crime? We cannot wait till the state establishes a more efficient Board of Censors. For the sake of this congregation I have subscribed to Marjorie Daw's Review of Motion Pictures. This weekly will be kept on file in our Community House, and anyone who wants to know about the character of a new film can learn the opinion of a discriminating critic by phoning to the Office in the Community House. Marjorie Daw has no advertisements in her little sheet. She appreciates how the receipts from the advertisements control the policy of the newspapers on the subject of moving pictures. She is determined that the American public shall get an unbiased opinion. My friend, Dr. Twombly, who is himself such an authority in this department, has recommended her Review to me, and my personal examination has confirmed his judgment. I hope that the parents of children, and educators, will avail themselves of this service of information, and will make it widely known to their friends.

Marjorie Daw is no prude, but she is an utter disbeliever in the theory that nastiness is necessary or tolerable for the sake of art. Her journal is published in Cleveland, and in spite of the effort of Mr. Hays to silence this independent critic, it has prospered and won a position of recognized authority.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

Miss Elizabeth C. Washington

Wide, indeed, was the circle that was shocked by the news that on Sunday night, October 23rd, Miss Washington had been run down by some unknown automobilist, near St. Martin's Station, Chestnut Hill, and had been carried in an unconscious condition to the Chestnut Hill Hospital, where she lay in unbroken unconsciousness with a number of serious fractures. In St. Stephen's the concern was particularly keen. As treasurer of the Women's United Offering, as the representative of our Auxiliary in the work among the colored people, and for years one of the leaders in the Benevolent Society, Miss Washington had borne many responsibilities, and had endeared herself to all by her gentle consideration for others, and her interest in good causes. She was also at one time one of the visitors of the Burd School.

When I became rector of St. Stephen's, three of the prominent workers in the parish were Miss Henrietta Wilkins, the Secretary of the Girls' Friendly, Miss Harriet Sanders, who taught a class of men in the Sunday School, and Miss Washington, who was one of the chief pillars of "The Female Benevolent Society." They were all cousins, and lived near each other on Locust Street, between 12th and 13th. Miss Wilkins in her home, and Miss Sanders in hers, and Miss Washington across the street from them in the Lincoln Hotel, which was at that time a small hotel, with permanent boarders, like the Clinton to-day. Miss Wilkins was cut off in her prime, one of the most serious losses that the parish has sustained during my ministry. Miss Sanders was prevented for years by invalidism from participating in parish activities, and removed a few years ago to Chestnut Hill. She was not able to attend the funeral, but as I conducted it, I could but think of her as the chief mourner, the life-long friend and relative left behind by this tragic death. It is good to know that she is one of those deeply Christian people, who realize that we cannot understand how God can overrule all these sad results of men's waywardness, and carelessness, but must trust and endure with patience and hope.

It is unnecessary to dwell at any length on Miss Washington's character. She had the responsibility of bearing a world-famous name, and certainly through her it lost nothing of its connotation of purity, high-mindedness, courtesy and sincerity. What higher praise can we give her than to say she set a good example in her day and generation. Her service to the parish, which deserves especial commendation, was the large part that she had in reorganizing the Benevolent Society and starting it upon its useful career of helpful cooperation with the hospitals. The new scheme was the joint product of Miss Washington's and Mrs. Grammer's observations and cogitations; but it was chiefly through Miss Washington's urgency and encouragement, that Mrs. Grammer attempted the reorganization.

It is sad to lose her, but it is better to have her at rest, than to have her linger here in suffering.

She passed from earth on Wednesday morning in her 72nd year.

There was a large attendance of her friends, and a profusion of flowers at her funeral on Friday, October 28th, in the Church that she had so loyally attended and aided. The burial was in the family lot in Laurel Hill.

Years ago we introduced into St. Stephen's, the Duplex Envelope System. It has been an unqualified success. Along with this system, there has also grown up in the Church the system of an every member canvass. Our parishioners are so widely distributed, being stretched out over an area reaching from Wayne on the Main Line, to Haddonfield, New Jersey, that we have never had a thorough every member canvass. The testimony is so overwhelming that such a canvass is of great value, that I should like to have a supper in November, and talk it over with the members of the congregation. We have about 275 envelope takers; most of them are most faithful envelope users. I have not the slightest desire to dictate to anyone what he should give. All that I want to do is to help you to introduce a system into your giving, and to bring home to each member of the Church the duty of doing his or her best for the common cause. I am profoundly interested in spreading the Truth and in not spending my life in propagating superstitions and out-worn fables. But if we are to wait until the Truth should be freed from all admixture of error, we should have to wait till the end of time. Let us imitate the workmen on the walls of Jerusalem in the days of Nehemiah, who were armed with a sword and a trowel. Let us join with Bishop Barnes in his courageous effort to resist the capture of our Church by superstitious usages and false dogmas, and also join with the nation-wide campaign in uniting all the members of the Church in the fellowship of sacrificial giving, not allowing our gifts to be merely emotional responses to occasional appeals, but making our giving a part of our budget, and a systematic and regular expenditure.

Rummage Sale Notice

At the suggestion of Mrs. Grammer, the President of the Benevolent Society, the rummage sale has been postponed until November 17th. By that time it is hoped enough donations will be received to make the sale a success.

Titania's Palace

Titania's Palace was designed by Major Sir Neville Wilkinson, K.C.V.O., and will be shown for the benefit of the children in the Philadelphia Home for Incurables at Gimbel Brothers, from November 21st through December 5th. It is the smallest palace in the world, and took more than twenty years to build. It is believed to be the most educational exhibit ever shown to the public. The whole world was visited to obtain specimens to fill this marvelous dwelling. Tickets, 50 cents; 25 cents for children.

The Woman's Auxiliary

The first meeting of St. Stephen's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary was held October 20th, preceded by a corporate communion service, which was well attended.

There was no speaker at the regular meeting, but the hour was well filled with reports from the delegates to the various mission committees.

The next meeting will be held November 17th.

Diocesan Campaign for Missions and Institutions

October 19, 1927.

Rev. C. E. Grammer, S.T.D.,
1008 Clinton Street,
Philadelphia, Pa.

My dear Dr. Grammer:

The Bishop and Executive Committee of the Diocesan Campaign for Missions and Institutions have arranged to call together on Friday evening, December 2nd, all leaders and members of Parish Teams who participated in the Campaign of November-December last year. This brief notice is sent you with the request that you reserve Friday evening, December 2nd, for this purpose, and that you will also request all members of your Parish Teams to reserve the same date, that they may be present also.

You will recall that at the closing dinner of the Campaign in December of last year, it was unanimously voted by the Parish Teams to assemble a year later to hear the Bishop's report on the work done, and to arrange to solicit from individuals who made a one-year subscription, a renewal of their subscription for 1928.

The dinner meeting on the evening of Friday, December 2nd, will be at the Penn Athletic Club, Eighteenth and Locust Sts. Please be sure to reserve this date and to notify the chairmen, together with each member of the Parish Teams, and to endeavor by personal appeal to secure the presence of all members.

Faithfully yours,
R. L. Montgomery,
Chairman.

The United Thank Offering

The Autumn Conference of parish treasurers of this diocese was held on Wednesday, October 26th, in the Church House.

Mrs. Baker reported that Pennsylvania had on hand $40,012.86 on September 30th. As this triennium is just half over, the women of the Church must put forth renewed effort if they are to equal the offering presented at New Orleans in 1925, when Pennsylvania sent in $86,000, the largest amount from any one state.

An appeal will go out shortly to every woman communicant in this parish and it is earnestly hoped that each one will respond by sending some contributions, large, if possible, small, if necessary, to this women's work for women.

Faithfully yours,
Mary DeHaven Bright,
Treasurer.

The Sunday School

October, with its "Rally Day" and reorganization of the Sunday School, has made it a busy place each Sunday morning. The Scribner series of graded lessons are now in operation. Mr. Kevin has brought in several new teachers from the Deaconess House and is planning to give us the envelope system, with apportionment of our offerings for missions as well as for our expenses, which should prove very helpful.

"The King of Kings," a most wonderfully realistic motion picture, depicting the glowing scenes from the ministry and closing events in the life of The Christ, is being portrayed at the Aldine Theatre, and on Saturday afternoon, October 22nd, all the older scholars, and their teachers, as well as the officers of the school, had the privilege of being present. We were the guests there of our good, kind and generous friend, Mr. Howard Reifsnyder, and we are all very grateful for his kindness in giving us the opportunity of viewing this great picture.

Faithfully yours,
G. H. Streaker,
Superintendent.

The Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

Only one month more and the New Year will be upon us. Let us see whether we can not close the year in fine shape. It is a great achievement to make a good ending; the end you know crowns the work. Starting is easy, but to hold on to the end is the test.

The first resolution that I suggest for the month is to get through with Christmas shopping early, and so lighten the tasks of clerks who are so pressed and rushed and overtaxed at this season.

The next is to remember our Christmas baskets. I do not aim to increase this benefaction. But I do not want those who have received the baskets to be deprived of this help, as long as they need it. We should hate to have families connected with us in any way spend a cheerless Christmas. Let us diffuse happiness and comfort at this joyous time as far as we are able. In brightening Christmas for others, we shall make our own homes radiate with good feeling.

Let me call your attention to the Kalendar of Daily Bible Readings. Those who used the Kalendar realize what a help it has been in introducing system into the devotional life. The Kalendars are on sale in the Vestry room, or in the Community House. I commend them cordially.

On the first Sunday in Advent, when Dr. Schmuck was the preacher for the day, I could but note with pleasure how remarkably well the congregation read the Psalter. Excepting, of course, the Virginia Seminary Chapel, where the conditions are unusual, I do not know of a congregation that joins in the responses more heartily than St. Stephen's. It is a great pleasure to take part in such a hearty service. I do not wonder that my friend Dr. Chorley speaks of this worship at St. Stephen's as unusually uplifting in its heartiness, as well as in its musical excellence.

Mrs. Keable has prepared, at my request, a record of the organizations and numbers using the Community House in two months. This report shows what a large service this building is rendering the public as well as our own parish. Our desire is to reduce somewhat the mortgage on this building every year. The income of our endowment is not available for this purpose, and the reduction of the mortgage and the interest are burdens that must be borne by the congregation. Our Christmas offering will be devoted to this object.

The Thanksgiving offering to the Episcopal Hospital is over $740. This will also count on the Expectation. With such a lift we ought to reach the amount of $5000 accepted by the Vestry; indeed, I have good hope that we shall pass it considerably, and prove better than our word.

One of the best ways to observe this season sacred to friendship and kindness is to send messages to friends, who are cherished in memory, but have fallen out of our lives. Let us pick up these dropped stitches. The Lawrence brothers, who were so famous in the history of British India, were talking together one day about their school life in the North of Ireland, and their old schoolmaster. They agreed that he had meant much to them, and wondered whether they had meant to him all that they should have signified. Sir Henry Lawrence was then the chief commissioner of the Punjaub, and John was his associate. So they gladdened the heart of the old man by a letter from "his boys in distant India," from a region not down on the school map. The dominie was delighted to receive this sign of remembrance from the distant days of his activity, for he was by that time retired, and from that remote region. The Lawrences gloated with rapture over his reply, and his naive wonder that "his boys" had risen to such posts of responsibility and large service. The story is beautifully told in the Life of Lord Lawrence, by S. Bosworth Smith, my favorite biography of a man of action. Sir Henry Lawrence was immortalized by his gallant defence of Lucknow, where he fell, and Lord Lawrence was the first Commoner, who became Viceroy of India. His bust is in Westminster Abbey. He looks the part that he played, as the chief civilian support of the Army of India in the Mutiny.

"His face
Deep scars of thunder had entrenched and care
Sat on his faded cheek, but under brows
Of dauntless courage."

Both of these heroes exemplified Bayard Taylor's fine line:

"The bravest are the tenderest,
The loving are the daring."

They united courage, gratitude and courtesy. Where these are conjoined we have that fine product, a chivalrous nature. Surely what the world needs sadly is more chivalry. We must not be content to be honest, we must be men of honor; not merely just but also generous and magnanimous; not merely conventionally polite and correct, but aglow with the communicative warmth of kindliness, and consideration for others. Let us try to spread this contagion of kindliness in our homes, in our circle of friends, among all that we meet, especially during this season of Peace and Good Will.

I have just read the history of the early life of John Morley, and the biography of James Bryce. Both Viscounts of great ability, who achieved the highest distinction in letters, and in Parliament; it is interesting to compare them—Morley, a thorough agnostic, but a man of great moral earnestness, and Bryce, a liberal Presbyterian, who advocated teaching the elements of Christianity in State schools; Morley, English, and Bryce, Scotch-Irish; Morley, the great writer, and Bryce, the profound scholar. Morley, more occupied with abstractions, in spite of his close affinities with the Positive philosophers, and Bryce, more interested in the concrete, with the globe, and all who inhabit it, with institutions and laws; Morley, with great fondness for society, and aristocratic distinctions, and Bryce with a more passionate love of nature, and American modes of life and thought; both great believers in democracy, but with instructive differences.

I do not know how Morley stood on the great American experiment of Prohibition, though I do not believe that he had any sympathy with it; there are far too many references in his life to the delights of fine port, and the excellence of wine. But here is the judgment of Bryce, in a letter to President Eliot, dated February 5, 1920: "The extinction of intoxicating drinks all over a continent is one of the most surprising, and, on the whole, most encouraging phenomena of our time. There is no apparent likelihood of any such change here, but then, nobody believed twenty years ago in America that a prohibition bill could have been carried. We are anxiously waiting to see whether it is sufficiently enforced. If it is, the triumph of a sense of the general good over individual propensities will be well vindicated."

Later on he adds, "America has higher ideals and more conscientiousness than any Old World people, and can do more to set an example of disinterested philanthropy."

It is amazing to me that people who claim to be idealists, do not appreciate that Prohibition is a great idealistic experiment. Who can say that the law has been given a fair chance, when former bartenders are made enforcement agents? Let enforcement of the law be put in the hands of the friends of the law and taken out of politics by being put under civil service. Give us time. This lawless traffic will ultimately destroy itself. The traffickers will cheat one another and kill off their customers. The little nations in the League of Nations are insistent that the control of alcohol is an international problem like the control of narcotics. Dr. Wurtz, in the Carnegie Institute of Technology, states flatly: "Liquor is in a class with opium. Both should be rooted out, moral suasion having failed and moral and ethical standards being unequal to the temptation."

The greatest issue before the American people is this question: Shall the will of the people Constitutionally and legally expressed be the supreme law of the land or shall it be nullified by the failure of officials to enforce the law, they have sworn to execute, and by unwillingness of the people, who wish to drink, to obey the law, they have solemnly pledged themselves to obey? What is the difference between Republicans and Democrats, compared to the difference between those who are loyal to the law and those who are not? This is the great political and moral issue before our people. No one has a moral right to agitate for modification of the Volstead Act and the Constitution, unless he is sound on the fundamental principle, that the will of the majority legally expressed and approved as Constitutional by the Supreme Court, is entitled to our obedience. Alteration is one thing and nullification is another.

By the way, the husband of one of my parishioners told me this interesting story which shows how bootlegging, like smuggling, contains the seeds of destruction in itself.

A friend of his asked my informant whom I will call Mr. Integrity, why he did not get some of the easy money that could be procured by bootlegging. "No danger," said the friend, whom I will name after the fashion of Bunyan, Mr. Anything-to-make-money, "Every one is doing it, and you can soon make your pile."

"No," replied Mr. Integrity, "I don't want any such gains, I couldn't sleep soundly if I resorted to such methods."

"Very foolish, very foolish," said Mr. Anything-to-make-money, as he walked away.

Months passed before they met again. Then Mr. Anything-to-make-money looked very shabby and seemed very depressed. Mr. Integrity greeted him heartily and inquired sympathetically after the cause of his manifest depression. "I have had hard luck," was the reply, "I had paid several thousand dollars for a load of liquor which was to be delivered to me at a certain cross-roads where I was to meet the seller's van. I hired a truck to take me there. After we had loaded the stuff on the truck I ordered its driver to take the load and myself to my storehouse. 'It is time to stop this nonsense right now,' the driver answered, pulling a pistol and pointing it to me. 'All this liquor is now mine,' and with that he drove away." So does bootlegger destroy bootlegger.

After a long illness most patiently borne, Mrs. Alice Peirson Doriss died on November 17th, at her apartments in the Gladstone. About nine years ago she moved to West Philadelphia from Baltimore, her native city, where she was at one time a parishioner of my father in St. Peter's, and at once associated herself at St. Stephen's on account of that tie. Greatly will she be missed by her friends. Her wonderful sweetness and serenity shed around her "something of an angel's light" whose radiance grew brighter as her body wasted. Surely for her to die was gain.

At its November meeting the St. Stephen's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary decided to solicit contributions for a special gift to the United Offering of the women as a memorial of Miss Elizabeth C. Washington, who was the treasurer of this fund in St. Stephen's, and deeply interested in the missionary work of our church. Contributions should be sent to Miss Susan P. Thackara, 5536 Spruce Street, or to the Community House.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

The Woman's Auxiliary

Dr. Schmuck and Miss Sibson were the speakers at the November meeting of St. Stephen's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary. They talked about mission work in China.

Miss Sibson was the founder of a free public school of Trinity Church in Wuchang. Five teachers were employed at the school at the time it was temporarily closed last year.

Both speakers urged the members to keep up their support of the missionaries whose work is discontinued for the present, owing to the general conditions in China; and also to support the native clergy who are trying to carry on the work.

The next meeting of the Auxiliary will be held December 15th.

Beulah E. Hollar, Secretary.

The Community House

The congregation will be interested to know that during the month of October 69 meetings were held in the Community House with an approximate attendance of 1,526; and in November, 67 meetings; attendance, 1,793. The Sunday School is not included in either month. Ninety-two dollars has been paid to the treasurer: $61.00 association dues; $8.00 hot water charge; $25.00 auditorium privileges.

Young People's Club

Will have its annual Fair on Thursday, December 15th, afternoon and evening. Fancy and useful articles will be for sale and a buffet supper will be served. Donations of any kind, and the presence of our friends at the Fair will be most appreciated. The proceeds from the Fair will be used for the Community House and to give Christmas happiness to poor children.

Motion Picture Review

Marjorie Daw's Weekly Review of Motion Pictures, is kept on file in the office and it is hoped members and friends of the Parish will avail themselves of this opportunity of ascertaining the character of a new film—by calling the office and learning the opinion of a discriminating critic, "Marjorie Daw."

I see not a step before me,
As I tread on, another year;
But the past is still in God's keeping,
The future His mercy shall clear,
And what looks dark in the distance
May brighten as I draw near.

—Mary G. Brainerd.

NOTES

New bishop for Japan. The great diocese of Hokkaido, the northern island of Japan, with half the island of Saghalien, 45,000 square miles, with a million and a half population, has been without a bishop of its own for ten years. On All Saints' Day in Canterbury Cathedral, the Rev. Gordon Walsh, who has been working in Japan since 1914, was to be consecrated for this difficult field where the needs and opportunities for prayer and men and money are simply enormous.

An English missionary writes from Tokyo: "This last year has been the most wonderful since I came to Japan twenty-six years ago. I have never known so much response. The Church is alive and keen, so enquirers come in, and the only difficulty is to know how to teach them all."

During the past ten years 175,000 Jews have entered the Christian Church, according to a Church of England report on Missions to the Jews.

At St. Timothy's Hospital, Cape Mount, Liberia, still without a doctor, about 400 treatments a month are given by the nurses.

The former chief medicine man among the Arapaho Indians at Windy River, Wyoming, was baptized last year at St. Michael's Mission.

In spite of the floods and other discouragement, Terry, Mississippi, a station in the Bolton rural field, recently secured $3,000 needed for a much desired parish house to serve the community.

Iolani School for boys, in Honolulu, has started the new year in its long awaited, desperately needed new quarters. Not including fifteen more immigrant students to come directly from the Orient, the enrolment had reached 278, divided racially as follows: Chinese, 116; Japanese, 111; part Hawaiian, 25; Korean, 13; white (i. e., "Caucasian") 7; Filipino, 2; Portuguese, 4. Born in Hawaii, 176.

The Woman's Auxiliary of St. Luke's Church, Puerta de Tierra, Porto Rico, has been working on a Christmas box to send to a mountain mission in Tennessee.

Abednego Mangobe, of Motalava, was a native school teacher on a little Melanesian Island. After his death last summer, this was written of him in an Australian paper: "He had no pride and he never lost his temper. He was always humble and had the greatest respect for his work. In his death he suffered no pain; his only remark was, 'It is the dawn. I shall rest peacefully.'"

Notes from Brazil are scarce. The paper of the Brazilian Episcopal Church, Estandarte Christao, brings word that a Church Hospital Association has been formed to work for the establishment of a long desired church hospital. All the communicants of the Brazilian Church are members of this Association. An administrative committee, of which the Bishop is head, is elected by the Annual Convention.

The Church of the Redemption in Sao Gabriel has been consecrated.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Church of the Crucified, at Bage, held an entertainment for the benefit of the diocesan paper.—The Rev. C. R. Ramos, who has been in charge of Trinity Church, Meyer, Rio de Janeiro, has been ordained to the priesthood.—Work is progressing in Agnus Dei Mission, Colonia, in Uruguay. The treasurer of the mission has presented a piece of land, well located, for the future church.—Work has been started at a new station, Cascata, out from Pelotus, where a service held in the home of one of the people was attended by 180 persons, and 15 children were baptized.

A financial statement from the Philippines, as of September 15th, shows that St. Luke's Church, Manila, the Church of the Resurrection and Easter School, Baguio, and the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, Sagada (including Besao), have already considerably overpaid their missionary apportionment for 1927.

SELECTIONS

The vitality of an idea depends far less on the numbers of people who hold it than on the quality of the heart and brain of the people who hold it.

The forms of faith change, but the spirit of faith which is the Christmas spirit is immortal amid its endless vicissitudes. At a crisis of change, faith is weakened for the majority; for the majority it may seem to be dead. It is conserved, however, in the hearts of the great and in the hearts of the simple. The great are hidden from the majority, but the simple are seen of all men, and them we encourage, often without knowing why, to be the depositories of that which we can not ourselves guard, but which we dimly feel to be indispensable to our safety.

The secret of goodwill lies in the sympathetic exercise of the imagination.

It is impossible that the exercise of imagination about a person should not result in goodwill toward that person.

It is the supreme social exercise, for it is the giving of oneself in the most intimate and complete sense. It is the suspension of one's individuality in favor of another. It establishes a new attitude of mind, which, though it may all lead to specific social acts, is more valuable than any specific act, for it is ceaselessly translating itself into demeanor.

Yesterday is yours no longer; tomorrow may never be yours; today is yours, and in the living present, you may stretch forth to the things that are before.—Canon Farrar.

NUGGETS OF WISDOM

Always leave home with loving words, for they may be thy last.

Kind words are the music of the world. They have a power which seems to be beyond natural causes.—F. W. Faber.

He that taketh up the burden of the fainting,
Lighteneth his own load;
The Almighty will put His arms underneath him,
He shall lean upon the Lord.

Let us not be ashamed to be friendly or to show any friendly feeling we may have. Let us be the first to give a friendly sign, to nod first, smile first, speak first, give first, and if such a thing is necessary, forgive first and forget first.—Jarvis A. Wood.

He who waits to do a great deal of good at once, will never do any.—Dr. Johnson.

The secret of getting on is getting started.

Man considereth the deeds, but God weigheth the intentions.—Thomas à Kempis.

Search thine own heart, what paineth thee in others, in thyself may be; all dust is frail; all flesh is weak; be thou the true man thou dost seek.—Whittier.

The great secret of making the labor of life easy is to do each duty every day.—Marsten.

There is nothing that costs so little and goes so far as courtesy.

No one is useless in this world who lightens the burdens of some one else.—Dickens.

A total of 114 baskets was given out as compared with 103 baskets last year.

Respectfully submitted,

Rector's Letter

My dear Parishioners:

When the first Sunday in the month falls on the first day of January, New Year's greetings are in order. May this be a year full of courageous effort, and large achievement. Whatever struggles may fall to our lot, may they never disturb our inward tranquillity. Whatever fights we have to wage, may our hearts never cease to be sanctuaries of devotion and praise. Let us not make happiness our goal; let our aim be to do our duty, to be aggressive fighters for righteousness, to live a courageous, adventurous life, subordinating self to great causes and high aims, resolved to find our happiness in so living.

The first task of the New Year for your Rector will be the delivery of the Bohlen Lectures. The theme will be "Things That Remain." Beginning on Tuesday, January 10th, the lectures will be delivered on Tuesday and Thursday for three successive weeks, six lectures in all. The time will be 4.45 P. M.; the place, the Parish House of Holy Trinity Church. The subject will be some basic beliefs that remain, in spite of the new methods of science, and the new views of the Bible. The first lecture is important since it will explain the platform on which the discussions will be conducted. They are open to the public. Ultimately the lectures, increased by three more chapters, will be published in book form.

This month the Dramatic Club of St. Stephen's will play Jerome K. Jerome's famous play, "The Passing of the Third Floor Back." I hope that there will be a fine attendance. The play is of supreme merit, and is one of the finest examples of a spiritual message from the stage.

The parish banquet on December 1st was a great success. Two hundred and thirty-six people sat down together, and the time passed most delightfully, singing favorite hymns in between the courses. Dr. Schmuck made a forcible presentation and committees were appointed to visit in the various sections of the city where our people live. There seems a general resolve to give more to the diocesan and general Church purposes, that is to the pocket outside the Parish. Wouldn't it be splendid if we could raise our expectation to $7,000? It is good to know that we passed our $5,000 pledge in 1927. Would that more people could be persuaded to accept the envelopes and to use them faithfully. They are a great bond. Those who do not use them would be surprised, if they knew how little and sporadically they give compared to the envelope-users. Many a little makes a mickle, applies here. Ten cents more a Sunday from 200 people would amount to $1,000 more in a year.

The Parish did so splendidly in the Diocesan Campaign that I cannot say that I expect much from this effort to get those who made a single contribution to renew their gift. Of course, it is fine when this can be done. Only by sacrificial giving can our hospitals and charities be supported. They are the glory of our Nation, not merely because they relieve suffering but also because they are the products of self-sacrifice. This last is, in truth, their highest glory.

The chief Lenten arrangements have been made. We shall have our well-tried favorites, Dr. Melish, and Bishop Cook, and two new prophets, Dr. Luke White, of Montclair, and the Rev. Dr. Walter Capers, of Jackson, Miss., the brother of Bishop Capers, of West Texas, who was at one time the rector of the Holy Apostles Church, in this city. The non-Episcopal preacher will be Professor Rufus Jones, of Haverford.

Some tribute must be paid here to the Rev. Murray Dewart. I only learned of his death on December 4th, through the return of a letter addressed to him. He had promised to come to us at Lent, and I was looking forward to his co-operation in the Septuagesima Conference. By his death our Church loses one of its most interesting and inspiring preachers, and one of its sweetest and bravest spirits. He was a rare man, so human, and yet so idealistic, so friendly and yet so outspoken, so true a Christian and so manifest a prophet. We may be sure that such a spirit, zealous, beneficent, firm, is serving elsewhere.

In Septuagesima Week, on Tuesday and Wednesday, February 7th and 8th, the annual Conference of Liberals will be held. The success of the former Conferences has encouraged us to attempt something a little bolder. The Conference this year will be conducted under the auspices of the National Church League, your Rector, the Rev. Dr. George Calvert Carter, and Dean Alan Van Meter, acting as the committee in charge, with patrons drawn from the prominent Liberal clergy of this section, and representative men as far South as Louisiana, and as far West as St. Louis. Subject to some modifications, and additions, the programme will be:

Tuesday, in the Community House, 2 P. M. The Apostles' Creed, as the baptismal creed, shall it be simplified or interpreted? The Rev. Robert Norwood, D.D., D.C.L.

Tuesday, in the Church, 8 P. M. The Church and International Relations. Hon. George W. Wickersham.

The Church and Economic Relations. Rev. Dr. Howard Melish.

Wednesday, in the Church, 11 A. M., after the Communion service. The Nicene Creed and the Catholic Theology: Can Their Values be Preserved by Other Forms? Canon Adye Prichard, Cathedral St. John the Divine.

Luncheon in the Community House for all registered clerical attendants.

In the Church, at 2 P. M. The Thirty-Nine Articles: What Purpose Do They Serve? Professor Sperry, of Syracuse University.

The laity will be invited to all the discussions, but for obvious reasons it is impossible to make the invitation to the lunch so inclusive and only the registered clergy will be invited to that function. Discussion will be limited to the clergy who register and to especially invited laity.

Great exertions were made to secure the presence of Bishop Barnes, of Birmingham, or some other eminent English leader of thought, and spiritual life. But with the best will in the world on the part of our English friends to help us, it was impossible to make arrangements at such short notice as we gave them. It is hoped that we may be more successful next year. If this conference equals the former two, we may confidently hope in 1929 to have a conference of national appeal which will be prepared for by various provincial conferences.

We ought to plan great things, for the defeat of the new Prayer Book in the House of Commons gives Protestantism and Liberalism new vitality in our Church. By that action the laity of England informed the Bishops and other clergy of the Church of England that they would not tolerate any official recognition of Romish practices and doctrine in the national Church. When the Commons were appealed to to deliver the Church of England from the lawlessness of the Ritualists by a new book, the hard-headed legislators refused to conciliate lawlessness by rewarding it. "How," asked Sir William Joynson Hicks, pointedly, "Can we believe that the Bishop of London will under the new book be able to control the ritualistic clergy, with whom he himself has filled his diocese?" Transubstantiation was the burning article in the English Reformation, and this new Prayer Book by authorizing reservation paved the way for official recognition of a localized Presence in the elements. Sir John Simon argued forcibly that if these changes amount to anything worth while, they are a repudiation of the Reformation position. So the Commons of England rejected them by a good majority. The Church Assembly must now ask itself the question, whether it will not qualify the English Church to be the official church of Protestant England, by being what the Prayer Book makes it officially, an outspokenly Protestant Church.

A comprehensive Church is one thing, and a Church that seeks to combine irreconcilable positions is another. I do not believe that Protestantism and Romanism can be helpfully combined. Their union is like the mixing of milk and water, only a spoiling of elements. Excellent separately but tasteless and poor when united. The Roman Church has discipline and order. Protestantism has freedom and variety. But Ritualism has neither discipline nor freedom. It is lawless and yet under the dominion of the dead past. It is a disruptive element in our Church, forming a Church within a Church and driving out of our Communion the Protestant laity. Anglo-Catholicism like Ultramontanism is the foe and not the partner, nor complement of Liberalism and Comprehension.

The Liberals who think that they can combine logical Sacerdotalists and Liberals in one Church ought to ponder the experience of Cardinal Newman, a man of genius, who tried the Via Media between Romanism and Protestantism and discovered that it was a logical impossibility. Of course, illogical Sacerdotalists can live side-by-side with Protestants, and I am not trying to drive such people out of our Church to their logical goal. But I am convinced that it is our duty to point out that Sacerdotalism is inconsistent with the freedom of the Gospel and the teaching of Galatians, and can be proven by exegesis, by analysis and by experience to be a corruption of the religion of Jesus. But all will in one form or another come up in our Septuagesima Conference.

The following telegram was sent on December 16th, the day after Parliament's action, to the Bishop of Birmingham, by the National Church League: "Doctor Barnes . . . Bishopcroft, Harborne, Birmingham, England: . . . The National Church League of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, through its Executive Committee and for its members, congratulates you and the Bishop of Norwich upon the great work you have done and are doing for the Church of England and for our Church. The Church of England must remain Protestant if she is to retain the confidence of the Anglo-Saxon race. We rejoice that the Deposited Book has been rejected by Parliament. Please send copy of this cable to the Bishop of Norwich. . . . Signed, Alexander G. Cummins, Secretary. . . ."

The editorials in the secular papers that have fallen under my eye show that the issue in regard to the new Prayer Book in England is not properly understood, except in the editorial in the New York Times, which also had the best report of the debate in the House of Commons. The point of view of the American newspapers is that the Church ought to be free to mould its own life. This is, of course, true. But another point is that a Protestant Nation naturally desires that the National Church should be Protestant. The Church of England must give up her position as an Establishment and a large portion of her endowments, if she ceases to be Protestant. That is the significance of this action by Parliament. I do not believe in an Established Church in the abstract, but for sentimental and historical reasons I shrink from seeing the Church of England disestablished, as it will be if it becomes the representative of the religion of the minority. It was as the religion of the minority that the Church was disestablished in Ireland and Wales. It is because the Church of England is officially Protestant, that the Establishment holds on in Protestant England. The doom of the Establishment is sealed as soon as the Church of England ceases to be officially Protestant. Her doom as an influential Church is also certain, as soon as she separates herself decisively from the Protestant world, to be ground, as a tertium quid between the upper and lower millstones of Romanism and Protestantism. This last statement holds true also of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Protestant Churches of the same modes of government and kindred tempers are certain to get together ultimately, as they have done in Canada. Unless we can form some alliance with Liberal Protestantism the future of our Church is dark indeed. Yet the Protestant Episcopal Church has so many splendid traditions that we must continue to hope that the laity will see to it, that Sacerdotalism does not overwhelm her and that our Church continues to make her valuable contributions to religion and life.

How many things there are that I should like to write about in this letter; how many problems there are to be solved; problems international of organizing the world for peace; problems National of inculcating greater obedience to law; problems domestic of conserving and improving the family; problems ecclesiastical, parochial and social. How interesting life is if one doesn't drift, but seeks to react wisely, to modify conditions, to harmonize one's life, to know the Truth, and to walk with God, and do the right. May this be our spirit in 1928.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

The Bohlen Lectures

The Bohlen Lectures this year will be delivered by Dr. Grammer. The place will be Holy Trinity Parish House on 20th Street near Walnut. The time will be 4.45, and the theme, "Things That Remain."

The first lecture will be on Tuesday, January 10th, and the subsequent lectures will be on Thursday, January 12th; Tuesday, January 17th; Thursday, January 19th; Tuesday, January 24th, and Thursday, January 26th. Six lectures in all.

The public is invited and especially the congregation of St. Stephen's.

The House of Laity in the Assembly of the Church of England, in the debate over the proposed revision of the English Prayer Book, passed the following resolution:

"That, while the House believes that the great majority of the laity are satisfied with the present service of the Holy Communion, the House will nevertheless agree to the insertion by the Bishops in the Prayer Book of one alternative form containing provision for vestments and reservation for the sick only if, in their opinion, this will promote peace and order in the Church."

Extracts from the speech of Sir W. Joynson-Hicks before the House of Commons, as reported by the London Times, on the proposal to accept a new Prayer Book:

"We are asked to trust the Bishops. Therein lies the difficulty. It is not a question of trust. It is a question of how so many of them can possibly deal with these offences, when they have connived at their existence for twenty years past, and from time to time have appointed men whom they knew to be guilty of these illegalities, to offices in the Church. When I was a witness before the Royal Commission, the Archbishop asked: 'Do you want wholesale prosecutions in the Church?' I said, 'No.' To be asked what would you suggest? I said, 'that is a suggestion I have been making for years past.' There is a vast amount of patronage in the hands of the Archbishops and Bishops. Why appoint to livings in the Church of England men who are guilty of practices and doctrines which the Royal Commission, the late Archbishop Temple, the Archbishop of York declared to be not merely illegal in law but against the doctrine of the Church?

"The Bishop of London has filled the Diocese of London with these men and how can he turn around in a fortnight's time and say to these men: 'You must give up incense, give up adoration, and all these practices?' He knows what the answer will be. A certain canon made a definite stand in St. Paul's Cathedral the other day, and then went back from St. Paul's and conducted an illegal service in his own church.

"I have here a list of the services in Canon Bullock Webster's Church at St. Michael's Paternoster Royal: 'Mass, Mass, Low Mass, High Mass, Requiem Mass for the Departed, Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary.' At the entrance of the Church, or rather, outside a small chapel of the Church is the statement: 'The Presence Chamber of Jesus Christ. For in this chapel is reserved the Blessed Sacrament ready with the Holy Anointing Oil in an aumbry close by to provide comfort for the sick and dying souls in their extremity.'

"The patron of that Church is the Archbishop. The man who appoints to this living is the Archbishop."

N. B.—The Bishops now say: "Give up your Protestantism because we cannot enforce it upon our clergy."

The Woman's Auxiliary

The December meeting of St. Stephen's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary had many reports of things the little band of faithful workers have done this last month.

It warms the heart this time of year to know that a mission worker in North Dakota, where it is 22 degrees below zero, has fifty dollars for a new overcoat; that Miss Roberts has ten dollars for postage and expressage for Christmas packages of books and toys sent to all corners of our country.

Miss Sibson acknowledged ten dollars for her work in China. Miss Thackara has ninety dollars towards the special offering as a memorial to Miss Washington for the United Thank Offering, and Miss Bright has received one hundred and eighteen dollars to date from twenty-nine contributors for the Thank Offering.

The next meeting of the Auxiliary will be held January 19th, and the hour has been changed to 10.30.

Beulah E. Hollar,
Secretary.

Mothers' Meeting Sale

A sale of useful and fancy articles, cakes, candies and groceries for the benefit of the Community House will be held in the Parish House on Thursday, January 26th, from 3 P. M. to 9 P. M., by the Mothers' Meeting of St. Stephen's Church.

It is hoped the members of the congregation will co-operate by sending contributions, and also by attending the sale.

Please send contributions to the Community House, marked Mothers' Meeting.

Young People's Club

The Annual Bazaar of the Young People's Club was held on Thursday afternoon and evening, December 15th, and proved to be very successful. We hope to clear $300, and wish to express our sincere thanks to our friends of the congregation for their kind assistance and support.

Fortieth Anniversary

The Fortieth Anniversary of St. Stephen's, Philadelphia, Branch of the Girls' Friendly Society was celebrated on November 28, 1927, with a dinner to all former members, present members, Diocesan Officers, and the Clergy and Vestrymen of the Parish, making 130 guests.

Mrs. David D. Wood acted as Toastmistress.

Greeting of welcome was extended by Dr. Carl E. Grammer, who has been Rector of the Parish for more than half of the forty years of the organization. He referred to studying trees this past summer, and said that in his studies he had found that trees transplanted from European soil to American soil seemed to grow more vigorously in America than American species. Dr. Grammer likened the trees to the Girls' Friendly Society, which was brought here from England, and, like the trees, it was planted in tree boxes, which were the Episcopal Churches, and it had become, like the trees, very vigorous in its growth in American soil. He spoke of friendship, and what it meant to be a friend. Friendship involves an exercise of the imagination, putting yourself in the other person's place, in order to realize his viewpoint. The G. F. S. is a great developer of the imagination.

Miss Maule, Diocesan President, extended her greetings and congratulations for the loyalty exhibited in the past, and brought to us the message of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the G. F. S., held in Boston, of "Looking Forward" and "Widening Horizons," and hoped we would continue in the good work and influence.

A history of the accomplishments of the G. F. S. in Pennsylvania from its origin in May, 1886, was read by Miss Mary Neilson, and was most interesting, especially as so many of St. Stephen's former associates and branch secretaries were referred to therein.

A brief résumé of the work of St. Stephen's Branch was read by Mrs. Wood.

Mrs. Lucas, the last Branch President, paid a beautiful tribute to a member—Florence Sherrard—who has passed on to a higher and nobler life. The "Special Effort," which has meant so much to the Branch financially, was inspired and worked out so successfully by Miss Sherrard, and her influence and example will long be felt by the members.

The addresses and history were intermingled with hearty singing of songs from the Girls' Friendly Song Book, which made the evening a very enjoyable one for all present.

The tables were beautifully decorated with flowers and ferns and forty large candles gave light to the gathering, while small candle favors at each place added light, before the electric lights were turned on.

In going over the membership it is interesting to note that there are 47 members who have come regularly for over 20 years, 30 members who have come for over 25 years, and 9 members who have come regularly for 35 years.

Mrs. Louis Hall is the only Associate who has continued in service since the organization in 1887, and we were happy to have her in the place of honor. Sarah Gardiner is the only member who has continued since the organization, but she was unable to attend the dinner as she is crippled with rheumatism and can not get about, but she sent her greetings to the members, who remembered her with flowers.

To the Envelope Users

May I make a few suggestions for the coming year, which will be a great help to me?

1. In sending in money to cover a period of Sundays, will you please send the envelopes with the money, and it would be a great help if you would mark the amount to be given on the face of one of the envelopes.

2. Please do not paste the envelopes together as it is apt to destroy the dates.

3. Will everyone try to "catch up" with their envelopes every three months?

Ella Headman,
Treasurer.

The Daily Noon Services

In accord with annual custom, we beg to submit a brief report on the "Daily Noon Services" in "Old St. Stephen's," which will soon round out their sixth year.

The meetings have continued with regularity and promptness and with average attendance around 75. Words of appreciation for this "Open Door" continue to reach us; the following testimony being selected from among others as a beautiful example of things going on throughout the year, yet unheralded and unknown:

Hammonton, N. J., November 15, 1927.

To the Committee on Noon-Day Services:

"Having received much help and encouragement at your noon meetings, I am glad to so inform you. I have gone in, tired in body and discouraged, but left refreshed and rejoicing in a free salvation through our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. Being 70 years of age, I cannot attend as often as I would like.

"I must speak of a beautiful experience on one occasion; I had come early as I love to do for meditation, and as I was admiring the scene where the beloved disciple, John, is leaning on the dear Saviour's bosom, I thought what a privilege that all who are His can do the same in spirit and find sweet rest. Just then the grand organ pealed forth softly and sweetly:

"'Safe in the arms of Jesus,
Safe on His gentle breast,
There by His love overshadowing,
Sweetly my soul shall rest.'

"The Holy Spirit seemed to direct the organist and affording a charm to the scene that was indeed inspiring. How sweet to be in His keeping, for in Him is life eternal.

"Yours in Christ's love,
"Signed, A. F. W. Rublack."

Since the early part of the current year, Tuesday's services have been under the direction of the Women's Association, with a view to interesting the young women of near-by business places, including, of course, the public generally; and on Wednesdays, St. Stephen's continues their midweek service as usual.

Faithfully Yours,
Committee on
"Daily Noon Services of the Christian Business Men's League.

NUGGETS OF WISDOM

Greatly begin! Though thou have time but for a line, be that sublime—not failure, but low aim is crime.—Lowell.

Rise up, O men of God,
Have done with lesser things;
Give heart and mind and soul and strength
To serve the King of Kings.
—William P. Merrill.

Christianity is the spirit and quality of life breathed into people from fellowship with Jesus.—Harry Emerson Fosdick.

Follow with rev'rent steps the great example
Of Him whose holy work was "doing good";
So shall the wide earth seem our Father's Temple,
Each loving life a psalm of gratitude.
—Whittier.

This is true greatness: To serve unnoticed and to work unseen.

ELLA HEADMAN, Treasurer.

God has made the universe so mysteriously that when sorrow and misery are shared, they decrease, but when joy and love are shared, they increase.—Dr. Takamatsu, of Kyoto.

The Rector's Letter

My Dear Parishioners:

The great events of February will be first the Septuagesima Conference on the 7th and 8th, the beginning of Lent on February 22nd, and the gathering together of the Confirmation Class on Friday nights in the Vestry Room, at 8.15 P. M.

This will be our third Septuagesima Conference. We have aimed to enlarge its appeal by placing it under the auspices of the Executive Committee of the National Church League, and a group of prominent Liberal Clergy, who have consented to act as patrons. The subjects discussed are of great importance to the Liberal element in our Church. On Tuesday night the session will be in the Church and the discussion of the relation of the Church to International and Economic issues will be of great popular interest. On the first point, the International Relations, the speaker will be the Hon. Geo. W. Wickersham, Attorney General of the United States in President Taft's Cabinet, and a member of the International Commission to codify International Law. . . . On the second point, the speaker will be Dr. Howard Melish, of Brooklyn. I particularly urge the congregation to attend this Tuesday night meeting, February 7th, at 8 P. M. They will be welcome at all the sessions. On Wednesday St. Stephen's Church will entertain the registered attendants of the Conference at lunch in the Community House. If the Conference goes off as well as its predecessors, I think that we may look forward to having some distinguished English theologians with us in 1929, and something like a National gathering of Liberals. We failed to secure such a visitor this year, because we did not begin soon enough.

Don't allow yourself to be frightened by the cry that controversies do harm to the cause of religion. "Let truth and falsehood grapple, who ever knew truth to be put to the worst in a free and open encounter?" The worst danger is that religion be ignored or overlooked; accepted or rejected supinely, and never have its claims and functions, its foundations and aims adequately and earnestly examined.

The list of Lenten speakers is published elsewhere. The two new names are, Dr. Rufus Jones, who needs no introduction to this community, and will certainly bring us a helpful message, and Dr. Walter B. Capers, who is the brother of the present Bishop of West Texas, the sometime rector of the Holy Apostles. Dr. Capers is a South Carolinian and possesses the gifts of oratory for which the Palmetto State has long been famous. We were to have had Dr. Murray Dewart with us, but he has been called to service in other realms. Greatly will he be missed in our Conference and in our Lenten Services. He was a true messenger of God, anointed with the oil of gladness, and proclaiming by his life as well as by word the gospel of love. It is an inspiration to have had such a man in our pulpit, and he counted so upon meeting us once more. How incomplete and futile life would be, if death could end all for such a radiant spirit.

I hope that the Congregation will remember that these services at St. Stephen's have a special claim to their presence, if they can attend Noon-day Services.

Confirmation season is always a time when the minister and the congregation ought to ask themselves the question, what are we doing, to gather in the unattached, unshepherded, unfriended? No man can live to himself. We need the help of kindred spirits. Especially is this true in religion. The world is so much with us, with its standards and its appraisals, with its subtle temptations, and its rude domineerings, that we need the support of like-minded people to cling to spiritual values in spite of these blusterings and allurements. The confirmation invitation is "Come with us and we will do thee good." "Confess your allegiance to God, openly to the world, and learn peace and strength that faith and courage give." The classes will meet on Friday weekly at 8.15 P. M., in the Parish House until Confirmation, which will take place on Sunday morning, March 25th.

Especial acknowledgment is due to the fine work of St. Stephen's Players' Guild, in giving Jerome K. Jerome's celebrated and difficult play, "The Passing of the Third Floor Back." The rendition was very fine —restrained, and yet interpretative. Especial mention must be made of Mr. Joseph C. Fox's splendid impersonation of the Passing Visitor. He had much the longest dialogue to learn, and the key part in the piece, and splendidly did he fulfil the demands of a difficult part. He had the most difficult role, but all participants deserve high praise and took their parts admirably. The play was the high-water mark of dramatic achievement at St. Stephen's. The organization of this guild was due to Mr. Kevin, and special acknowledgment must be made of the indebtedness that the parish is under to him for these two uplifting performances. What a splendid world this would be, if only there were more of the spirit of truth and love, which the lodger in the third floor back brought to that boarding house. Here is the cast list:

In the interval between Acts 2 and 3, Miss Muriel Falkingham played the violin, being accompanied by Mr. Edward S. Barnes.

I hope that the Guild may give us another play before the summer dispersion, and may be able to give this play elsewhere. It deserves repetition.

Though I have spoken from the Chancel of the great loss that our Church has sustained in the death of Louise Betts Edwards, some tribute must be paid her in this paper, for the sake of those who were not present on the Sunday immediately after her funeral. While Miss Edwards was not able, on account of her strenuous business life, as the head for these last years of an important advertising department in Wanamaker's great store, to take an active part in the work of the Church, she was, nevertheless, one of the great helpers of the parish activities. No one was more responsive to appeals, in generous gifts, no one loved St. Stephen's with a more single-hearted devotion. Her connection with the Church went back to Dr. McConnell's days. All the rectors were enshrined in her loyal and affectionate heart. She was one of those friends, who cannot bear to sit silent and allow a friend's deficiencies to be pointed out, without coming to their defence, by pointing out the redeeming traits, if she could not deny the defect. She was an unusual combination of love of freedom, and strong loyalty. During my family's absence in Europe in the Winter of 1910 and 1911, I sat at the same table with Miss Edwards and her mother, Mrs. Holman, in Miss Colston's boarding house, the Cambridge, on Spruce street. We made a household, so to speak, for the season. Mrs. Holman was one of the first women to take up architecture as a profession, a person of vivid intelligence, wide reading, and strong personality. She and Louise were united with the closest bonds of intellectual affinity, and strong affection. Never have I known a daughter more devoted, and absorbed in the welfare of a Mother. Louise had early shown unusual creative gifts, both in verse and in novel writing. If she had had leisure, she could, I am sure, have written some verses or stories that would have endured. Her insights were remarkably clear, and she was able to express with crystalline clearness, all the nuances and shades of meaning of her thought. She has long been included in "Who's Who in America." Unfortunately the ill-health of her mother, and the demands of business, made it impossible for her to give to literature her main strength, and as her responsibilities increased she did less and less in that field. The death of her mother several years ago was a great shock from which she never fully recovered. With that loss, life for her began to darken, and sad as it was for us who loved her, to lose her, we recognize that she welcomed death as a great release.

Few except those who came in daily contact with her, can miss her more than I. She belonged to me, as a rector, not merely by canon-law. She was of my spiritual flock. We spoke the same language, felt in the same way about the Episcopal Church, and found comfort and solace in the same truths. When she was in Church, and she was a faithful attendant when her health and duties permitted, I had an auditor, who responded eagerly to the message, that it was vouchsafed to me to deliver. Her spiritual sympathy, and her friendship were sources of power. Greatly shall I miss her, so loyal, so loving, so gifted, so true, so staunch a follower of Jesus, so profound a believer in God and Immortality and Truth. We may well thank God, for having given St. Stephen's the honor of possessing such a member.

I hope that her verses may be collected in a memorial volume. She had much of the quality of Mrs. Browning in her fluency and wealth of emotion. It is a pity that she did not write hymns, for she had it in her, in her swift directness and warmth of emotion, to write beautiful hymns.

Here is the hymn she wrote, at my request, to the metre of "Come, My Soul, Thou Must Be Waking," that it might be sung to Selden Miller's noble tune. The words sing themselves. I wish that it were printed in our hymnal.

Christian soul, the times are calling,
Altars falling,
Men's hearts failing them for fear;
Unto thee their eyes are turning,
Spirits yearning
For the word of faith and cheer.

Christian soul! great deeds await thee,
Consecrate thee,
To the task that nearest lies;
Question not that God will use thee,
Nor refuse thee
Blessing on thy sacrifice.

Walk thou not as one benighted,
Nor affrighted;
Where the foolish see no God,
Thine to glimpse the fiery column,
Thine the solemn
Comfort of His staff and rod!

—Louise Betts Edwards.

I do not think that I am wrong in holding that this next hymn is also worthy of a place in the hymnology for use at anniversaries of churches.

Lord, we love Thy habitation, and our hearts rise to Thee,
In this place of consecration, as the tides seek the sea.
What a mighty congregation, what a psalmody sublime,
Should our ancient church assemble all it blessed within their time!

In this shrine of sacred beauty, where we kneel, thousands knelt.
Faith and service, love and duty, in their breasts burning dwelt.
As we reap the hallowed harvest of their travail and their tears,
God of sons, as well as fathers, may we sow for future years!

With a city's turmoil seething round its walls, grave and gray,
Let us keep it living, breathing; we must watch; we must pray;
To futurity bequeathing truths eternal, newly read,
And an house of holy worship, where the hungry soul is fed.

As we have received, O Master, may we give, freely give;
For a service fuller, vaster, nobly toil, nobly live.
Let our box of alabaster shed its fragrance far abroad;
Make us worthy of the keeping of the courts of our Lord! Amen.

—Louise Betts Edwards.

The grace she wrote for the Burd School runs thus:

Lord, bless the bread we break this day,
And bless the faith in which we pray.
For grace to grow and grace to live,
And grace, like Thine, to love and give.

Surely this is hard to equal as a grace for little children to sing. Whatever verse I turn out is, I know, compared to hers like a manufactured article beside a growing plant, but she loved verse so much that I have been moved to write this sonnet to her memory. I like to think that she would be gratified by an effort to praise her in a medium she loved so well.

LOUISE BETTS EDWARDS

By law mysterious hath nature bound
  Fragility with charm. Slender and small
  The birds, whose wild and warbling notes please all,
In harmonies orchestral sweetest sound

The fragile strings. And Beauty's favorite seat
  Is not on rock-piled hills nor landscape wide,
  But 'mid the flowers, where she loves to hide
In secret cell—a hermit-like retreat.

Such Barrett-Browning's form, where poesy
  So richly dwelt. Such slightness, too, was thine,
  Louise. Small toiler, brave, thou wast a shrine
Of genius, too, a-glow with loyalty
And love, equipped with logic's keen-edged sword,
With insight swift and bright, revealing word.

One of my activities this past month has been cooperating in the campaign for a Greater Woman's Medical College. Our present medical school, exclusively for women, is the first of its kind in the world, and it is still the only school of its kind in the Western Hemisphere. It is a great honor to Philadelphia to possess such an institution. The eminent Dr. Chevalier Jackson vouches for it as a school of the first rank, with graduates of proven efficiency. Not only does it turn out excellent practitioners, it also opens careers to female physicians as teachers and investigators. Unfortunately, it is miserably equipped. So they are attempting to raise an endowment of a million dollars. All the clubs of women, and all societies of women would do well, if they would follow the example of the St. Stephen's Branch of the Girls' Friendly and St. Stephen's King's Daughters, both of which made generous contributions. In state institutions, girls' schools, women physicians are most efficient, in some cases they are required by law. Even greater is the demand for them in the mission field. No co-educational medical college gives women the welcome or the opportunity they have in this Philadelphia college for women only.

Cordially yours
Carl E. Grammer

Mrs. Grammer will be at home, 1008 Clinton Street, after 3 o'clock on Tuesday afternoons in February.

Benevolent Society

Miss Ewing, after many years of efficient service as the Vice-President and Director of the Benevolent Society, has resigned, and the members have elected her Honorary Vice-President.

I need not say how grateful this arrangement is to me. If the inner forces of the Church during my rectorship were revealed, a large place would be given to Hunter Ewing and Miss Ewing. Mr. Cleeman had been the Accounting Warden so long that people felt as if a tower had fallen down when he died. When I appealed to Mr. Ewing to take the place, he resigned the position of Accounting Warden that he held at the Church of the Redeemer to take this new responsibility. Never can I forget his helpfulness at that crisis. In the same spirit Miss Ewing came to the assistance of Mrs. Grammer in the Benevolent. Like Sister, and like Brother.

An Excellent Record

The Expectation agreed on for 1927 was $5,000. That was to be St. Stephen's contribution for the work of the Church outside the Parish for missions—Diocesan, Domestic and Foreign.

The report of Mr. Benjamin West Frazier, the Diocesan Treasurer, is before me. St. Stephen's gave in 1927: for maintenance, $5,468.96; specials, $520.00—within a few dollars of $6,000. In addition to this, we are giving our annual contribution to the great Diocesan Campaign and paying our assessments for the support of the Diocesan machinery. This is, of course, what we ought to do, and there is no reason for boasting. Still it is a record that a downtown Church need not be ashamed of, and as there are people who are never so happy as when comparing the present unfavorably with the past, I think it worth while emphasizing this excellent result.

I hope that we shall do better next year. Never, I am sure in all its history, was St. Stephen's a greater moral force than it is to-day, never was it more democratic and hospitable, never had it so many activities, never had it anything like the number of devotional services. These are great days for the Parish, if we see things in their right values.

IN PRAISE OF CHRISTMAS

I love the joyous Christmas-tide
  Which, like a rose begirt with thorns,
  Blossoms so sweet amid the storms—
A heart's-ease by a glacier's side;

When happy bells ring out their chimes
  And Winter old outbraves young May;
  When darkest night brings brightest day,
And solemn Church has jolly mimes;

When warmth within, in home and heart,
  Outvies the cold of earth and sky,
  And Brotherhood in God on high
Unites, whom earth's worm-fences part;

When children, steeped in nursery lore
  Of Santa Claus and deer-drawn sled,
  Are wild with mingled hope and dread
And sleepless half the night before;

When all forgot, except the need
  That on this day good-will should reign,
  Fond parents their resources drain,
To show their love by generous deed;

When greetings speed o'er sea and land,
  From Southern Cross to Polar star,
  And draw together near and far,
By loving word and clasping hand.

O happy feast of Solstice drear,
  Whose gifts are sent no ends to gain,
  But fall like Heaven's impartial rain
On good and bad, on far and near.

O sacred feast, whose Star's blest light
  Shines high to guide the sage and meek,
  Who, 'mid our wild confusions, seek
To walk with God and do the right.

C. E. G.

Strolling on the outermost foothills of Parnassus, I picked up this flower—perhaps it is a weed—but I hope that it may serve to assure you of my best wishes for

A Merry Christmas and Happy New Year

The Woman's Auxiliary

Miss Elizabeth Howland, of St. Mary's School for Indian girls at Springfield, S. D., was the speaker at the January meeting of St. Stephen's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary.

This school is in Bishop Burlison's district. The thirty-seven pupils, ranging from ten to eighteen years of age, do all the work of the institution.

Each month their work is changed to a different routine, so that they may be taught every line of work in the making of a home.

During Lent last year these girls made eighty-eight dollars for their mite boxes. Most of it was earned by sewing.

The sum of ten dollars was given to the school by St. Stephen's.

The next meeting will be held February 16th, at ten thirty.

BEULAH E. HOLLAR,
Secretary.

Boy Scouts of America, Troop 2

Our first dinner which was given last month turned out to be very successful, and we take this opportunity to thank Mr. Fisher, a friend of the Rector's, and also our good friend Mr. Reifsnyder, for their kindness. Fifteen boys were present together with Dr. Grammer and the Troop Committee. The prizes which were given for the best All Around Scouting during the year were awarded to Scouts Fred Neimann, Jack Girogasian and Fred Schmid, all of whom have duly earned them.

On Friday, January 6th, we advanced our Junior Assistant Scout-Master, Frank J. McKenna, to Assistant Scout-Master, an office which he earned through his hard and earnest work with the troop.

Our troop is now operating under the Patrol System, and we are working hard in order to have every boy a First Class Scout. Fred Neimann and Jack Girogasian went before the First Class Review Board last month and came out successful in every test.

An Inter-District contest having been started, every troop in the district will have a chance to compete for a silver loving cup, which will be awarded to the best troop in the district.

In March our troop will celebrate its first anniversary. An open meeting will be held, and we extend an invitation to all to attend. The date will be announced later.
